Left: Nigella as she appears on TV's At My Table

The Nigella effect

Domestic goddess Nigella Lawson has hit the headlines in more ways than one since her new TV series At My Table aired - and all to the good of the housewares industry! In addition to numerous column inches about her dressing gown (from 100 Stars) and the fact she uses a sprialiser to make chips, it seems that cooks everywhere are lusting after her kitchen appliances too. (Apparently the products she uses are her own, to include a waffle iron, Nordic Ware bundt tins and Mason Cash bowls.)
An article in The Times in November, by journalist Jessie Hewitson, revealed that Lakeland reported that sales of waffle makers were up by 30% week-on-week after Nigella used them on TV, with copper accessories up by 170% in October compared to the previous month.

The article also highlighted that a website has been launched which is dedicated to sourcing items used by celebrity chefs. Apparently, the six most popular items bought in the past six months have been Mason Cash's Hacienda range featuring grey and orange mixing bowls.
Along with Nigella, other celebrity chefs who are continuing to influence housewares sales are, according to The Times, Jamie Oliver and Paul Hollywood's bakeware for KitchenCraft.

Morrisons launches own brand cookware

Best known as a food retailer, Morrisons has upped its game on the non-food front, launching a massive 1,500 product strong own brand collection that spans cookware, homewares and stationery.
Available in its bricks and mortar stores as well as online, the new collection, which has been developed from scratch over the last 15 months, includes Morrisons' signature 'thoughtful details' which has proved successful on its Nutmeg clothing range.

TOP STORY

Working together for the homeless

Inset: Among those who took part in the recent Wok 1000 event were busy women chefs Howard Bradley, Desam, Sarah and Alan Wood of Trevor Museum and Joanne Harter, Harrod.

At the end of October, over 200 volunteers got together to feed some of London's homeless as part of the annual charity event, Wok for 1000. The event was held in London's Borough Market and hosted by celebrity chef Jeremy Pang, who founded the School of Wok in 2009. Desam International was in attendance with a selection of guests including Delicious Magazine, indie retailer Trevor Mottram and Harrod. A team of chefs from the School of Wok were on hand to teach and advise the volunteers on how to create three Asian dishes: waste less pork wontons, leftover vegetable leeks and a Thai green chicken curry.
Along with being keen to contribute to the good cause and getting their hands dirty in the messy task of wonton making, Desam was proud to supply the woks, cleavers and chopping boards.
"This event has now become a major part of Desam's CSR (Corporate Social Responsibility) programme, and we thoroughly enjoy it," commented Desam director Roger Morgan-Grenville. "It provides a sustainable way of getting more good food to London's homeless, and provides a blueprint for other towns and cities. It's important now, more than ever, to start giving back as recent findings have revealed that since 2010 the number of homeless people in London has doubled."

At the event, Jeremy said he got his inspiration to feed the homeless from seeing people standing on the streets during a trip to the Philippines.
"At the beginning, we struggled to give our food to charities due to public safety and hygiene," he explained, "so a big part of our ethos is to give surplus food to the right places and Plan Zheroes" is ideal for us as the charity is small and close to what we do."
At the end of the event, after the quota of packaged meals had been met, staff and volunteers sat down to share a meal and sample the dishes that they had created. Over 1,000 meals were delivered to charities and organisations across London, feeding those in need.
"Plan Zheroes is a small charity that is run through a social network between food businesses and charities that ensure that the food reaches those most in need. All profits from ticket sales went to the charity who work towards achieving zero food waste and hunger."

Prince Charles pays a historic visit to Middleport Pottery

At the end of November, Prince Charles visited Burleigh's home at Middleport Pottery in Stoke-on-Trent, to officially open newly renovated historic gems and visit Clay College.
The Prince, who formally opened Clay College and met tenants of the craft workshops, also unveiled plaques to commemorate the opening of the Pottery's Hidden Bath House, the renovation of the Steam Engine which once powered production of Burleigh, and the historic narrowboat The Dane.
He met up with Burleigh staff and was presented with a Calco jug by Alison Howell, a design graduate who has worked with Burleigh to protect the pottery's unique tissue decorating techniques. (The iconic Calco design will be celebrating its 50th anniversary at Burleigh in the Spring).

Above: HRH Prince Charles chats with staff at Burleigh, Middleport Pottery, in Stoke-on-Trent.

