Another turn of the wheel of fate brings to an end what once more in the exhilirating presence of a "Blue Blazer" or once again immersed in romantic nostalgia over an "Orange Blossom" we now charitably call "a noble experiment". Let the dead bury the dead! Let the family bathtub return again to its humble service of housing the family coal! Let the furtive engulfings of "unspeakable concoctions prepared by frowsy gorillas lounging behind the bars of dingy basement speakeasies, slashing lukewarm ginger ale into dirty glasses half-filled with raw alcohol "be forever forgotten!"

We are entering upon a mellower and a more leisured age. With the coming of decent ingredients a cry goes up for the grand old recipes of the royal drink-concocters of happier days.

Some of us, but not many, still can tell our grandchildren of the time we sipped a "Tom and Jerry" at the old Metropolitan in New York when Jerry Thomas was the Principal Bartender there. The oldest living inhabitant may even dimly recall burying his nose in one of the Professor's Juleps in the Planters' House in St. Louis. But there is glory enough for all. The book in which the Old Master confined so many of his secrets, THE BON VIVANTS' COMPAN-ION or HOW TO MIX DRINKS, with all of its 300 or more precious recipes is yours to own and to use.

Follow carefully those time-tried directions and drink a toast to the Prince of Mixers whose genial "What will it be, gentlemen?" was an invitation to remember and to cherish.

HE illustrations for this book were found in various issues, from 1860 to 1880, of such newspapers as Leslie's Weekly, Stetson's Dime Illustrated, The Sporting Times and Theatrical News, The Illustrated News, Under the Gaslight and Illustrated American Life. The bartenders' portraits are from Under the Gaslight, which in 1878 and 1879 published a series of sketches and pictures called "Our Bartenders."

Introduction

Ι

THE Lord smiled benevolently upon the city of New Haven, Connecticut, on a stormy winter's night in 1825, and His official tot-bearer, the stork, rode the gale from Heaven and deposited a little stranger within the humble cottage home of Mr. and Mrs. William Daniel Thomas, respectable though pious people, who were ever ready to drop a coin into the collection plate or provide a fried chicken for the pastor. Like the Magi of eld, they gazed upon the infant in bewildered but worshipping awe, and listened raptly to the wails which racked his puny frame. They named him Jeremiah.

"We'll make him a preacher," said Mr. Thomas. "Or a Professor," he added, thinking of Yale College and the dignified savants of the faculty.

"A preacher," Mrs. Thomas decided, and murmured ecstatically. "The Reverend Jeremiah Thomas! Oh, Will, maybe a D.D.!"

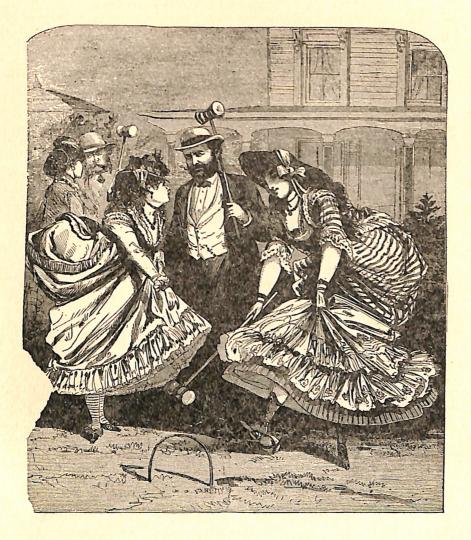

"Of course," agreed Mr. Thomas. "By all means a D.D."

But, alas for the fond hopes of doting parents! A power transcending that of man had decreed the fate of the innocent babe, and no such dreadful destiny had been plotted for him upon the heavenly charts. He did not become the Reverend Jeremiah Thomas, for it was not written that he should receive and interpret, and when necessary amend, the commands and wishes of the Almighty. Nor did he become a teacher at Yale, although the Yale boys learned much from him before he left New Haven to give his message to the world. Instead, he became simply Jerry Thomas, but for more than three score years he lived a life of singular usefulness, and blessed many communities with the abundance of his service. He was a great artist with a touch of true genius, and the importance of his influence upon the gentler and more esthetic aspects of American culture has neither been properly recognized nor adequately estimated. Indeed, he lies in an obscure grave, untopped by granite shaft or public memorial.

Briefly, Jerry Thomas was a bartender. But what a bartender! His name should not be mentioned in the same breath with that of the frowsy gorilla who, in these dark days of Prohibition, may be found lounging behind the bar of a dingy basement speakeasy, sloshing luke-warm ginger ale into a dirty glass half-filled with raw alcohol, and then calling the unspeakable concoction a drink. Jerry Thomas had nothing in common with this Volsteadian ape; there is no more a basis of comparison than there is between Michelangelo and Bud Fisher, or Dante and Eddie Guest. For Jerry Thomas was neither frowsy nor a simian; he was an imposing and lordly figure of a man, portly, sleek and jovial, yet possessed of immense dignity. A great diamond gleamed in his shirt front, and a jacket of pure and spotless white encased his great bulk; and a huge and handsome mustache, neatly trimmed in the arresting style called walrus, adorned his lip and lay caressingly athwart his plump and rosy cheeks. He presented an inspiring spectacle as he leaned upon the polished mahogany of his bar, amid the gleam of polished silver and cut glass, and impressively pronounced the immemorial greeting, "What will it be, gentlemen?" -a sacred rite which the modern poison slinger has corrupted into a swipe at a pine board with a greasy cloth and a peevish, "Whatcha want, gents? Hooch?"

President Grant Playing Croquet at Long Branch, N. J., in 1870. The President is said to have been so impressed by his first Blue Blazer that he gave Professor Thomas a cigar

In these decayed and evangelical times, when drinking has reverted to a savage guzzling of liquid dynamite, the name of Jerry Thomas arouses no answering spark of manhood from the craven victims of bootleg liquor or the cowed and beaten slaves who labor in the gloomy galleys of the Anti-Saloon League. But to the ancients who weep beside the bier of a lost art it brings back beautiful memories of golden fizzes and stimulating juleps, of cobblers, slings and sangarees. For Jerry Thomas was the greatest drink mixer of his age; his praises were sung by enlightened and Christian men from the Gulf of Mexico to the barren coast of Maine, and from the Golden Gate to Broadway. Aye, even in Europe he was recognized as a master craftsman; he visited Liverpool, Southampton, London and Paris in 1859, bearing with him his magnificent set of solid silver bar utensils constructed at a cost of $4,000 for his own personal use, and astounded the effete drinkers of the Old World with the variety and extent of his virtuosity.

It was Jerry Thomas - rise, please - who invented those celebrated cold weather beverages which have come down to us as the Blue Blazer and the Tom and Jerry, the former a powerful concoction of burning whiskey and boiling water which, if properly employed, would render the hot water bottle obsolete. And it was Jerry Thomas who, a few years before the Civil War, gave the aid and encouragement of his genius to the cocktail, then a meek and lowly beverage pining for recognition and appreciation, and by self-sacrificing work in the laboratory raised it to its rightful place among the drinks. A perfect flood of new mixtures soon showered upon a delighted world, and the Metropolitan Hotel at Prince Street and Broadway, in New York, where Jerry Thomas was Principal Bartender in the days when the metropolis was the scene of the soundest drinking on earth, became the first great cocktail house. As a mark of gratitude for his invention of the Tom and Jerry and the Blue Blazer, and for his researches in the field of the cocktail, Jerry Thomas's host of admirers invested him with the honorable, if honorary, title of Professor, by which he was thereafter known, and which he carried with becoming dignity through the remainder of his earthly pilgrimage. Thus he fulfilled one of the ambitions which his father had expressed for him as he lay, a helpless little one, in the cradle of the New Haven cottage. But the church, ever an obstacle to human progress, failed to recognize his genius.

It was not only as a scientist and beverage dispenser that Professor Thomas deserves a monument and the plaudits which are now wasted upon generals, bishops, movie actors, channel swimmers and aviators, for his interests were numerous and his fame in other lines was great; in many different ways, indeed, he lent force and direction to the cultural advance of the nation. He was a pioneer minstrel showman of the Pacific Coast, and later owned a music hall in New York wherein Lew Dockstader began the career which was to make him the most celebrated minstrel man of his time; and he sponsored the first public exhibition of Thomas Nast's cartoons, and did much to popularize the work of that famous artist. And he also achieved renown as a collector; he owned more than three hundred gourds, of every conceivable shape and size, the finest and most important group of these natural curiosities in the United States, if not in the world. Indeed, the collection may well have been unique. Moreover, Professor Thomas was an author whose works have been sadly neglected by the critics, even by the high-powered, super-intellectuals among them who possess the occult power of finding things in a book that the writer never heard of. These giants customarily sing the praises of realism, yet they have persistently ignored the product of one of the few men who were ever able to make the real even more so, and who at the same time could take a frightened, trembling wretch and by the skillful application of a cocktail, a cobbler, a julep or a sangaree, sweetened to his taste, transform him into a stalwart hero eager and able to bear the world upon his shoulders. The attention of these critics is respectfully invited to the volume into which Professor Thomas poured the vials of his wisdom, nay, his very soul, and published under this simple title:

BY CHRISTIAN SCHULTZ,

Professor of Chemistry, Apothecary and Manufacturer of Wines, Liquors, Cordials, etc., etc., from Berne, Switzerland.

