COMPETE IN STYLE

From the mountains to the sea, Maine sports venues have played host to youth, amateur, international, university-level, and professional-level sports. In 2017, forty pro bowlers traveled from around the world to compete in the PBA Elias Cup at Portland's recently expanded Bayside Bowl, and a Maine Shootout tournament is scheduled prior to the Elias Cup weekend events in 2018.

Play in Maine

Maine and sports—it's a natural fit. With its diversity of terrain and changing climate, Maine is fortunate to have an array of distinct, unique four-season sports activities. Maine has the space to hold large competitions and the services to ensure they run smoothly. From marathons & triathlons, to cycling, golf, and much more, the state's natural resources allow for the widest range of sporting events.

Last September, Maine Ultimate welcomed 57 teams from around the Northeast for tournaments held at the South Portland Recreation Complex and Wainwright Farms. Fight the Night, an indoor Ultimate tournament held each January at the Portland Sports Complex, draws New England competitors who raise money for Camp Sunshine, which provides retreats for children with life-threatening illnesses and their families.

WE'LL CHEER YOU ON

Greater Portland is geared up for the excitement of organized sports and our Group Marketing team is eager to help you navigate the logistics of hosting a major league event in Maine. In partnership with the Maine Sports Commission, we have the resources to help promote and make sure your sporting event is a slam dunk.

“This area of Maine has the perfect combination of beautiful farmland and proud rural communities for our Farm to Fork Fondo and supports the symbiotic relationship between cyclists, farmers, and open space.”

CAST A WIDE NET

Our Region

Within a 15-mile radius of Maine's largest metropolitan hub, you'll find a variety of landscapes and towns to explore. Both surrounding and within Portland, parks and preserves allow access to the tranquil natural beauty Maine is renowned for.

WELCOME TO GREATER PORTLAND

Your attendees can enjoy a stroll on a sandy beach or a team-building canoe trip through a salt marsh in Scarborough. Westbrook's Performing Arts Center is a state-of-the-art venue, minutes from downtown Portland in a burgeoning arts and tech riverfront town. Grab an authentic lobster roll and photograph renowned Portland Head Light while watching surf crash upon Cape Elizabeth's rocky coast. The state's largest retail center is located in South Portland, near the airport and several hotel and conference centers. Freeport entices travelers to find fabulous outlet bargains, but your group can also experience active adventures with L.L.Bean's Outdoor Discovery School.

BOTH REFINED AND RELAXED

Portland is perched on a peninsula, jutting out into island-studded Casco Bay. In Portland, older architecture blends gracefully with the new as you stroll along the working waterfront or the cobblestone streets of the Old Port section of town. Portland is easy to navigate by foot, taxi or bus. Small parks and squares dot the landscape, offering comfortable respite for urban explorers. Intriguing shops and cozy coffee and tea houses beckon to passersby. Harbor cruises, historic buildings, and galleries nestle along the waterfront.

On a stroll through the Old Port, one of the country's more successful warehouse revitalization efforts, you'll hear the squall of gulls and the low moan of bell buoys as you watch fishermen unloading their daily catch. Portland's waterfront is still very much a working port, an integral part of the local economy. Underlying the latest tech, fashion, and culinary scene is a natural authenticity and a deep sense of continuity. With sophisticated style and artistic sensibilities, Greater Portland is never-the-less unpretentious and welcoming.

SET SAIL FOR FUN

Don't be fooled by Portland's small-town flavor—you'll find a diversity and sophistication of cultural, historic, and entertainment offerings typically encountered in much larger metro regions. Be sure to leave some free time on the itinerary for your attendees to experience and explore our sights and attractions.

Have fun in Maine.

Portland, the cultural hub of northern New England, is home to professional theater and dance troupes, a fabulous art museum, and its own opera company and symphony orchestra. Historic homes and maritime museums honor the past's legacy and bestow an appreciation for how a long and fruitful association with the sea continues to shape the region today.

The region's culinary scene is also bustling. You can't walk down the street in Portland without bumping into several ways to treat your taste buds. Maine lobster continues to have a devoted following and a lobster and clambake with all the fixings, on the beach or other setting, can add extra excitement that your delegates will long be talking about. In addition to the freshest of seafood, a smorgasbord of culinary tastes is on offer in a wide variety of casual to elegant venues. Greater Portland's microbrew movement is also thriving; locally brewed beer is served at most restaurants and pubs, and tour companies will drive you to sample drinks from Maine's local breweries, distilleries, and wineries.

"I felt Portland itself was really a draw. From the first day we announced the location, we had positive feedback, and the conference attendees relished the city and great food they enjoyed there. Now I just need to find an equally attractive location for next year—no small order."

—Gwen Henson, American Society for Indexing

INSPIRE YOUR CREW

Looking for a way to reward your valuable employees or host a memorable team building experience? With miles of breathtaking coastal scenery, gorgeous inland vistas, and attentive hospitality staff, Maine is an ideal incentive destination.

Adventure in Maine

The Western Lakes and Mountains region offers superb Alpine skiing, snowmobiling and rafting, while most other outdoor activities are easily accessible in Greater Portland. You can canoe through the state's largest salt marsh in Scarborough or take in a panoramic view of brilliant foliage on a fall hike up Bradbury Mountain in Pownal. Maine Audubon sanctuaries in Portland, Falmouth and Freeport are the ideal place for bird watchers to roam, while golfers will find excellent links, both inland and oceanside.