Prince Charles is United Kingdom Historic Buildings Preservation Trust's (UKHBPT) founding patron, with the Trust acquiring the site in 2011. Subsequently, UKHBPT has made considerable investment in making the home of Burleigh a thriving tourist attraction and a hub of craftsmanship.

Commemorating the Royal Engagement

One of the first company's off the starting blocks to produce commemorative mugs for the Royal nuptials is Dunoon, based in Stoke-on-Trent. "We speculated some months ago that Prince Harry and Meghan were due to be engaged so had our designers draw up artwork ready for the big announcement," confirms Dunoon's sales director Peter Smith. "This proved to be a good move as emails were flying in from many of our customers within hours of the announcement, not least our retailers in the US. We were able to answer immediately with images of the mugs we intend to produce." Adds Peter: "Being a UK manufacturer we are always well placed to react to demands of the commemorative market."

THE ULTIMATE BAKING BUNDLE

Mason Cash Innovative Kitchen Utensils are your helping hand in the kitchen. Each tool has been designed with multi-functionality and comfort in mind. The stainless steel Balloon Whisk has a handy reamer on the handle for adding citrus flavours to bakes and dinners. The Pastry Brush is great for basting meat or pastry and also has a handy fork on one end; great for beating eggs when glazing pastry, but also comes in handy when crimping pastry. The Bakers Measuring Spoon and Jar Scraper is made of solid wood and is ideal for beating and stirring your bakes. It has a 1tbsp, 1tsp and 1/2tsp measuring guide, as well as a silicone jar scraper and spatula on the handle. The Multi-Function Spatula has both a large and small spatula – useful when scraping large bowls and pans clean and also for frosting cakes and spreading batter. The Mason Cash Colour Mix Mixing Bowl in Powder Pink is a stylish addition to any kitchen, whilst maintaining the famous form and function of a Mason Cash Mixing Bowl.

Christmas food special

Sprouts can be delicious (really)

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

Roast liver's squashed brussels with chorizo and raisins

Preheat oven to 180C/gas 4. Wash 1kg of Brussels sprouts, clicking off outer leaves. Cook for 8 min in a boiling salted water, then drain. Squeeze 150g raw higher-quality chorizo out of its skin. Heat 100g of olive oil. On the hob, fry sprouts on medium heat for 6 min, until you can smell the oil. Then add 100g of packed chestnuts, strip in the middle 2 sprigs of fresh rosemary and about 1 tsp. Tip in the sprouts and a splash of sherry vinegar. Flatten the sprouts with a rolling pin so they suck up more oil. Cook for 25 min, or until golden. Season to perfection, and serve.

5-10 min. When hot, remove from the oven and add the carrots and parsnips. Drizzle over the honey and a good splash of water. Season with salt and pepper and add the thyme sprigs (if using).
 2 Give the carrots and parsnips a good toss to make sure they are evenly coated in the oil and honey, then place in the oven and roast for 30 min, giving them a good stir halfway through. You want the vegetables to be cooked through and lightly caramelised, but still retain some bite.
 Glizz's Season's Eatings by Gizzi Erskine (Mitchell Beazley, £25)

Anna Hansen's ginger and chilli carrots and parsnips

Serves 6
Ingredients
 6 sweet carrots
 1 piece of fresh ginger, thumb-sized, finely chopped
 1/2 green chilli, chopped
 4 tsp extra-virgin olive oil
 6 parsnips
 1 tsp black mustard seeds
 1/2 tsp ground turmeric
 1 handful fresh curry leaves

Method
 1 Preheat the oven to 180C/gas 4.
 2 Quarter the carrots lengthways and toss in a roasting dish with the ginger, chilli and 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, making sure the carrots are well coated. Bake in the oven for 35 min. Turn them over occasionally to ensure an even, golden-brown finish.
 3 Quarter the parsnips lengthways and remove the cores if they are woody. Combine them with the mustard seeds, turmeric, curry leaves