This erudite work first appeared early in 1862, and quickly went through half a dozen large printings. So rapturously was it acclaimed, and so phenomenal its success, that scores of imitations soon appeared, and the book-stalls of the nation groaned beneath the weight of volumes purporting to give directions for the concocting of all sorts of delectable beverages. But through all this excess of publishing Professor Thomas's work remained steadfastly first in the hearts of his countrymen, and was everywhere accepted as the production of a Great Master. Even to this day the real adept at manipulating a cocktail shaker and other such symbols of civilization, one who approaches the act of compounding a drink in the proper humbleness of spirit, regards it somewhat as the Modernist regards the Scriptures; as perhaps a trifle out-moded by later discoveries, yet still worthy of all respect and reverence as the foundation of his creed and practice. The last edition of the opus was published in 1887, and was something to weep over, for Professor Thomas's bursts of lyric writing had been subjected to the censorious scissors and the ravening blue pencil, and the title of the work had been changed from the roisteringly significant Bon Vivant's Companion to the vulgar and prosaic Bartenders' Guide, or How to Mix All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Drinks. Worse, the elegant preface had been replaced by uninspiring Hints to Bartenders! In this form the book lacked spirit and distinction; it was little more than a dull account of instructions xxii to take a little of this and a little of that, shake them up and pour them down. I have been unable to find any record of how and when Professor Thomas passed to his reward, but I should not be surprised to learn that he expired of shock and horror when the final edition of his valuable contribution to American folk lore was placed in his hands. It is impossible to believe that he acquiesced in the editorial mutilations. The aim of the present editor has been to preserve the first edition intact, and to combine with it the best features of subsequent printings, for many important discoveries were made, and much valuable knowledge acquired, by the Professor before he was finally cut down by the Grim Reaper. This volume, therefore, is an attempt to preserve for posterity a specimen of Americana which in all likelihood will never be duplicated, for it is quite improbable that there will ever again be a legitimate bartender practicing under the protection of the Stars and Stripes. The work should thus be of considerable value to the scholar who wishes to study the manners and customs of the American people in the days before drinking became extinct, and the bartender a pariah. In this edition the contribution of Professor Schultz is omitted as unnecessary, since adequate directions for the manufacture of beers, wines, whiskeys, and cordials may be found in any of the standard encyclopedias.

INTRODUCTION

II

When Professor Thomas prepared to write The Bon Vivant's Companion and spray his nectarian delights upon a parched and thirsty world, he was very full of his subject — I speak figuratively — and his enthusiasm took the form of appending brief but appropriate comment to certain of his most beloved recipes. Thus, when he had set down the sum total of human knowledge concerning the preparation of that blood brother to the cocktail, the brandy crusta, one snifter of which would make a Prohibition agent burst into tears and tear up his bootlegging contracts, he added, "then smile." Again, when he had described a favorite beverage in great and glamorous detail, he concluded with the simple injunction, "Imbibe!" Occasionally he soared into the more rarefied strata of literary endeavor and brought down a poem; it is to one of these inspired moments, when the mantle of Omar lay caressingly across his shoulders, that we are indebted for the proper method of preparing mulled wine, a not so mild beverage which in those simple and lawless days was usually consumed amid the tender intimacies of the home.

The Encyclopedia Brittanica and other standard works of reference, to their shame be it said, contain no accounts of Professor Thomas's life, and extensive research has failed to unearth any information about the period of his early youth. It seems fair to assume, however, that he did not attend Yale College or otherwise employ his time in dissipation, for at the age of twenty we find him a very eager but humble Assistant to the Principal Bartender of a New Haven saloon, where he soon attracted favorable attention by his indefatigable quest of knowledge and his lush inventiveness. He remained in New Haven for two years, constantly adding to his store of wisdom, and conducting a series of experiments by which he definitely disproved the theory, then widely held, and in recent years revived, that the capacity of the American college boy was (and is) practically unlimited. In 1847, having exhausted New Haven as well as a majority of the Yale lads, Professor Thomas decided to seek hardier subjects for his tests, and so shipped before the mast and sailed out of New York aboard the bark Annie Smith. The skipper of the Annie Smith was a notorious martinet, but he served excellent grog, and Professor Thomas hoped that with this as a basis he might invent something which would relieve the sailor's life of much xxvi of its hardship. The plight of the seaman had always saddened him.

The Annie Smith docked at San Francisco in the early fall of 1849, after an eventful voyage around Cape Horn, and Professor Thomas left the vessel without the formality of saving good-bye to the skipper, for that verjuiced person had failed to recognize genius even when it was constantly under foot, and had looked with vigorous disapproval upon all attempts to improve the grog and the drinking habits of the crew. The Professor wisely remained in seclusion until the Annie Smith had sailed on her return voyage, and then became First Assistant to the Principal Bartender of the El Dorado, a famous resort of early San Francisco. There he continued his researches, and found excellent laboratory animals in the booted, bewhiskered, red-shirted, artilleryladen miners who flocked into the El Dorado eager to exchange their new-found wealth for the product of the bartender's genius. For these gentlemen, rough of exterior but sound drinkers, Professor Thomas prepared the simple beverages of the period, but on occasion he also compounded novel mixtures which crashed through their systems and practically shook them loose from their boots, or at any rate from their gold dust. It is related that once, when a gang of desperadoes swarmed into the El Dorado intent upon robbery, the Professor suavely suggested that they refresh themselves before proceeding with their nefarious enterprise. They assented, whereupon he prepared a dram which stretched them quivering and helpless upon the floor. The Vigilantes then hanged them with considerable ceremony.

Professor Thomas refused to divulge the composition of the potion with which he had laid the bandits low, insisting that it had neither commercial value nor artistic merit, and that he would never again mix it unless confronted by a similar emergency. So far as can be ascertained he died xxvii with the secret locked in his breast. But the undoing of the robbers had not exhausted Professor Thomas's powers of invention, as the customers of the El Dorado learned a few days later, when there came into the saloon a bewhiskered giant laden with gold dust and with three layers of pistols strapped about his middle. He had been many months in the mines and was fit to be tied; he yearned for adventure, and loudly proclaimed that whiskey was a beverage for nursing infants, and boasted that the only way a distillery could down him would be to fall upon him.

"Bar-keep!" he roared. "Fix me up some hell-fire that'll shake me right down to my gizzard!"

Professor Thomas surveyed him calmly and shrewdly estimated his capacity, which was obviously abnormal. He realized that here, at last, was a man worthy of his steel.

"Come back in an hour," he said. "I shall have something for you then."

The bewhiskered giant, who was also booted, stamped out of the saloon, and Professor Thomas retired to the back room. His reputation, he realized, was at stake; if he did not produce something which would take the roar out of the Colossus, all would be lost, even honor. So he grappled with the problem, and within an hour emerged, his brow wrinkled by furrows from the violence of his effort but with a magnificent idea sizzling and crackling in his brain. A deep silence fell upon the crowded barroom as the Professor, looking neither to the right nor to the left, moved slowly into position behind the bar, and with great care took from their places in a special rack two silver mugs, with handles. These were the show utensils of the El Dorado, for they had been imported from New York at great expense, and the mere fact that they were being handled was sufficient to indicate that something of importance impended. Carefully setting the mugs upon the bar, Professor Thomas twirled his great mustache and turned to his audience.

"Gentlemen!" he announced, impressively, "you are about to witness the birth of a new beverage!"

A sigh of anticipation arose from the assemblage, and with one accord the mass of men moved forward, respectfully, until they stood five deep before the bar, with the bewhiskered giant, still booted, in the front rank, Professor Thomas smiled, and quietly poured a tumblerful of Scotch whiskey into one of the mugs, following with a slightly smaller quantity of boiling water. Then, with an evil-smelling sulphur match, he ignited the liquid, and as the blue flame shot toward the ceiling and the crowd shrank back in awe, he hurled the blazing mixture back and forth between the two mugs, with a rapidity and a dexterity that were well nigh unbelievable. This amazing spectacle continued in full movement for perhaps ten seconds, and then Professor Thomas quickly poured the beverage into a tumbler and smothered the flame. He stirred a teaspoonful of pulverized white sugar into the mixture, added a twist of lemon peel, and shoved the smoking concoction across the bar to the booted and bewhiskered giant.

"Sir!" said Professor Thomas, bowing, "The Blue Blazer!"

The boastful miner threw his head back and flung the boiling drink down his throat. He stood motionless for a moment, smacking his lips and tasting the full flavor of it, and then a startled expression spread over his face. He swayed like a reed in the wind. He shivered from head to foot. His teeth rattled. He batted his eyes. His mouth opened and closed, but he could say nothing. He sank slowly into a chair. He was no longer fit to be tied.

"He done it!" he whispered at last. "Right down to my gizzard! Yes, sir, right down to my gizzard! Yes, sir, right down to my gizzard!"

He staggered to his feet, flung a bag of gold dust upon the bar and wandered unsteadily into the night; and thereafter xxix drank no more for three days, for the effect of a Blue Blazer, prepared in an artistic manner, is by no means ephemeral. This noble drink soon became the most popular winter beverage on the Pacific Coast, but the strain of constantly preparing it so wearied Professor Thomas that within a few months he concluded to retire from the practice of his art for a short period of recuperation. He therefore resigned his position as First Assistant to the Principal Bartender of the El Dorado, and betook himself to the Yuba River gold fields, near Donaville, where he staked out a claim and busied himself with the prosaic occupation of digging gold. But after a week he could no longer stand supinely by and witness the monstrous indignities which the unskilled bartenders of Donaville perpetrated nightly upon helpless liquors, and he returned to his life work, tending bar in the saloon owned by Claycraft & Cheever. During the daylight hours, however, he continued to work his mine. and by the following spring had amassed a fortune of some $16,000 in gold dust. And having by that time educated the Donaville bartenders in good mixing habits, he cast about for other cultural benefits that he might confer upon the booted and bewhiskered miners.

After a careful survey of the field, Professor Thomas decided that the principal need of the gold fields was refined amusement. It is true that the mining camps fairly swarmed with drinking places, and dance halls staffed by hussies in short skirts, but Professor Thomas judged that such entertainment as they provided was neither refined nor educational; he was especially pained by the drinking habits of the hussies and their admirers, who generally took their liquor straight and thereafter abandoned themselves to disgraceful antics. To remedy this situation, he organized a minstrel band, with which he toured the gold country throughout the summer. Ned Beach and Tom King were the end men, while the troupe also included Billy Wallace, Dan Coombs and Charley Stevens, all very famous singers and blackface comedians. The show prospered, but when winter came Professor Thomas suddenly abandoned the enterprise and sailed for Central America. The reason for his departure remained a mystery until a miner, another bewhiskered giant, boasted that he had asked Professor Thomas to prepare a certain beverage, and that the Professor was obliged to hang his head and admit that he had never heard of it. The bewhiskered giant explained that the drink was peculiar to Central America.

