SPORTS.

From the mountains to the sea, Maine sports venues have played host to youth, amateur, national, international, university-level, and professional-level sports. In 2016 we're excited to once again welcome bowling enthusiasts to the three-day Professional Bowlers Association league championship tournament as well as athletes from across the US to the annual Lobsterman Triathlon, named one of the top ten races in the country.

Welcome to Maine.

Maine and sports—it's a natural fit. With its diversity of terrain and changing climate, Maine is a destination fortunate to have an array of distinct, unique four-season sports activities. Maine has the space to hold large competitions and the services to ensure they run smoothly. From marathons & triathlons, to cycling and golf, to motor sports, sailing regattas and much more, the state's natural resources allow for the widest range of sporting events.

While visiting, your delegates may want to catch one of the region's semi-pro teams in a home game. Consider taking a family member or corporate client to cheer on the Red Claws, Portland's basketball affiliate of the Boston Celtics. Or bring a group to the bleachers of Hadlock Field to take in a Portland Sea Dogs game and watch the Red Sox AA affiliate as they "play ball!"

Greater Portland is geared up for the excitement of organized sports and our convention team is eager to help you navigate the logistics of hosting a major league event in Maine. Find out more about Maine's fit for your sporting event at MaineSportsCommission.com—we have the resources to make your sporting event a slam dunk.

"Maine was a fantastic host for Tough Mudder. The community of Westbrook and the Maine Sports Commission were incredibly supportive of our mission, and the Portland CVB was instrumental in securing hotels for the thousands of participants who traveled to the region." — Kate Fitzpatrick, Tough Mudder

METRO PORTLAND.

Seascapes and cityscapes blend harmoniously in Portland, perched on a peninsula, jutting out into island-studded Casco Bay. Within a 20-minute radius of Maine's southern metropolitan hub, you'll find a variety of landscapes and towns to explore.

Welcome to Maine.

In Scarborough, your attendees can enjoy a stroll on a sandy beach or a team-building canoe trip through a salt marsh. Westbrook's Performing Arts Center is a state-of-the-art venue minutes from downtown Portland in a burgeoning arts and tech riverfront town. Grab an authentic lobster roll and photograph renowned Portland Head Light while watching surf crash upon Cape Elizabeth's rocky coast. The state's largest retail center is located in South Portland, near the airport and several hotel and conference centers. Freeport entices travelers to find fabulous outlet bargains, but your group can also experience active adventures there with L.L.Bean's Outdoor Discovery School.

In Portland, older architecture blends gracefully with the new as you stroll along the working waterfront or the cobblestone streets of the Old Port section of town. Portland is easy to navigate by foot, taxi or bus. Small parks and squares dot the landscape, offering comfortable respite for urban explorers. Intriguing shops and cozy coffee and teahouses beckon to passersby. Harbor cruises, historic buildings, and galleries nestle along the waterfront.

On a stroll through the Old Port, one of the country's more successful warehouse revitalization efforts, you'll hear the squall of gulls and the low moan of bell buoys as you watch fishermen unloading their daily catch. Portland's waterfront is still very much a working port, an integral and thriving part of the local economy. Underlying the latest tech, fashion, and culinary scene is a natural authenticity and a deep sense of continuity. With sophisticated style and artistic sensibilities, Portland is never-the-less unpretentious and welcoming.

GOING OUT.

Don't be fooled by Portland's small-town flavor—you'll find a diversity and sophistication of cultural, historic and entertainment offerings typically encountered in much larger metropolitan regions. Be sure to leave some time on the itinerary for your attendees to experience and explore our sights and attractions.

Welcome to Maine.

Portland, the cultural hub of northern New England, is home to professional theater and dance troupes, a fabulous art museum, and its own opera company and symphony orchestra. Historic homes and maritime museums honor the past's legacy and bestow an appreciation for how a long and fruitful association with the sea continues to shape the region today.