HARTNETT

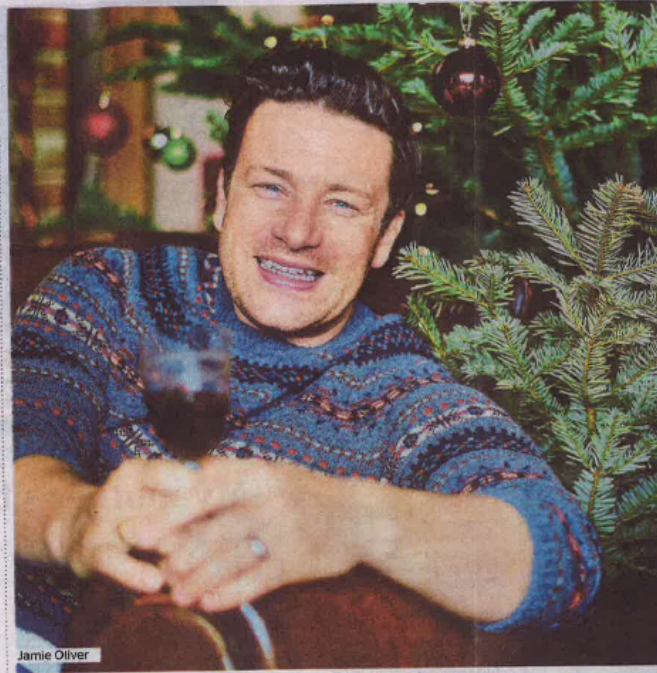

Preparation is relatively simple. First, preheat the oven to 180C/gas 4. Fry the sprouts in a pan, add a generous amount of double cream to just cover the sprouts and cook them down over a low heat until just done.

BRIDGE

Roast sprouts with bacon and onions. First, fry the bacon and onions, then cut the sprouts in half and toss them in a wok. This way it keeps them crunchy, and it means they will be light, green and tasty. Then, for added flavour, splash with soy sauce.

POTATOES AND PARSNIPS

Jamie Oliver

Rachel Khoo

Instead of the traditional red cabbage, I like to use a mandolin or very sharp knife to make crisp shavings, which I dress in a peppery olive oil with a squeeze of lemon and a generous pinch of salt and a handful of finely chopped dill. It's fresh, it's crunchy and done in 5 min.

ROAST POTATOES

Mark Hix

My gran always used to make effortless and perfect roast potatoes. At the time I never questioned why they were so good, but now I know it was down to two things. First was her choice of potatoes – floury, not waxy, is best for roast potatoes, so buy varieties such as King Edward, maris piper or desire. Second was her method of cooking them. If you want to make perfect fluffy roast potatoes, pre-boil them to the point where they're nearly cooked, drain them, return them to the pan, put the lid on and give them a shake so the edges get roughed up. Then put them in the oven and roast for 20-25 min, until golden. Put it

For amazing gravy, reduce red wine until it is slightly sticky, in advance. Then add it to the bottom of the roasting tin once you have taken the turkey out, then squeeze some fresh orange juice and add orange peel at the end.

HAM

Trine Hahnemann's spiced quince ham

Serves 8
Ingredients
 For the ham
 3 pieces of star anise
 2 red chillies, chopped
 2 tsp black peppercorns
 1 head of garlic
 2 onions, halved
 300g root ginger, chopped
 3 tsp coarse sea salt
 5kg piece leg of pork, bone in
 For the glaze
 100-200ml quince syrup
 10 pieces of star anise
 For the quince syrup
 1kg quinces
 Juice of 1 lemon
 400g caster sugar per 1 litre of quince juice

Method

- 1 First make the quince syrup. Rinse the quinces, remove their stalks and blossom ends and chop roughly. Put in a saucepan with the lemon juice and enough water to cover and bring to a boil. Reduce the heat, cover and simmer for about 1 hour, until very soft and tender.
- 2 Pour the quinces into a jelly bag suspended over a bowl and leave to drain overnight. Don't press the bag or the syrup will be cloudy.
- 3 The next day measure the juice, add the sugar and bring to a boil, stirring until the sugar dissolves. Let it boil, uncovered, over a medium heat, until it becomes a thick syrup, stirring often. Carefully skim off any scum. Pour the syrup into a sterilised bottle and seal. Stored in a dark, cool place, this will keep for months.
- 4 Mix all the ingredients for the ham in a very large pot, adding enough water to cover. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer for 2-2½ hours, or until the temperature in the centre of the ham reads 55C on a meat thermometer. Leave the ham in the liquid until it has cooled completely, then take it out and set aside for up to two days, covered and chilled, until you want to roast it.
- 5 On the day of serving, preheat the oven to 180C/gas 4. Remove the rind from the ham, leaving the fat behind, and cut a diamond pattern in the fat. Brush the quince syrup over the ham and press a star anise into 10 of the diamonds. Place in a roasting tray and roast for 20-25 min, until golden. Put it them off in the oven. They'll absorb some of the turkey juices so will be absolutely delicious, and also have great colour.