Within a few months Professor Thomas had stocked his mental reservoir with the wisdom of the Central Americans. and then took ship to New York. There he learned that the Yale boys were again strutting boastfully about New Haven with no bartender to guide them. He immediately answered the call of duty and hastened to his home town, where he opened a barroom, introduced the Blue Blazer, and soon put the Yale lads in their proper places. His task completed. Professor Thomas disposed of his New Haven holdings, and journeyed to South Carolina to study the julep in its native haunt. When he had added this famous concoction to his repertoire he went to Chicago, and for several months eked out a lonely existence in that outpost of civilization, which had not then been subjected to the refining influences of machine guns and Big Bill Thompson. But he was not long able to endure the crudities of the lake settlement, and he soon dropped down to St. Louis, where he became Principal Bartender of the Planters' House, one of the most famous hotels in America. It was especially noted for its fried chicken and waffles, and for catfish and candied sweet potatoes. It was while he was presiding over the Planters' House bar, in the early 'fifties, that Professor Thomas reached the apex of his career by inventing the beverage which has thundered down the years as the Tom and Ierry.

A few historians have expressed the opinion that the Tom and Jerry was an English drink, and that Professor Thomas merely chanced to be the first bartender of importance to prepare it in America. This impression probably grew out of the fact that after 1821, when Pierce Egan published his famous novel, Life in London, or Days and Nights of Jerry Hawthorne and His Elegant Friend Corinthian Tom, the lower class of London public house became known as Tom and Jerry. Egan's volume, incidentally, was one of Thackeray's early favorites, and some critics believe that a sequel, devoted largely to country sports and adventures, suggested Dickens's Pickwick Papers. Concoctions of hot rum, but unspiced, had been favorite tipples in the English barrooms for many years, and for that matter in America as well, but I have been unable to find authority for the belief that any beverage was specifically entitled Tom and Jerry until Professor Thomas introduced his mixture into St. Louis and subsequently throughout the land. Moreover, the Professor first called his invention the Copenhagen, perhaps wishing to acknowledge his indebtedness, so far as concerned the basic idea, to a rum-and-egg drink then in vogue in the capital of Denmark. But the patriotic Missourians refused to accept a foreign name for such a delectable drink, and it soon became known simply as Jerry Thomas. It was not called Tom and Jerry until Professor Thomas brought the secret to the Atlantic Coast. The name, in this connection, is obviously a contraction of Professor Thomas's Christian and surnames.

With the invention of this prince of cold weather drinks and the introduction of the Blue Blazer into the Missouri metropolis, Professor Thomas concluded — though mistakenly — that he had civilized St. Louis and taken the curse off the hard mid-western winter. So he surrendered his post as Principal Bartender at the Planters' House, and amid the mournful wailing of the citizenry embarked upon a flatbottomed stern-wheeler which, in time, landed him at New xxxii

Orleans. There he dipped into his money bags and opened a barroom which the preface to his literary work describes as a very recherche establishment. But he soon became discouraged, for his heart was in the preparation of cold weather beverages, and there was scant demand in Louisiana for the Blue Blazer and the Tom and Jerry. He soon sold his New Orleans property and returned to New York, where he was immediately engaged as Principal Bartender of the Metropolitan Hotel, then under the management of William M. Tweed and a center of the city's night life, which in those days was quite abundant. Professor Thomas celebrated his return to the chilly North by mixing a huge punch bowl of Tom and Jerry, which was given away free to all customers for a week, and by introducing several fine Southern mixtures to the jaded palates of the principal men of Gotham. Chief among them was the Crusta, a beverage of rare merit which was first compounded by Santina, owner of a celebrated Spanish Café in New Orleans.

When Professor Thomas began his experiments with the cocktail, this splendid concoction, whose name is now daily taken in vain by thousands of wierd mixtures in thousands of American homes, was then the puling infant of the great family of beverages, and had few friends and practically no admirers. "The cocktail," wrote Professor Thomas, "is a modern invention and is generally used on fishing and other sporting parties, although some patients insist that it is good in the morning as a tonic." Indeed, at this period the cocktail was not only a morning drink, an eye-opener, but was seldom served over the bar; as Professor Thomas indicates, it was generally bottled and sold for trips into the country and other expeditions. In the course of time it became more popular, but as late as 1885 it had not become the standard before-dinner drink that it was in later years. and as it is now throughout this great land. "In the morning," said a paper called Under the Gaslight, in 1870, "the merchant, the lawyer, or the Methodist deacon takes his cocktail. Suppose it is not properly compounded? The whole day's proceedings go crooked because the man himself feels wrong from the effects of an unskillfully mixed drink."

After much research Professor Thomas concluded that the lowly estate of the cocktail was in part due to the faulty bitters employed in its composition. He therefore busied himself in laboratory work, and in due time appeared with Jerry Thomas's Own Bitters. This brilliant discovery was made soon after Professor Thomas had opened the first of his New York barrooms, and during the next few years cocktail drinking increased until the beverage had become the favorite morning tipple of all men of convivial habit, and few self-respecting New York business men would attempt to begin a day's work without one. However, very few of the myriad of present day cocktails were known. The first edition of The Bon Vivant's Companion lists but ten different varieties — the bottle, the brandy, the fancy brandy, the whiskey, the champagne, the gin, the fancy gin, the Japanese, the soda and the Jersey. They were all very simple mixtures, but potent, except the soda and the Jersey.

Professor Thomas's ballyhoo for the cocktail was carried on with great vigor for almost a score of years, and the last edition of his masterpiece contains formulae for no fewer than twenty-four different mixtures, including such well known concoctions as the Manhattan, the absinthe, and the Martini, which was originally called the Martinez. He also gives directions for preparing the Saratoga and Coffee cocktails, and the Morning Glory, perhaps the most powerful of all. They were very popular for many years. In his work Professor Thomas also describes five very interesting drinks called the Bishop, the Protestant Bishop, the Archbishop, the Cardinal and the Pope, which are precisely similar except for the wines employed in their preparation. Instructions for compounding these beverages appeared in the first xxxvi edition of The Bon Vivant's Companion, but in the last printing the Archbishop, the Cardinal and the Pope were omitted, because of protests from the various Protestant denominations, which complained that the proportion of four Roman Catholic drinks to one Protestant was unreasonable and unfair.

III

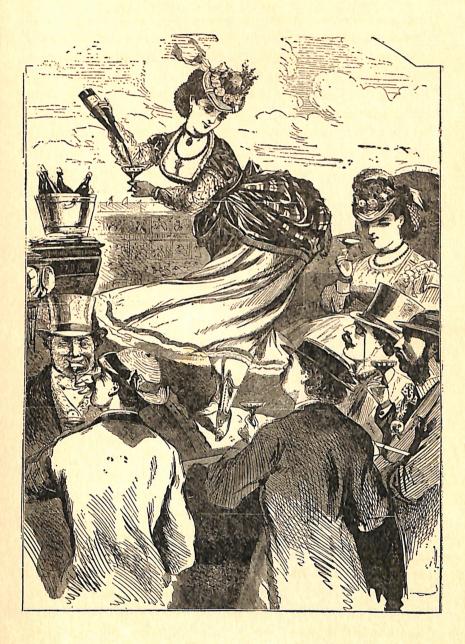

Professor Thomas left the Metropolitan in 1859 to brave the dangers of a transatlantic voyage, but he was both seasick and homesick, and in less than a year he was again in New York, and at Broadway and Washington Place opened the most ornate barroom in the metropolis. But within another twelve months the wanderlust led him in a covered wagon to San Francisco, where he was Principal Bartender in the Occidental Hotel for almost two years. Then he joined a wagon train to Virginia City, Nevada Territory, where he introduced sound drinking practices and amassed another small fortune in gold dust. In 1865 he returned to New York, and thereafter roamed no more.

He opened a barroom at Broadway and Twenty-second Street which became one of the most celebrated saloons in the history of the city, and was frequented by the best citizens. Thomas Nast was then a young man struggling to find his place in the field of art, and Professor Thomas graciously extended a helping hand and opened his back room to the first exhibition of Nast cartoons. A hundred caricatures of prominent personages were displayed upon the walls, and Nast leaped into instant popularity. Later Ned Mullin, a brilliant but dissipated caricaturist, also exhibited his work in Professor Thomas's art gallery, as did Theodore Wust and Junmp, clever draughtsmen who had been discovered in San Francisco by the Professor and brought to New York to make their little artistic splashes.

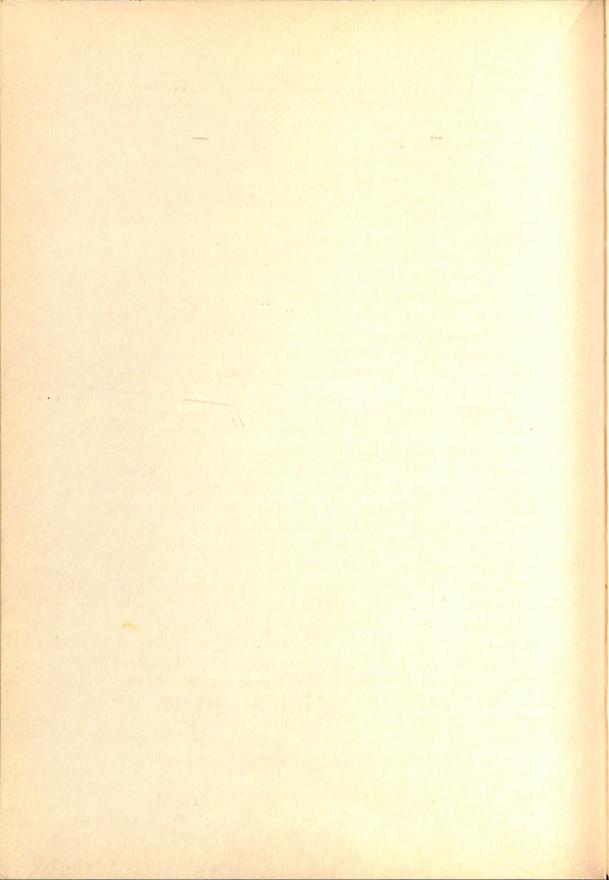

After seven years of continuous success and popularity, xxxvii

Professor Thomas sold his property and opened another and equally elaborate place at No. 1230 Broadway, where he remained for eight years. He finally disposed of this establishment to John Morrissey, a noted political and sporting figure who was in turn a successful gang captain, a prize fighter with a victory over John C. Heenan to his credit, the owner of luxurious gambling houses in New York and Saratoga Springs, a member of Congress and finally, with the original Honest John Kelly (not the gambler of that name) co-leader of Tammany Hall. Morrissey came to New York in the early fifties, when more than 6,000 gaming places were in open operation on Manhattan Island. Of these some 300 were first-class establishments catering to men of sound financial substance and furnished with an elegance unsurpassed in later years. A majority of these early houses were in Park Row, Park Place and lower Broadway, and in Barclay, Vesey and Liberty Streets, which are now entirely given over to business. They included such celebrated resorts as those operated by Orlando Moore, Handsome Sam Suydam, Jack Wallis, John Colton and Pat Herne. Wallis was a Chinaman who had been a faro dealer for French Jose, but had won the business from his employer on the toss of a coin. Many of the best houses were owned or backed by Reuben Parsons, the gambling monarch of the period, who was widely known as the Great American Faro Banker. Morrissey's most noted place was in Broadway just north of Tenth Street, not far from the present Grace Episcopal Church and Wanamaker's Store. His house in Saratoga Springs, which he founded in 1867, later came under the ownership of Richard Canfield, probably the most famous gamblinghouse proprietor New York has ever produced. In all of these elegant establishments faro was the principal game, and for more than twenty years after the Civil War it occupied the place in the affections of American gamblers that bridge and poker hold today.

