Princess Senoia

Senoya He-ne-ha was the wife of Captain William McIntosh. Their son, Chief William McIntosh was both a General in the army and a chief in his band of Creek Indians. Senoya was a member of the prestigious Wind Clan of the Creek Indians. She was also known as, "Princess Senoya."

Senoya was a member of the important Wind Clan. The Muskogee's (the true name of the Creek Indian Nation) believed that their clans, like all their important social institutions originated in the ancient past. According to legend, it was believed that their early knowledge of their environment was "buried and covered as it were in a dense fog impenetrable to their powers of vision. Being unable to see (understand) they were dependent on their other senses to obtain subsistence." In their quest for survival, the people became separated. "After a great while there arose a wind from the east that gradually drove the fog from the land. The group of people who first saw clearly was given the name of the Wind Clan." As the fog continued to recede other groups of people came to light; and, as each looked about, it adopted the symbol of the clan by which it would thereafter be known, the first live animal which had emerged from the fog along with it. In this manner, the leading four clans (Hathagalgi) were established and were recognized as leaders in the establishment and maintenance of peace in the nation.

Since the clan title passed through the mother's side of the family, McIntosh inherited the leadership role which was so dominant in establishing present-day Coweta County. Furthermore, the eastern part of a plot of land took on the greatest significance. Within Creek legend, East Coweta would be the most hallowed ground within the county.

Here under the Friday night lights at East Coweta High School, you will find our representation of "Princess Senoia" as she rides on her horse and throws her spear before the first kick off of every home game. Lindsey Mons, Senior, is currently serving as Princess Senoia. The first horseback riding Princess Senoia at ECHS began in 1988, by Kelly Snyder. Some other alumni who also had the honor of serving as our Princess Senoia were Rachel Boren and Lauren Cheek.

Don't Forget to...

We get you out of pain, and back in the game.

Our goal is restoration of health and improved quality of life through state-of-the-art orthopaedic joint surgery using innovative techniques.

While technology and the latest equipment are part of our service, it is our physicians' knowledge and experience that make the difference in each patient's individualized care. Our physicians have years of experience in diagnosing, treating, and specialized training in every area of orthopaedics and will treat patients of all ages of life, beginning at age two. Georgia Bone and Joint's premier orthopaedic facility will continue to provide the traditional approach for all total joint replacements and is one of the few clinics in metro Atlanta offering the following cutting-edge procedures.

The Anterior Approach Hip Replacement

This joint replacement surgery is minimally invasive and uses the most minimal incision, located on the front of the hip. In this approach, the surgeon is able to move the muscles aside rather than cutting through them. This creates less damage and trauma to the soft tissues around the hip, which allows for less pain and a much quicker recovery time.

Partial Knee Replacement

Also referred to as a "unicompartmental" knee replacement, this is a less extensive operation. To qualify for a partial joint replacement, the arthritis must be confined to a limited area. The knee has three compartments - medial, lateral, and patellofemoral (kneecap region) - and arthritis can involve one, two or all three areas. One would be a candidate for a partial joint replacement if only the inner (medial) or outer (lateral) part of the knee is damaged. Patients whose arthritis is widespread would need a total joint replacement. The option of the partial knee replacement allows the patient to maintain the currently healthy bone and cartilage within their knees.

Pediatric Orthopaedic Services

Georgia Bone and Joint is one of the only orthopaedic practices on the south side of Atlanta with a full-time pediatric orthopaedic surgeon on staff. Children as young as two years of age may be treated at our facility for scoliosis, fractures, joint pain, deformity, and many other pediatric orthopaedic conditions.

Kyphoplasty for Vertebral Compression Fractures

Kyphoplasty is a minimally invasive procedure for the treatment of spinal compression fractures due to osteoporosis, cancer, or benign lesions. We are able to perform this outpatient innovative technique for spinal pain on-site.

The Reverse Total Shoulder Replacement

While most people experience relief after the traditional shoulder replacement, severely arthritic patients that lack the muscle function necessary to stabilize this joint may be candidates for the Reverse Total Shoulder Replacement. This procedure is available to a number of patients and will provide pain relief, as well as a stabilized and functioning shoulder.

Georgia Bone and Joint has over 30 years of history serving Coweta and Fayette Counties