GRAVY

Mark Hix's easy-peasy gravy

I've often seen people scrambling around at the last minute trying to make gravy, because they want the bones or cooking residue to flavour it – but actually you can very cleverly get ahead of the game. Rather like in our restaurants (hixrestaurants.co.uk), I like to make my base gravy ahead of time and then just deglaze the cooking pan with wine and add the base gravy to the roasting pan. This takes about 5 min and you know that your gravy is going to taste good because you've done the long simmering in advance. Simply roast some bones or chicken wings in the oven with root vegetables. Then add homemade stock to the roasting tray to deglaze the pan. Strain it – this is your base gravy. My Christmas Day gravy is in the freezer – and has been for a month or so.

TOMMY'S CHRISTMAS COOKING TIPS

It's all about prep — it sounds boring, and I'm a last-minute person, but when it comes to cooking at Christmas, preparation makes life so much easier.

- Make as much as you can in advance. You can make a luxurious chicken liver pâté with port and brandy, then freeze it, which means your starter is done.
- I make my french dressing in Kilner jars and keep them in the cupboard, so I always have a dressing made for the salad.
- I love the ice-cream machine that I got as a present a couple of years ago. You can so easily have a dark chocolate and tequila ice cream ready to bring out.
- You can do delicious things with bought puff pastry — just make sure it's made with butter, not vegetable fat.

PICKLING ESSENTIALS

Ready to start pickling and preserving? Your essential kit should include the fol

THE VINEGAR

Pickles are only as good as the vinegar you use. For successful pickling, it's crucial to use a good quality vinegar with at least 5% acetic acid – as all Aspall vinegars are.

There are no hard and fast rules about which type of vinegar to use (e.g. cyder or wine vinegar) but try to pick the one you think will best set off the veg or fruit you are preserving, while bearing in mind the colour it will create. White wine vinegar has a mild flavour but gives a better appearance to light coloured pickles, such as those made from cauliflower or cucumber. Red wine vinegar, on the other hand, is better for pickled beetroot or red cabbage.

Malt vinegar was the traditional pickling vinegar but is losing popularity as others gain favour. Cyder vinegar, with its apple base, is particularly good for sweet pickles as well as spicy recipes. Balsamic vinegar can also be used half and half with wine or cyder vinegar to create sweet, deeply flavoured pickles.

THE JARS

Pickling connoisseurs choose ultra-reliable Kilner Preserving Jars with airtight rubber sealing rings and vinegar-proof lids. The go-to jar from the 'home of preserving', this is our first choice for all pickles, chutneys and preserves. Kilner have been making glassware since 1842 so you can be sure they know what they're doing!

Always sterilise your jars thoroughly. The easiest way to do this is to put jars and lids in the dishwasher on the hot cycle. Alternatively, you can wash them really well in hot soapy water, place them on a baking tray and put them in a low oven at about 110°C for at least 20 minutes.

Whichever method you use make sure they're still warm and completely dry before filling.

SALT

Salt plays a crucial role in preservation. It dries out moisture and inhibits the growth of micro-organisms, as well as protecting the flavour.

Salt can be applied dry - i.e. by layering the vegetables in a colander and sprinkling the salt as you go along, leaving them to dry out for up to 24 hours. Or it can be made into a brine (using 50g salt for 600ml water).

Dry salt is best for vegetables with a high water content (such as courgettes, marrows and cucumbers), while brine is used for most others. Use a salt with good flavour that dissolves well: you can't go wrong with Maldon Sea Salt.

After salting, vegetables must be rinsed clean in cold water and well drained before being packed into jars and covered with vinegar.

SPICES

Spices give flavour, aroma and heat.

Blends of pickling spice are available to buy, including our favourite, Bart Ingredients Pickling Spice. If you're feeling adventurous, you can also create your own spice blend (using whole not ground spices). Spices to use include cinnamon, allspice, cloves, mace, peppercorns, and ginger. You can bring out their flavour by toasting them briefly in a dry frying pan.

In The River Cottage Preserves Handbook, Pam Corbin recommends using 15-30g of spices for 1

WELCOME TO THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF PICKLING

Novice pickler? Second-time-rounder? Or pickling champ? Whatever your pickling experience, this guide is packed with tips and original recipes to help you create perfect pickles every time.

Here at Aspall, it's no secret that we're obsessed with pickling, always looking out for new and creative ideas while perfecting age-old recipes. We're not alone, as those of you who've shared your #PickleWithPride pictures and stories with @aspallvinegar on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter have gleefully proved. Thanks for sharing all your superb pickling stories and photos with us!