INTRODUCTION

After John Morrissey had purchased the Broadway property Professor Thomas moved downtown, and in August, 1875, opened Thomas's Exchange at No. 3 Barclay Street, which soon became as popular as any of his other places. Morrissey operated the Broadway house as a pool room for a year or so, when it again came into the hands of the Professor, and was remodeled as a theater. It opened with a minstrel show in which Lew Dockstader made his first hit as a comedian. Dockstader's brother Charley was also a member of the company, as were Tommy Turner, Billy Bryant, Frank Kent, and Charley White, then the dean of minstrelsy. It was soon after he opened his Barclay Street bar that Professor Thomas began to form his notable collection of gourds, which soon crowded cartoons and caricatures out of his mind, and within a few months literally covered the walls of his back room.

Professor Thomas's business rivals included many celebrated bartenders, for this was the golden age of the American saloon, and Manhattan Island was dotted with highclass establishments from the Battery northward to Spuvten Duvyil, presided over by men who took their profession seriously and strove mightily to bring it to perfection. A noted barroom of the period was the Tall Tower in the basement of The Tribune building at Spruce and Nassau Streets, which in earlier years had been the site of the original Tammany Hall, and before that of Martling's Restaurant, commonly called the Pig Pen, where the Tammany organization held its first meetings. The Tall Tower was much frequented by editors and reporters of The Times, The Tribune and other newspapers which had their plants on Printing House Square. It was owned by Koster & Bial, who were also the proprietors of the famous music hall which bore their name, and Charley Sander was the Principal Bartender. Sander was a young man when he presumed to compete with Professor Thomas as a drink mixer, but he could wiggle his ears, and was even then the possessor of a mustache of considerable renown; connoisseurs regarded it as second in luxuriance and beauty only to the hirsute marvel which adorned the lip of Professor Thomas. However, it was generally conceded that the latter's was more thoroughly trained, or cowed, and lay closer to his cheek.

Another popular drinking place was the barroom of the St. James Hotel, at Broadway and Twenty-sixth Street, where Charley McCarty presided with dignity and efficiency. Mc-Carty is said to have changed the designation of his important office from Principal Bartender to Head Bartender, a revolution in nomenclature which affected all subsequent practitioners of his art. He was also a patron of the theater, and attracted much attention by suggesting to Tony Pastor that he interpolate twelve clog dancers in the action of Pinafore, which Pastor produced in his variety theater in 1879.

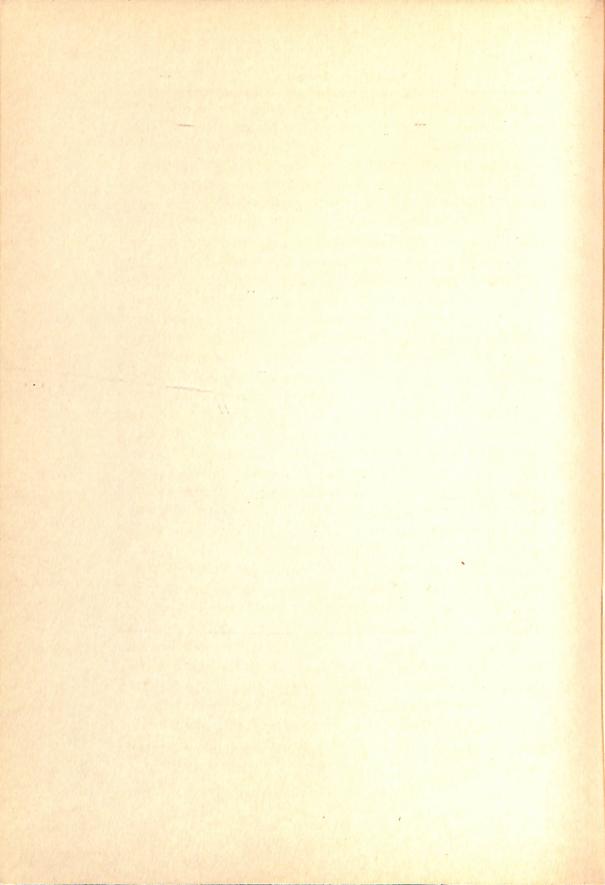

Tommy Lynch was his own Principal Bartender in the Bennett Building Bar in Nassau Street, but he had as assistants two gifted and industrious young men, his cousin, Michael Lynch, and his brother, also Michael Lynch. The former was commonly called Doctor, for he kept various medical books behind the bar and prescribed for all illnesses. Generally he recommended a stout snifter of Monogram whiskey. Mr. Lynch is said to have owned stock in the Monogram distillery. The Bank Exchange at Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street, owned by Billy Tracy, was a favorite resort of sporting and political figures. The stage entrance of the San Francisco Minstrels was just across the street. and members of the troupe gathered nightly in Tracy's place to discuss the problems of the day. Billy Burch was a regular visitor, and so was Charley Backus, then famous as an American Tragedian, while Jem Mace, the prize fighter. made the Exchange his headquarters.

hotel and restaurant bar was very popular. He also owned another place in Warren Street, a few blocks north of John Street and not far from City Hall, which is still in operation as a restaurant, although the bar has long since vanished. Charley Perkins was the Principal Bartender at the John Street establishment, assisted by Charley Foster, and Gus Yooss, a gifted drink mixer from Philadelphia. It was Stewart's custom to divide among his employees the receipts of both barrooms on Christmas and New Year's Days.

Dennis Sullivan's saloon, at Grand and Clinton Streets, numbered among its regular customers many city and court officials, and business men throughout that part of the city. Kirk & Company owned barrooms at No. 69 Fulton Street and at No. 709 Broadway, which a reporter of the period described as "synonyms of bibulous respectability." John F. Peterson was the Principal Bartender at Kirk's Broadway establishment, and was famous for his bald head, said to be the most highly polished in the city. He possessed a secret preparation with which he rubbed it three times daily, and frequently permitted the gay bloods who thronged the saloon to use it as a mirror. John Bowman operated a noted saloon at No. 157 Fulton Street, where the Principal Bartender was Len Stockwell, who varied his labors with occasional stage appearances as a clog and jig dancer.

Over on the East Side John Austin was Principal Bartender at Meagher's Saloon, which in 1879 had been in continuous operation for twenty-five years. Across town, at Broadway and Spring Street, was the Prescott House, then one of the oldest hotels in the city, but long since demolished. Jack Kelly was Principal Bartender there for many years. He had also worked at Kitner's Bar in Spring Street, near Broadway, which was one of the most palatial saloons in the city. It was especially famous for its cocktails, which newspaper writers described as particularly "smooth and insinuating."

In Barclay Street, now largely devoted to the sale of religious images and literature, Professor Thomas spent the remainder of his professional career, surrounded by his gourds and warmed by the respect and admiration of all enlightened drinkers. He strove to the last to inculcate proper drinking habits in his clientele, and frowned sternly and disapprovingly upon drunkenness and other forms of dissipation. During his later years, as is the fashion of decaying men, he became just a bit finicky, especially about the Blue Blazer and the Tom and Jerry. He insisted that they were intended for cold weather only, and refused to prepare the Tom and Jerry until the first snowfall. It is related that he once smashed a punch bowl containing the mixture which he found in the bar of a business rival in early September. He was even more strict with the Blue Blazer, and would concoct it for no man until the thermometer registered ten degrees or less above zero.

Thus battling for classical standards in his chosen art, he passed away, mourned and honored. He remains the greatest bartender in American history.

Preface to the First Edition

IN all the ages of the world, and in all countries, men have indulged in "social drinks." They have always possessed themselves of some popular beverage apart from water and those of the breakfast and tea table. Whether it is judicious that mankind should continue to indulge in such things, or whether it would be wiser to abstain from all enjoyments of that character, it is not our province to decide. We leave that question to the moral philosopher. We simply contend that a relish for "social drinks" is universal; that those drinks exist in greater variety in the United States than in any other country in the world; and that he, therefore, who proposes to impart to these drinks not only the most palatable but the most wholesome characteristics of which they may be made susceptible, is a genuine public benefactor. That is exactly our object in introducing this little volume to the public. We do not propose to persuade any man to drink, for instance, a punch, or a julep, or a cocktail, who has never happened to make the acquaintance of those refreshing articles under circumstances calculated to induce more intimate relations; but we do propose to instruct those whose "intimate relations" in question render them somewhat fastidious, in the daintiest fashions thereunto pertaining.