The region's culinary scene is also bustling. The national press has caught on to the fact that you can't walk down the street in Portland without bumping into several ways to treat your taste buds. Maine lobster continues to have a devoted following and a lobster and clambake with all the fixings, on the beach or other setting, can add that extra excitement that your delegates will long be talking about. In addition to the freshest of seafood, a smorgasbord of culinary tastes is on offer in a wide variety of casual to elegant venues. Greater Portland's microbrew movement is also thriving; locally brewed beer is served at most restaurants and pubs, and tour companies will drive you to sample drinks from Maine's local breweries, distilleries, and wineries.

“Having our event in Maine brought in a greater number of attendees than we've had in the past. Maine is a bucket-list destination for many, and its picturesque fall foliage, friendly locals, and trendy food scene created an ideal experience for our participants from ‘far away’.”

ADVENTURE.

When we say business meets adventure, we mean it—since Maine is one of the nation’s great outdoor playgrounds, you may want to combine your business meeting or convention with an exhilarating recreational outing. Or let your delegates discover their own adventure; just knowing what’s available to them is likely to make them more eager to attend your event. Whenever you come, a dazzling variety of activities await.

Welcome to Maine.

The Western Lakes and Mountains region offers superb downhill skiing, snowmobiling and rafting, while most other outdoor activities are easily accessible in Greater Portland. You can paddle gently in a canoe through the state’s largest salt marsh in Scarborough or take in a panoramic view of brilliant foliage on a fall hike up Bradbury Mountain in Pownal. Maine Audubon sanctuaries in Portland, Falmouth and Freeport are the ideal place for bird watchers to roam while golfers will find excellent country and coastal links, some ranked within the top courses in the nation.

Biking and kayaking are two of the most popular outdoor activities that can be done as a group, and experienced guides are available to lead your group in both. Elegant schooners will sail your party down the bay for a close-up view of forts and lighthouses. Or you can don rubber gloves and haul traps with a Maine lobsterman. Try ice-fishing or skating on Sebago Lake where the ice goes on for miles...

From golfing to deep-sea fishing, we’ll help you find the perfect outdoor activities for your group. Or you may simply want to enjoy the views as you conduct business amid a natural backdrop conducive to productivity and clear thinking.

“We had a great conference in Portland with attendance 20% above average. Attendees enjoyed all of the great restaurants in Portland and many came in early or stayed after to do day trips throughout Maine. It was truly a wonderful conference—thank you for all your assistance and suggestions.”

SEASONS.

New England is blessed to have four seasons that each brings its own distinct pleasures. The clear, crisp days of autumn give way to winter's frosty elegance while spring's thaw is accompanied by new growth and brilliant floral hues. Summer is chock-a-block full of activities and also a time to unwind by the lake or on the beach, cooled by a salty sea breeze.

Welcome to Maine.

Your delegates will want to take advantage of the seasonal flavors on tap when they're here. Curling up by a winter's fire, rafting during a spring high-water release, picking apples, sailing on the bay—there's always something special to do to make the most of the time you've chosen to meet in Maine.

Throughout the summer, the skies fill with the sounds of outdoor concerts. A host of annual festivals celebrate everything from Maine performers and artisans, to the bounty of autumn's harvest, to the delights of winter. If the family is along, there's plenty to keep children actively entertained: baseball, hockey and basketball games, a children's museum and planetarium, ice-skating and rollerblading, parks and wildlife. Maine is a safe and comfortable destination where delegates often combine a family vacation with business travel. If you are looking to mix pleasure with business, hold your next meeting in Maine. You may run out of time, but never things to do.

“Maine was chosen by a group of 55 agricultural farmers and ranchers in Texas for its innovative approach to agriculture. We were impressed with their spirit of community and found the residents to be friendly, out-going, and eager to share their heritage. And everywhere we stayed and ate was amazing—the restaurants treated the group like royalty. From attendee evaluations of the week, Maine hit a home run with this group!”