Our #PickleWithPride partners – Kilner, Bart Ingredients, Maldon Salt, UK Shallots and Billington's Sugar – also know a thing or two about pickling, and we're very grateful for their wisdom and recipe contributions for this guide.

You can find more of our recipes online in the Aspall Kitchen while all of our vinegars, including our celebrated cyder vinegar, can be found in our shop.

As seasoned picklers know, once you start making your own pickles, chutneys, relishes and preserves, you can never have too many recipes or too much vinegar...

Happy pickling!

Into the woods.

Once upon a time there was an oval baking dish and a rectangular baking dish. They lived in the forest in England with all their friends: foxes and hedgehogs and owls, all under a canopy of leafy trees. They spent their days doing what baking dishes do best: making roasted vegetables, baked pastas, fruit crisps, and anything else they were in the mood for. One day they met, and they decided to form a set —after all, they had so much in common. And from then on they brought dinner from the oven to the table every night, and we've lived (and eaten) happily ever after.

CHRISTMAS GIFT GUIDE FOR THE HOME LOVER

December 1, 2017 by Jen Stanbrook – 8 Comments

Welcome, I'm thrilled to reveal my 2017 Christmas Gift Guide for the home lover. If you have a friend or family member who loves a beautiful home gift but need some inspiration for Christmas this year, look no further. I've pulled together some of my favourite pieces from old and new brands, and both small and large businesses, starting at just over £12.

10. IMPRIMA KITCHEN STORAGE SET FROM TYPHOON

This set has really surprised me. Made of steel but looking ceramic, they are light and stylish, each with a different geo design, and topped off with bamboo lids. All together they make a great set but individually the bread bin is a great size and the set of 3 jars are great for a contemporary kitchen. Definitely one for the practical, yet stylish home lover.

- Bread bin dimensions: W 210 mm x H 290 mm x L 305 mm
- Set of 3 Storage jars priced at £27.99
- Storage jars dimensions: W 115 mm x H 160 mm x L 115 mm
- Satin matte colour coated
- Environmentally friendly bamboo lid, airtight silicone seal.

CUPS, TEAPOTS & DECANTERS WITH KILNER & PRICE & KENSINGTON

I never thought, as a grown-up that I would have a favourite glass brand. I mean, it's glass! But my heart does a little giddy dance everytime a Kilner bottle catches my eye – it's the little pop stoppers that make the overall product a little more quirky with a side order of 'fancy' and better still? They don't break the bank!

I was very kindly sent out this glorious bundle of Kilner and Price & Kensington goodies (see below picture!) and I'm so excited to share them all with you!

I have never owned a Teapot – like a proper, steep your tea bags for a few minutes before pouring it into a cup, teapot! So being sent this gorgeous mint Price & Kensington teapot made me a little excited. I couldn't wait to make my first 'teapot' cup of tea and of course, use my cream Price & Kensington mugs, too.

If you're looking for some delicious foods for your Christmas table, or gifts for foodie friends, read on...

The Typhoon Stowaway Storage range will bring a stylish new look and innovative new storage solutions to any kitchen. With a hint of army utility ware, classic boarding school tuck boxes and 1950s office chic, the range has storage for everything in your kitchen or home, from flour and rice to pasta, bread and even make-up or clothing. We love the stylish good looks and spacious air tight storage options, plus they fit far better in the cupboard than round jars.

ALL THE PRETTY BOWLS

1 Anthropologie is probably my mothership. I buy most of my clothes and a heap ton of my proppy from there. Christmas sales are the best time to shop there as most items will be significantly discounted. Treat yourself to a set of pretty measuring cups which have a myriad uses.

2 I recently discovered West Elm and have fallen hard for their table and glassware. Their shops are a food bloggers' paradise and there's plenty of covetable furniture there too. Look out for the Christmas sale and grab some bargains.

3 [Giveaway!] Head to Mason Cash for the most whimsical bowls in their In The Forest range. Inspired by folk tales, this range features intricately embossed forest scenes featuring forest animals. These are definitely meant to be on display and not just used for mixing!

tillyandsage A little belated but happy Christmas everyone! Hope you all had a fabulous day yesterday. It's round two for us today at our house (just hoping I don't give everyone food poisoning with my culinary skills!). Oh, and thanks for everyone's suggestions a few weeks back when I asked you about colour schemes for a 'sophisticated' Christmas. I was working with @kilneruk on some festive jars for their showroom displays and I went for this scheme in the end after all your help.