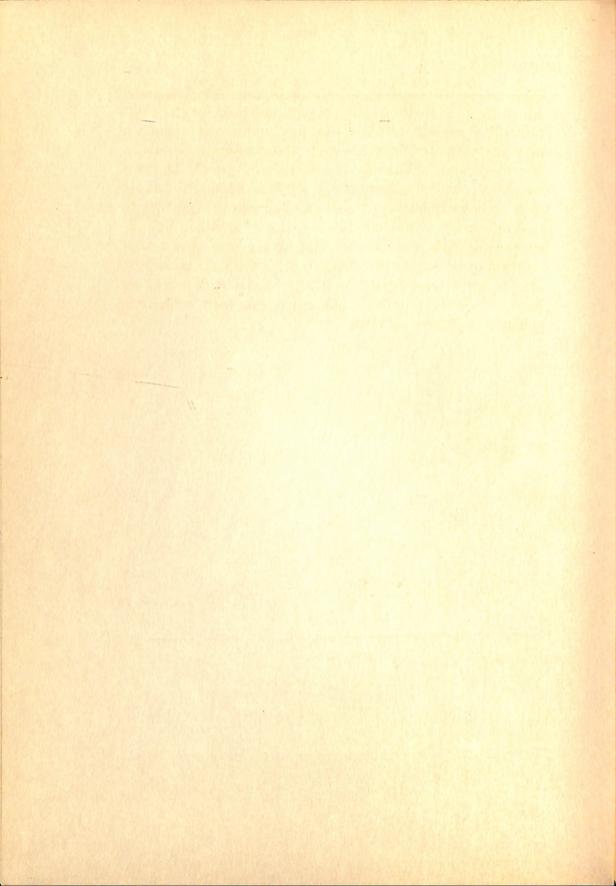

We very well remember seeing one day in London, in the rear of the Bank of England, a small drinking saloon that had been set up by a peripatetic American, at the door of xlvii which was placed a board covered with the unique titles of the American mixed drinks supposed to be prepared within that limited establishment. The "Connecticut eye-openers" and "Alabama fog-cutters," together with the "lightningsmashes" and the "thunderbolt-cocktails," created a profound sensation in the crowd assembled to peruse the Nectarine bill of fare, if they did not produce custom. It struck us, then, that a list of all the social drinks — the composite beverages, if we may call them so - of America, would really be one of the curiosities of jovial literature; and that if it was combined with a catalogue of the mixtures common to other nations, and made practically useful by the addition of a concise description of the various processes for "brewing" each, it would be a "blessing to mankind." There would be no excuse for imbibing, with such a book at hand, the "villainous compounds" of bar-keeping Goths and Vandals, who know no more of the amenities of bon vivant existence than a Hottentot can know of the bouquet of champagne.

"There's philosophy," said Father Tom in the drama, "even in a jug of punch." We claim the credit of "philosophy teaching by example," then, to no ordinary extent in the composition of this volume; for our index exhibits the title of eighty-six different kinds of punches, together with a universe of cobblers, juleps, bitters, cups, slings, shrubs, etc., each and all of which the reader is carefully educated how to concoct in the choicest manner. For the perfection of this education, the name, alone, of Jerry Thomas is a sufficient guarantee. He has travelled Europe and America in search of all that is recondite in this branch of the spirit art. He has been the Jupiter Olympus of the bar at the Metropolitan Hotel in this city. He was the presiding deity at the Planters' House, St. Louis. He has been the proprietor of one of the most recherche saloons in New Orleans as well as in New York. His very name is synonymous, in the lexicon of mixed drinks, with all that is rare and original. To The Wine Press, xlviii edited by F. S. Cozzens, Esq., we are indebted for the composition of several valuable punches, and among them we may particularize the celebrated "Nuremburgh," and the equally famous "Philadelphia Fish-House" punch. The rest we owe to the inspiration of Jerry Thomas himself, and as he is as inexorable as the Medes and Persians in his principle that no excellent drink can be made out of anything but excellent materials, we conceive that we are safe in asserting that whatever may be prepared after his instructions will be able to speak eloquently for itself. "Good wine needs no bush," Shakespeare tells us and over one of Jerry's mixtures eulogy is quite as redundant.

How to Mix Drinks

Punch

1 O make punch of any sort in perfection, the ambrosial essence of the lemon must be extracted by rubbing lumps of sugar on the rind, which breaks the delicate little vessels that contain the essence, and at the same time absorbs it. This, and making the mixture sweet and strong, using tea instead of water, and thoroughly amalgamating all the compounds, so that the taste of neither the bitter, the sweet, the spirit, nor the element, shall be perceptible one over the other, is the grand secret, only to be acquired by practice.

In making hot toddy, or hot punch, you must put in the spirits before the water: in cold punch, grog, etc., the other way.

The precise proportions of spirit and water, or even of the acidity and sweetness, can have no general rule, as scarcely two persons make punch alike.

HOT BRANDY AND RUM PUNCH

For a party of fifteen

One quart of Jamaica rum.	Four lemons.
One quart of Cognac brandy.	Three quarts of boiling
One pound of white loaf	water.
sugar.	One teaspoonful of nutmeg.

RUB the sugar over the lemons until it has absorbed all the yellow part of the skins, then put the sugar into a punchbowl; add the ingredients well together, pour over them the boiling water, stir well together; add the rum, brandy and nutmeg; mix thoroughly, and the punch will be ready to serve. As we have before said, it is very important, in making good punch, that all the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated; and, to insure success, the process of mixing must be diligently attended to. Allow a quart for four persons; but this information must be taken cum grano salis; for the capacities of persons for this kind of beverage are generally supposed to vary considerably.

SCOTCH WHISKEY PUNCH

STEEP the thin yellow shavings of lemon peel in the whiskey, which should be of the best quality; the sugar should be dissolved in boiling water. As it requires genius to make whiskey punch, it would be impertinent to give proportions.

DISSOLVE the sugar well with one wineglass of the water, then pour in the whiskey, and add the balance of the water. Sweeten to taste, and put in a small piece of lemon rind, or a thin slice of lemon.

FILL the glass with shaved ice, shake well, and dress the top with two thin slices of lemon, and berries in season. Serve with a straw.

This beverage ought always to be made with boiling water, and allowed to concoct and cool for a day or two before it is put on the table. In this way, the materials get more intensely amalgamated than cold water and cold whiskey ever get. As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, being one of Nature's most exquisite achievements.

IRISH WHISKEY PUNCH

THIS is the genuine Irish beverage. It is generally made onethird pure whiskey, and two-thirds boiling water, in which the sugar has been dissolved. If lemon punch, the rind is rubbed on the sugar, and a small proportion of juice added before the whiskey is poured in.

Irish whiskey is not fit to drink until it is three years old.

CHAMPAGNE PUNCH

One quart bottle of wine. One quarter pound of sugar. One orange, sliced. The juice of a lemon. Three slices of pineapple. One wineglass of raspberry or strawberry syrup. Ornament with fruits in season, and serve in champagne goblets.

THIS can be made in any quantity by observing the proportions of the ingredients as given above. Four bottles of wine make a gallon, and a gallon is generally sufficient for fifteen persons in a mixed party. For a good champagne punch, see Rocky Mountain Punch, No. 43.

... I 2 ... SHERRY PUNCH Use large bar glass

Tommy Lynch and His Assistants, Mike and Mike

Twenty coriander seeds. One small stick of cinnamon. One pint of brandy. One pint of rum. One gill of arrack.⁴ One cup of strong green tea. One quart of boiling water.

THE boiling water to be added last; cork this down to prevent evaporation, and allow these ingredients to steep for at least six hours; then add a quart of hot milk and the juice of two lemons; mix, and filter through a jelly-bag; and when the punch has passed bright, put it away in tight-corked bottles. This punch is intended to be iced for drinking.

...26... ENGLISH MILK PUNCH Another method

THIS seductive and nectareous drink can also be made by the directions herewith given:

To two quarts of water add one quart of milk. Mix one quart of old Jamaica rum with two of French brandy, and put the spirit to the milk, stirring it for a short time; let it stand for an hour, but do not suffer any one of delicate appetite to see the melange in its present state, as the sight might create a distaste for the punch when perfected. Filter through blotting-paper into bottles; and should you find that the liquid is cloudy, when it should not be, you may clarify it by adding a small portion of isinglass to each bottle. The above recipe will furnish you with half a dozen of punch.

⁴ Most of the arrack imported into this country is distilled from rice, and comes from Batavia. It is little used in America, except to flavor punch; the taste of it is very agreeable in this mixture. Arrack improves much with age. It is much used in some parts of India, where it is distilled from toddy, the juice of the cocoanut tree. An imitation of arrack is made by adding to a bowl of punch a few grains of benzoin, or Flowers of Benjamin. — J. T. Arrack was also a favorite tipple of Robinson Crusoe's. He included several gallons in the cargo of the first raft which he launched from the wrecked ship of which he was the sole survivor.

...27...

PUNCH À LA FORD

A recipe from Benson E. Hill, Esq., author of The Epicure's Almanac

"THE late General Ford, who for many years was the commanding engineer at Dover, kept a most hospitable board, and used to make punch on a large scale, after the following method:

"He would select three dozen of lemons, the coats of which were smooth, and whose rinds were not too thin; these he would peel with a sharp knife into a large earthen vessel, taking care that none of the rind should be detached but that portion in which the cells are placed, containing the essential oil; when he had completed the first part of the process, he added two pounds of lump-sugar, and stirred the peel and sugar together with an oar-shaped piece of wood, for nearly half an hour, thereby extracting a greater quantity of the essential oil. Boiling water was next poured into the vessel, and the whole well stirred, until the sugar was completely dissolved. The lemons were then cut and squeezed, the juice strained from the kernels; these were placed in a separate jug, and boiling water poured upon them, the general being aware that the pips were enveloped in a thick mucilage, full of flavor; half the lemon juice was now thrown in; and as soon as the kernels were free from their transparent coating, their liquor was strained and added.

"The sherbet was now tasted; more acid or more sugar applied as required, and care taken not to render the lemonade too watery. 'Rich of the fruit, and plenty of sweetness,' was the General's maxim. The sherbet was then measured, and to every three quarts a pint of Cognac brandy and a pint of old Jamaica rum were allotted, the spirit being well stirred as poured in; bottling immediately followed, and, when completed, the beverage was kept in a cold cellar, or tank, till required. At the General's table I have frequently drunk punch thus made, more than six months old; and found it much improved by time and a cool atmosphere."

....28....

PUNCH JELLY

MAKE a good bowl of punch, à la Ford, already described. To every pint of punch add an ounce and a half of isinglass, dissolved in a quarter of a pint of water (about half a tumbler full); pour this into the punch whilst quite hot, and then fill your moulds, taking care that they are not disturbed until the jelly is completely set.

Orange, lemon, or calf's-foot jelly, not used at dinner, can be converted into punch jelly for the evening, by following the above directions, only taking care to omit a portion of the acid prescribed in making the sherbet.

