

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT WITH BRIAN MCNULTY DISTRICT LEADERSHIP: THE CRITICAL VARIABLE IN IMPROVEMENT

Join the Ohio Leadership Advisory Council (OLAC) on December 11, 2014 for a free training opportunity!

While we have known for a while now what to do to improve individual schools, we have not provided the district-wide guidance to improve all of our schools. Zavadsky, (2012) found that school improvement efforts won't succeed if they are not complemented by district change efforts. At the same time, "There is now clear empirical evidence on the influence of district-level practices on the quality of instructional leadership." (Leithwood and Seashore Louis, 2012)

This day-long interactive session will present new research on the critical roles and responsibilities of the superintendent and central office in making continuous improvement across the whole district. This session will also identify the specific conditions and actions that you as the superintendent and the rest of the central office staff need to take now to achieve better district-wide outcomes.

The session will also address the actions that the district can take to close the achievement gap in performance between all subgroups and address how you can effectively use OTES and OPES to move this work forward.