Biking and kayaking with experienced guides are two of the most popular outdoor activities that can be done as a group. Or you can don rubber gloves and haul traps with a Maine lobsterman. Elegant schooners will sail your party down the bay for a close-up view of forts and lighthouses. Try ice-fishing or whale-watching, or let L.L.Bean's Outdoor Discovery Schools introduce you to archery, paddle-boarding, fly-fishing, or a host of other exciting activities.

MIX IT UP

Since Maine is one of the nation's great outdoor playgrounds, you may want to combine your business meeting or convention with an exhilarating recreational outing. Or let your delegates discover their own adventure; just knowing what's available to them is likely to make them more eager to attend your event.

“There’s a lot of flavor in Portland that I think most people don’t know about. Our schedule has Chicago, Indianapolis, Los Angeles—a lot of big name cities—but we’re really excited we added Portland. We 100% want to come back.”

— Aaron Del Mar, Adrenaline Sports Management

CHOOSE YOUR SEASON

New England is fortunate to have four seasons that each brings its own distinct pleasures: crisp autumn days, winter's frosty elegance, the new growth and brilliant floral hues of spring, and summer's salty sea breezes.

Year-round in Maine.

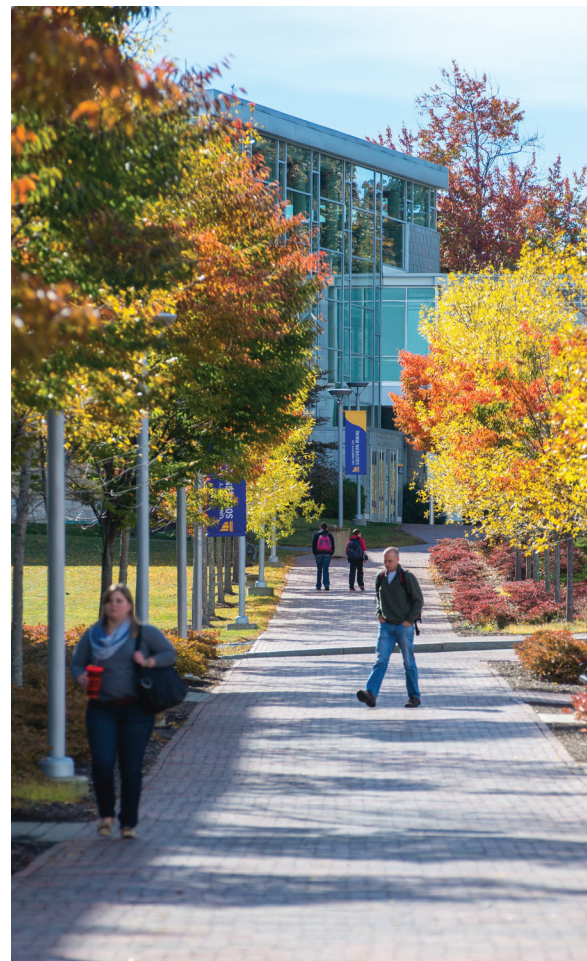

Your delegates will want to take advantage of the seasonal flavors on tap when they're here. Curling up by a winter's fire, rafting during a spring high-water release, picking apples, sailing on the bay—there's always something special to do to make the most of the time you've chosen to meet in Maine.

Maine is a safe and comfortable destination where delegates often combine a family vacation with business travel. Throughout the summer, the skies fill with the sounds of outdoor concerts. Annual festivals celebrate everything from the bounty of autumn's harvest to the delights of winter. When you hold your next meeting in Maine, you may run out of time, but never things to do!

A VALUE PROPOSITION

Meeting in Maine during the peak season can be a challenge for budget-conscious groups, but you can still have a budget-friendly meeting in the summer by choosing the right venue. Head to the mountains where ski resorts welcome groups at off-season rates and state parks are nearby. Or take over a college campus! When school's out, you can enjoy the robust meeting and leisure space of several colleges near the ocean. Book a multi-functional arena or theatre for your peak season space and shout "Bravo" at the savings.

Winter and spring are the value seasons in Greater Portland; your budget will stretch further during these months. Not only are room rates less but the region is filled with fine dining, sports, and an abundance of arts and entertainment. You'll enjoy performances of professional theater, dance, the Portland Symphony, and headliner concerts, all of whose primary programming correspond with Portland's value dates.

PORTLAND'S NEIGHBORHOODS

Arts District

The cultural epicenter of Maine, Portland's Arts District encompasses an art school, world-renowned art museum, numerous galleries, professional theatre, and live performance venues.

East Bayside

This former industrial area is now exploding with coffeeshops, breweries, distilleries, and other innovative businesses. East Bayside is definitely Portland's new hot zone.

East End

The panoramic harbor views from the Eastern Prom cannot be matched elsewhere in the city. Once a neglected neighborhood, the East End is on the rise and has become the hip area to live in Portland. The Observatory, situated among a bevy of restaurants and small shops, crowns Congress Street.

Old Port/Waterfront

Portland's working waterfront is an attraction in and of itself. Renovated brick warehouses and tour boats line Commercial Street. Cruise ships dock daily in the fall. The Old Port is the heart of Portland's shopping, dining, and nightlife scene.

Parkside

Taking its name from 55-acre Deering Oaks Park, this district is also home to the Portland Exposition Building, University of Southern Maine, the Portland Ice Arena, and Hadlock Stadium, home of the Portland Sea Dogs baseball team.

Thompson's Point

Imaginative and dynamic, this newly developed waterfront district combines entertainment and conference facilities, an outdoor skating rink, quirky museums, a distillery, a brewery, and the training and performance company, Circus Maine.

West End

Industrial age mansions and Victorian era architecture line the quiet streets of the city's most elegant quarter. Enjoy a stroll along the Western Prom and dine in great restaurants favored by locals.