This preparation is a very agreeable refreshment on a cold night, but should be used in moderation; the strength of the punch is so artfully concealed by its admixture with the gelatine, that many persons, particularly of the softer sex, have been tempted to partake so plentifully of it as to render them somewhat unfit for waltzing or quadrilling after supper.

...29...

GLASGOW PUNCH

From a recipe in the possession of Dr. Shelton Mackenzie

MELT lump sugar in cold water, with the juice of a couple of lemons, passed through a fine hair-strainer. This is sherbet, and must be well mingled. Then add old Jamaica rum — one part of rum to five of sherbet. Cut a couple of limes in two, and run each section rapidly around the edge of the jug or bowl, gently squeezing in some of the delicate acid. This done, the punch is made. Imbibe.

This punch may be bottled, and used afterward hot or cold.

Half the above quantity, or even less, may be made, as this recipe is for a party of twenty.

...43... ROCKY MOUNTAIN PUNCH For a mixed party of twenty

From a recipe in the possession of Major James Foster

THIS delicious punch is compounded as follows:

Five bottles of champagne. Six lemons, sliced. One quart of Jamaica rum. Sugar to taste. One pint of maraschino.

Mix the above ingredients in a large punch bowl, then place in the center of the bowl a large square block of ice, ornamented on top with rock candy, loaf sugar, sliced lemons or oranges, and fruits in season. This is a splendid punch for New Year's Day.

...50... Arrack punch

IN making 'rack punch, you ought to put two glasses (wineglasses) of rum to three of arrack. A good deal of sugar is required; but sweetening, after all, must be left to taste. Lemons and limes are also matter of palate, but two lemons are enough for the above quantity; put then an equal quantity of water — i.e., not five but six to allow for the lemon juice, and you have a very pretty three tumblers of punch.

STEEP in one quart of old Batavia arrack, six lemons cut in thin slices, for six hours. At the end of that time the lemon must be removed without squeezing. Dissolve one pound of loaf sugar in one quart of boiling water, and add the hot solution to the arrack. Let it stand to cool. This is a delightful liqueur, and should be used as such.

...52... BIMBO PUNCH

BIMBO is made nearly in the same way as the above, except that Cognac brandy is substituted for arrack.

NUREMBURGH PUNCH

For a party of fifteen From a recipe in the possession of Hon. Gulian C. Verplanck ¹² TAKE three-quarters of a pound of loaf sugar, press upon it, through muslin, the juice of two or more good-sized oranges; add a little of the peel, cut very thin, pour upon a quart of boiling water, the third part of that quantity of Batavia arrack, and a bottle of hot, but not boiling, red or white French wine — red is best. Stir together. This is excellent when cold, and will improve by age.

THIS is a composition worthy of a king, and the materials are admirably blended; the inebriating effects of the spirits being deadened by the tea, whilst the jelly softens the mixture, and destroys the acrimony of the acid and sugar. The whites of a couple of eggs well beat up to a froth, may be substituted for the jelly where that is not at hand. If the punch is too strong, add more green tea to taste.

the brandy and peels, adding the juice of the oranges and of twenty-four lemons; mix well, then strain through a very fine hair-sieve, into a very clean barrel that has held high spirits, and put in two quarts of new milk. Stir, and then bung it close; let it stand six weeks in a warm cellar; bottle the liquor for use, observing great care that the bottles are perfectly clean and dry, and the corks of the best quality, and well put in. This liquor will keep many years, and improve by age.

Pur two ounces of cream of tartar, and the juice and parings of two lemons, into a stone jar; pour on them seven quarts of boiling water, stir and cover close. When cold, sweeten with loaf sugar, and straining it, bottle and cork it tight. This is a very pleasant liquor, and very wholesome; but from the latter consideration was at one time drunk in such quantities as to become injurious. Add, in bottling, half a pint of rum to the whole quantity.

OXFORD PUNCH

WE have been favored by an English gentleman with the following recipe for the concoction of punch as drunk by the students of the University of Oxford:

Rub the rinds of three fresh lemons with loaf sugar till you have extracted a portion of the juice; cut the peel finely off two lemons more, and two sweet oranges. Add six glasses of calf's-foot jelly; let all be put into a large jug, and stir well together. Pour in two quarts of water boiling hot, and set the jug upon the hob for twenty minutes. Strain the liquor through a fine sieve into a large bowl; put in a bottle of capillaire,¹⁴ half a pint of sherry, a pint of Cognac brandy, a pint of old Jamaica rum, and a quart of orange shrub; stir well as you pour in the spirit. If you find it requires more sweetness, add sugar to your taste.

...64... UNCLE TOBY PUNCH

English

over the lemons till it has absorbed all the yellow part of the skins. Then put into the bowl these lumps, and as much more as the juice of the lemons may be supposed to require; for no certain weight can be mentioned, as the acidity of a lemon cannot be known till tried, and therefore this must be determined by the taste. Then squeeze the lemon juice upon the sugar; and, with a bruiser press the sugar and the juice particularly well together, for a great deal of the richness and fine flavor of the punch depends on this rubbing and mixing process being thoroughly performed. Then mix this up very well with boiling water (soft water is best) till the whole is rather cool. When this mixture (which is now called the sherbet) is to your taste, take brandy and rum in equal quantities, and put them to it, mixing the whole well together again. The quantity of liquor must be according to your taste; two good lemons are generally enough to make four quarts of punch, including a quart of liquor, with half a pound of sugar; but this depends much on taste, and on the strength of the spirit.

As the pulp is disagreeable to some persons, the sherbet may be strained before the liquor is put in. Some strain the lemon before they put it to the sugar, which is improper, as, when the pulp and sugar are well mixed together, it adds much to the richness of the punch.

When only rum is used, about half a pint of porter will soften the punch; and even when both rum and brandy are used, the porter gives a richness, and to some a very pleasant flavor.

...65... CAPILLAIRE

Put a wineglass of curaçao into a pint of clarified syrup, shake them well together, and pour it into the proper sized bottles. A teaspoonful in a glass of fair water makes a pleasant eau sacre. ... 6 6 ... C A P I L L A I R E Another recipe

To one gallon of water add twenty-eight pounds of loaf sugar; put both over the fire to simmer; when milk-warm add the whites of four or five eggs, well beaten; as these simmer with the syrup, skim it well; then pour it off, and flavor it with orange flower water or bitter almonds, whichever you prefer.

...67... PUNCH À LA ROMAINE

For a party of fifteen

TAKE the juice of ten lemons and two sweet oranges, dissolve it in two pounds of powdered sugar, and add the thin rind of an orange; run this through a sieve, and stir in by degrees the whites of ten eggs, beaten into a froth. Put the bowl with the mixture into an ice pail, let it freeze a little, then stir briskly into it a bottle of wine and a bottle of rum.

...68... TEA PUNCH

MAKE an infusion of the best green tea, an ounce to a quart of boiling water; put before the fire a silver or other metal bowl, to become quite hot, and then put into it:

One-half pir	nt of	good	One-quarter pound of lump brandy.			sugar.
One-half pint			The juice of a large lemon.

Set these alight, and pour in the tea gradually, mixing it from time to time with a ladle; it will remain burning for 36 some time, and is to be poured in that state into the glasses; in order to increase the flavor, a few lumps of the sugar should be rubbed over the lemon peel. This punch may be made in a china bowl, but in that case the flame goes off more rapidly.

WEST INDIAN PUNCH

THIS punch is made the same as brandy punch, but to each glass add a clove or two of preserved ginger, and a little of the syrup.

...71...

YORKSHIRE PUNCH

RUB off the rind of three lemons on pieces of sugar, put the sugar into a jug, and add to it the thin rind of one lemon and an orange, and the juice of four oranges and of ten lemons, with six glasses of dissolved calf's-foot jelly. Pour two quarts of water over the whole, mixing the materials well; then cover the jug, and keep it on a warm hearth for twenty minutes. Then strain the mixture, and add a pint of clarified syrup, half a pint each of rum and brandy, and a bottle of good orange or lemon shrub.

...72... APPLE PUNCH

LAY in a china bowl slices of apples and lemons alternately, each layer being thickly strewed with powdered sugar. Pour over the fruit, when the bowl is half filled, a bottle of claret; cover, and let it stand six hours. Then pour it through a muslin bag, and send it up immediately.

···73··· ALE PUNCH

A QUART of mild ale, a glass of white wine, one of brandy, one of capillaire, the juice of a lemon, a roll of the peel pared thin, nutmeg grated on the top, and a bit of toasted bread.

····74··· CIDER PUNCH

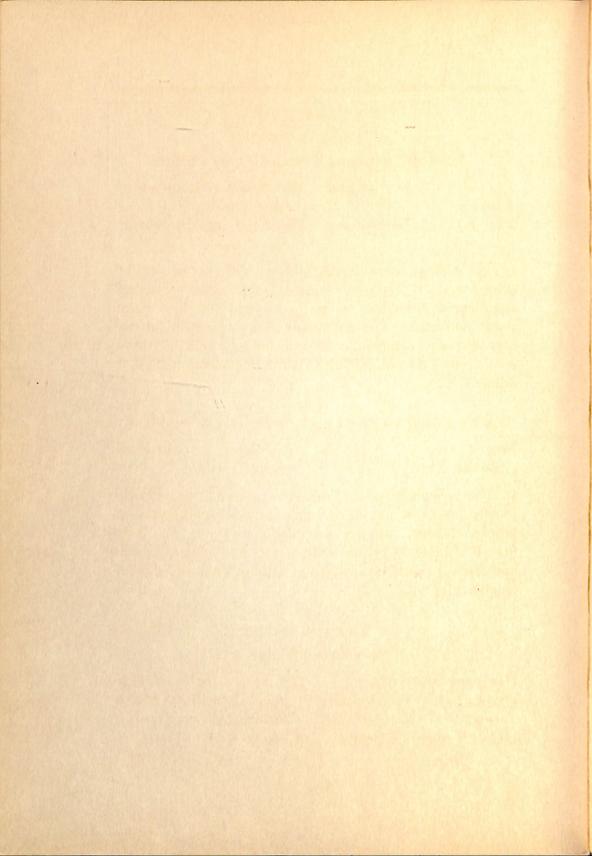

ON the thin rind of half a lemon pour half a pint of sherry; add a quarter of a pound of sugar, the juice of a lemon, a little grated nutmeg, and a bottle of cider; mix it well, and, if possible, place it on ice. Add, before sent in, a glass of brandy, and a few pieces of cucumber rind.

····75···· NECTAR PUNCH

INFUSE the peel of fifteen lemons in a pint and a half of rum for forty-eight hours, add two quarts of cold water with three pints of rum, exclusive of the pint and a half; also the juice of the lemons, with two quarts of boiling hot milk, and one grated nutmeg; pour the milk on the above, and let it stand twenty-four hours, covered close; add two pounds and a half of loaf sugar; then strain it through a flannel bag till quite fine, and bottle it for use. It is fit to use as soon as bottled.

Prepared Punch and Punch Essences

A GLASS of punch, with all the et ceteras, is an excellent thing; the main difficulty about it is that, outside of a wellappointed barroom, the necessary ingredients are not usually found ready to hand at the moment when they are indispensable; and, even under the most favorable circumstances, it is not everyone that knows the precise proportions and happy blending of flavors that constitute a perfect glass of punch.

The enlightenment of the present day is full of short cuts to comfort, and all the impediments in the way of enjoying a social glass of punch, compounded according to the latest discoveries of the art, are obviated by having a bottle of the desired nectar in a concentrated essence form, ready brewed in exact proportions, and nothing needed but a moderate supply of hot or cold water, or ice, to adjust it to the correct strength and temperature, and a glass to receive the welcome libation.

The following recipes for concocting the latest and most improved varieties of punch are intended for bottling for ready use.

Cocktails

THE cocktail is a modern invention, and is generally used on fishing and other sporting parties, although some patients insist that it is good in the morning as a tonic. (Editor's note — The cocktail shaker had not been invented when Professor Thomas wrote, hence he advises the employment of small and large bar glasses. The modern student who may attempt to duplicate the Professor's experiments will perhaps prefer to use the shaker.)

THE author has always used this recipe in compounding the above beverage for connoisseurs. Whiskey and gin cocktails, in bottles, may be made by using the above recipe, and substituting those liquors instead of brandy.

Crusta

THE crusta is an improvement on the cocktail, and is said to have been invented by Santina, a celebrated Spanish caterer.

Use small bar glass

CRUSTA is made the same as a fancy cocktail, with a little lemon juice and a small lump of ice added. First, mix the ingredients in a small tumbler, then take a fancy red wineglass, rub a sliced lemon around the rim of the same, and dip it in pulverized white sugar, so that the sugar will adhere to the edge of the glass. Pare half a lemon the same as you would an apple (all in one piece) so that the paring will fit in the wineglass, and strain the crusta from the tumbler into it. Then smile.

Adepts at the bar, in serving Tom and Jerry, sometimes adopt a mixture of one-half brandy, one-fourth Jamaica rum, and one-fourth Santa Cruz rum, instead of brandy plain. This compound is usually mixed and kept in a bottle, and a wineglassful is used to each tumbler of Tom and Jerry.

Pour a teacupful of the liqueur into a mortar, and beat up a drachm of powdered alum, and an equal quantity of carbonate of potash; pour this, when well mixed, into the bottle, shake it well, and in a week you will find the curaçao perfectly transparent, and equal in flavor to that imported from Malines, or any other place in the universe.

A curious story about the origin of this drink is thus told by the New York Herald:

"There are some mixed drinks that are standbys, and are always popular, such as cocktails, punches and juleps; but every little while there will be a new racket sprung on the public that will have a great run for a time, and then get knocked out by another. About a month ago white plush got its start in this way: There was a country buyer down from New England somewhere, and a party of dry goods men were trying to make it pleasant for him. So they took him into a swell barroom down town, and were going to open sour wine. Same old story, you know; get him full as a balloon and then work him for a big order. It turned out that this countryman was not such a flat as they thought him. Though he had been swigging barrels of hard cider and smuggled Canada whiskey for the last twenty years, he pleaded the temperance business on them; said he never drank, and he guessed he'd just take a glass of water if they'd get him one, as he was kinder thirsty walkin' round so much. Well, that was a set back for the boys. They knew he had lots of money to spend, and he was one of those unapproachable ducks that have got to be warmed up before you can do anything with them.

"' Oh, take something,' they said; ' take some milk.'

"' Well, I guess a glass of milk would go sorter good,' said he.

"Some one suggested kumyss and told him what it was. As they did not have any kumyss in the place they gave him some milk and seltzer. That's about the same thing. One of the boys gave the bartender a wink and he put a dash of whiskey in it. The old man did not get on to it all. He thought it was the seltzer that flavored it. The next round the seltzer was left out altogether and more whiskey put in. They kept on giving it to him until he got pretty well set up. It's a very insidious and seductive drink. Pretty soon the countryman got funny and tipped his glass over on the table. As it spread around he said:

"' Gosh, it looks like white plush, don't it? '

"'So it does,' said the boys. 'Give the gentleman another yard of white plush, here; ' and the name has stuck to it ever since."

Tuleps

THE julep is peculiarly an American beverage, and in the Southern states is more popular than any other. It was introduced into England by Captain Marryatt,¹ where it is now quite a favorite. The gallant captain seems to have had a penchant for the nectareous drink, and published the recipe in his work on America. We give it in his own words: "I must descant a little upon the mint julep, as it is, with the thermometer at 100 degrees, one of the most delightful and insinuating potations that ever was invented, and may be drunk with equal satisfaction when the thermometer is as low as 70 degrees. There are many varieties, such as those composed of claret, Madeira, etc.; but the ingredients of the real mint julep are as follows. I learned how to make them, and succeeded pretty well. Put into a tumbler about a dozen sprigs of the tender shoots of mint, upon them put a spoonful of white sugar, and equal proportions of peach and common brandy, so as to fill it up one-third, or perhaps a little less. Then take rasped or pounded ice, and fill up the tumbler. Epicures rub the lips of the tumbler with a piece of fresh bineapple, and the tumbler itself is very often incrusted outside with stalactites of ice. As the ice melts, you drink, I once overheard two ladies talking in the next room to me, and one of them said 'Well, if I have a weakness for any one thing, it is for a mint julep! '- a very amiable weakness. and proving her good sense and good taste. They are, in fact, like the American ladies, irresistible."

A Georgia paper recently speaking on this subject says:

"Probably the old-fashioned julep is in its decadence as a public drink, but it does not follow that the art of ¹ Captain Frederick Marryatt, the English naval officer and novelist.

constructing this famous Southern refresher is lost. On the contrary, we have knowledge of several old-fashioned gardens where the mint bed under the southern wall still blooms luxuriantly; where white fingers of household angels come every day about this time of the year and pluck a few sprays of the aromatic herb to build a julep for poor old shaky grandpa, who sits in the shady corner of the veranda with his feet on the rail and his head busy with the olden days. In such a household the art is still preserved. With her sleeves rolled up, the rosy granddaughter stirs sugar in a couple of tablespoonfuls of sparkling water, packs crushed ice to the top of the heavy cut-glass goblet, pours in the mellow whiskey until an overthrow threatens and daintily thrusts the mint sprays into the crevices. And the old man, rousing from his dreams, blesses the vision which seems to rise up from the buried days of his youth, and with his gay nose nestling peacefully in the nosegay at the summit of his midday refresher, quaffs the icy drink, and with a longdrawn sigh of relief sinks back to dream again until the dinner bell sounds its hospitable summons. The mint julep still lives, but it is by no means fashionable. Somehow the idea has gotten abroad that the mint ought to be crushed and shaken up with water and whiskey in equal proportions. No man can fall in love with such a mixture. Poor juleps have ruined the reputation of the South's most famous drink."

You will have an effervescing and delicious negus by this means.

Mulls

...198...

MULLED WINE WITHOUT EGGS

To every pint of wine allow: Sugar and spice to taste. One small tumblerful of water.

In making preparations like the above, it is very difficult to give the exact proportions of ingredients like sugar and spice, as what quantity might suit one person would be to another quite distasteful. Boil the spice in the water until the flavor is extracted, then add the wine and sugar, and bring the whole to the boiling point, then serve with strips of crisp, dry toast, or with biscuit. The spices usually used for mulled wine are cloves, grated nutmeg, and cinnamon or mace. Any kind of wine may be mulled, but port or claret are those usually selected for that purpose; and the latter requires a large proportion of sugar. The vessel that the wine is boiled in must be delicately clean.

Be careful not to pour the mixture into the wine, or the eggs will curdle.

Some persons may prefer more sugar, and the addition of a little allspice, but this is a matter of taste.

...204... RUM FLIP

WHICH Dibdin¹ has immortalized as the favorite beverage of sailors (although we believe they seldom indulge in it) is made by adding a gill of rum to the beer, or substituting rum and water, when malt liquor cannot be procured. The essential in flips of all sorts is, to produce the smoothness by repeated pouring back and forward between two vessels, and beating up the eggs well in the first instance; the sweetening and spices according to taste.

THE BON VIVANT'S COMPANION

Syrups, Essences, Tinctures, Colorings, etc.

...279...

SOLFERINO COLORING

One ounce of solferino.

One gallon of alcohol (95 per cent).

Put them in a bottle, shake well, and in twenty-four hours it will be ready for use.

> ...280... CARAMEL

Seven pounds of loaf sugar. One pint of water.

CRUSH and dissolve the sugar in the water; boil it in a fivegallon copper kettle, stirring occasionally, until it gets brown; when it begins to burn, reduce the fire; let it burn until the smoke becomes offensive to the eyes; then try it by dipping a rod into it, and letting a few drops fall into a glass of cold water; if it settles at the bottom and crystallizes, so that it will crack, it is done. Then take about half a gallon of luke-warm water, and pour it in by degrees, stirring all the time. When thoroughly mixed, filter it while hot through a coarse flannel filter.

....281...

ESSENCE OF COGNAC

One ounce of oil of cognac. (95 per cent). One-half gallon of spirits One gallon of spirits (70 per cent).

SYRUPS, ESSENCES, TINCTURES, ETC.

Two ounces of strong ammonia. One pound of fine black tea. Two pounds of prunes.

DISSOLVE the oil of cognac in the 95 per cent spirits; cork it tightly in a bottle and let it stand three days, frequently shaking it, then add the ammonia.

Mash the prunes (breaking the kernels) and put them with the tea and the 70 per cent spirits into a stone jar of three gallons capacity; cover closely, and let it stand for eight days.

Filter the liquor, and add it to the solution of oil and ammonia. Bottle for use.

This quantity is sufficient for flavoring 100 gallons of brandy.

ESSENCE OF LEMON

One ounce of oil of lemon. One quart of alcohol (95 per cent). One quart of alcohol (95 per cent).

GRIND the citric acid to a powder in a porcelain mortar; dissolve it in the water. Then cut the oil of lemon in the alcohol, and add the acid water.

...283... LEMON SYRUP

Five gallons of gum syrup. One ounce of oil of lemon. Four ounces of tartaric acid. One pint of alcohol.

CUT the oil of lemon in the alcohol, add the tartaric acid, and mix thoroughly with the syrup.

GUM SYRUP

Fourteen pounds of loaf su- One gallon of water. gar.

Boil together for five minutes, and add water to make up to two gallons.

.... 2 8 5

AROMATIC TINCTURE

One ounce of ginger. One ounce of cinnamon. One ounce of orange peel. One-half ounce of valerian. Two quarts of alcohol.

MACERATE the ingredients in the alcohol in a close vessel for fourteen days, then filter through filtering paper. This is sometimes employed to give a flavor to milk punch, but it must be used with precaution. Ten drops are sufficient for a pint of punch.

TINCTURE OF CINNAMON

PLACE two pounds of ground cinnamon in a jar with one gallon 95 per cent alcohol, closely covered. At the end of eight days strain the liquor clear; wash the sediment with one quart proof spirits; strain it; mix the two liquors together, and filter through blotting paper.

TINCTURE OF CLOVES

TAKE one pound of ground cloves; warm them over a fire until quite hot; put them quickly into a jar, pour on them one gallon 95 per cent alcohol, cover them airtight, and let them stand for ten days. Draw off into bottles and cork close.

Scene at the Stage Door of a New York Theater in 1868

TINCTURE OF ORANGE PEEL

One pound of dried orange One gallon of spirits (95 per peel (ground). cent).

PLACE them in a closely corked vessel for ten days. Strain and bottle for use.

...289... TINCTURE OF LEMON PEEL

Cut into small chips the peel of twelve large lemons. Place it in a glass jar and pour over it one gallon spirits, 70 per cent. Let it stand until the lemon peel has all sunk to the bottom of the liquor. It is then ready for use without either filtering or straining.

...290...

TINCTURE OF ALLSPICE

THIS is prepared in the same manner as tincture of cinnamon, using ground allspice instead of cinnamon.

Temperance Drinks

...291... MILK AND SELTZER Use large soda glass

FILL the glass half full of milk, and the remaining half with seltzer water.

LEMONADE POWDERS

ONE pound of finely-powdered loaf sugar, one ounce of tartaric or citric acid, and twenty drops of essence of lemon. Mix, and keep very dry. Two or three teaspoonfuls of this stirred briskly in a tumbler of water will make a very pleasant glass of lemonade. If effervescent lemonade be desired, one ounce of carbonate of soda must be added to the above.

...293... LEMONADE

Use large bar glass

The rind of two lemons.One-half pound of loafJuice of three large lemons.sugar.One quart of boiling water.

RUB some of the sugar, in lumps, on two of the lemons until they have imbibed all the oil from them, and put it with the remainder of the sugar into a jug; add the lemon juice (but no pits) and pour over the whole a quart of boiling water. When the sugar has dissolved, strain the lemonade through a piece of muslin, and, when cool, it will be ready for use.

The lemonade will be much improved by having the white of an egg beaten up with it; a little sherry mixed with it also makes this beverage much nicer.

... 2 9 4 . . . OR AN GE ADE

THIS agreeable beverage is made the same way as lemonade, substituting oranges for lemons.

ORGEAT LEMONADE

STIR up well, and remove the ice before serving.

Seltzer Lemonade may be made by substituting seltzer water for the soda.

...298... EGG LEMONADE Use large bar glass

One large tablespoonful of pulverized white sugar.One fresh egg.Juice of half a lemon.Two or three small lumps of ice.

SHAKE up thoroughly, strain into a soda-water glass and fill up the glass with soda or seltzer water. Ornament with berries.

...299... SODA NECTAR Use large tumbler

Juice of one lemon.Powdered white sugar toThree-quarters tumblerfultaste.of water.One-half small teaspoonfulof carbonate of soda.

TEMPERANCE DRINKS

STRAIN the juice of the lemon, and add it to the water, with sufficient white sugar to sweeten the whole nicely. When well mixed, put in the soda, stir well, and drink while the mixture is in an effervescing state.

...300...

DRINK FOR THE DOG DAYS

A BOTTLE of soda water poured into a large goblet, in which a lemon ice has been placed, forms a deliciously cool and refreshing drink; but should be taken with some care, and positively avoided whilst you are very hot.

... 301... Sherbet

EIGHT ounces of carbonate of soda, six ounces of tartaric acid, two pounds of loaf sugar (finely powdered), three drachms of essence of lemon. Let the powders be very dry. Mix them intimately, and keep them for use in a widemouthed bottle, closely corked. Put two good-sized teaspoonfuls into a tumbler; pour in half a pint of cold water, stir briskly, and drink off.

...302... LEMON SHERBET

FOUR lemons sliced, four ounces of lump sugar, one quart of boiling water. Very fine. A cheaper drink may be made thus: One ounce of cream of tartar, one ounce tartaric or citric acid, the juice and peel of two lemons, and half a pound, or more, of loaf sugar. The sweetening must be regulated according to taste.

...303.-.

IMPERIAL DRINK FOR FAMILIES

Two ounces of cream of tartar, the juice and peel of two or three lemons, and half a pound of coarse sugar. Put these into a gallon pitcher, and pour on boiling water. When cool it will be fit for use.

... 304... NECTAR

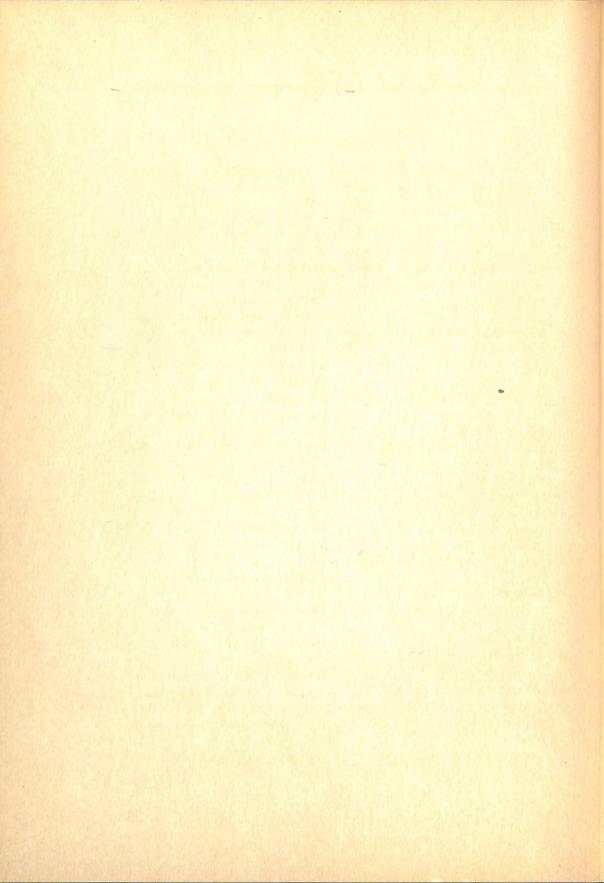

ONE drachm of citric acid, one scruple of bicarbonate of potash, one ounce of white sugar, powdered. Fill a sodawater bottle nearly full of water, drop in the potash and sugar, and lastly the citric acid. Cork the bottle up immediately, and shake. As soon as the crystals are dissolved, the nectar is fit for use. It may be colored with a small portion of cochineal.

...305... RASPBERRY, STRAWBERRY, CURRANT OR ORANGE EFFERVESCING DRAUGHTS

TAKE one quart of the juice of either of the above fruits, filter it, and boil it into a syrup, with one pound of powdered loaf sugar. To this add one ounce and a half of tartaric acid. When cold put it into a bottle, and keep it well corked. When required for use, fill a half-pint tumbler three parts full of water, and add two tablespoonfuls of the syrup. Then stir in briskly a small teaspoonful of carbonate of soda, and a very delicious drink will be formed. The color may be improved by adding a very small portion of cochineal to the syrup at the time of boiling.

...306... GINGER WINE

Put twelve pounds of loaf sugar and six ounces of powdered ginger into six gallons of water; let it boil for an hour, then beat up the whites of half a dozen eggs with a whisk, and mix them well with the liquor. When quite cold put it into a barrel, with six lemons cut into slices, and a cupful of yeast; let it work for three days, then put it in the bung. In a week's time you may bottle it, and it will be ready for immediate use.

"Internal Revenue"

"Herbert Asbury's reprint edition of Jerry Thomas's Bon Vivant's Companion, or How to Mix Drinks (first published in 1862) is an admirable contribution to our social history. Jerry Thomas's fame is secure; as the inventor of the Tom and Jerry his glory, I hope, endureth as long as men remember how cold weather used to be mitigated."

Professor Jerry Thomas Preparing a Blue Blazer at the old Metropolitan

Who Was Jerry Thomas?

In his delightful introduction to Professor Thomas' famous volume of time-tried recipes, Herbert Asbury, author of "Barbary Coast", says:

"Jerry Thomas was the greatest drink mixer of his age; his praises were sung by enlightened and Christian men from the Gulf of Mexico to the barren coast of Maine, from the Golden Gate to Broadway. It was Jerry Thomas—rise, please —who invented those celebrated cold weather beverages which have come down to us as the Blue Blazer and the Tom and Jerry.

The day he was born his fond parents looked down at the wailing babe and dedicated him to the Ministry. He grew up, however, to administer to the awakened palates of millions of his fellowmen.

> There are still no drinks like the old drinks, like those Jerry Thomas showered upon a delighted world many years ago, and you'll find more then 300 of them in this new edition of
