CABIN FILTERS

What they are?

Almost 95% of new vehicles are fitted with a cabin air filter, whether or not they have air-conditioning. Cabin air filters are intended to keep the air quality inside the car as fresh as possible.

There are two types of Cabin Filters:

Standard Pollen Filter

Pollen filters work to remove pollen particles from the outside air before it's passed into the cabin via the air conditioning or heater system.

Pollen cabin air filters stop all particles smaller than 1 micron, such as bacteria, pollen, and exhaust gases. This effect captures even the smallest allergenic particles, including those that may not be stopped by nasal hairs or the mucus in the upper respiratory tract, and that could enter the lungs provoking asthma and allergies.

Activated Carbon Filter

Carbon filters do more than standard pollen filter and they also stop odours, from entering the vehicle cabin. The filter medium used consists of three layers: an active carbon layer placed between two layers of non-woven fibres. This special structure reduces the concentration of noxious and odorous gases that can provoke headaches and coughing.

There is one area where standard filters fall a bit short, and that is when they are forced to deal with atmospheric pollutants like carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide. These gases can become quite concentrated on stretches of road that see bumper-to-bumper traffic, and in some cases the level of CO2 inside a vehicle can be three times as high as the environmental level, due to the concentrating effects of the passenger compartment ventilation system and the lack of protection afforded by a standard filter.

Why is it important to change them as part of a standard service?

Many garages do not realize that up to 75% of car climate problems are in fact caused by a blocked cabin air filter; there is no need to interfere with the Air Conditioning system in order to replace the cabin air filter. Upgrading is quite straightforward: simply replace a particle filter with an activated carbon filter.

It is recommended that workshop professionals explain the importance and benefits of the cabin filter for the protection of all vehicle occupants which should enhance sales of this lucrative service item.

The cabin filter should be replaced annually, vehicle manufacturers recommend replacing it every 12,000 miles. Cabin filters create a pleasant and healthy atmosphere inside the car. Particularly for children, people with allergies and asthmatics, protecting the vehicle occupants is of paramount importance.

Cabin air filters represent a great opportunity to upsell an important service part.

OEM Quality ENGINE MOUNTS

Engine mounts play an essential role in the anti-vibration system and filter all vibrations from entering the passenger compartment.

It is essential to replace them when required to not only maintain comfort and safety, but also to prevent premature wear of sensitive components on the chassis (wishbones, steering rack, shock absorbers) or engine (belts, exhaust manifold, gearbox etc).

Symptoms of a worn Engine Mount:

- Vibration in gear levers
- Loss of steering precision
- Vibration in the steering wheel or dashboard
- Banging noises in the suspension system
- Very pronounced movements of the gearbox during acceleration and braking
- Vibrating or broken exhaust systems

Brake Pads

Pagid manufacture a full range of brake pads to give wide vehicle parc coverage. All Pagid pads are manufactured in OE accredited factories located entirely within the EU, to O.E. specification, including more than 20 types of noise fix and packaged accessories.

Brake Discs

With a brake disc for every pad in the Pagid range, Pagid brake pads and discs offer the optimum friction solution. 100% of the Pagid brake disc are "Geomet" coated – ideal for vehicles with alloy wheels as the coating prevents corrosion. ASB / ABS technology brake discs are available in the Pagid range – straight out of the box and onto the vehicle. Furthermore, high carbon brake discs are available where applicable.

Original GKN Parts

GKN LÖBRO Propshafts

The Propshaft is a significant element in power transmission therefore the quality of the propshaft has to be to the highest standard. There is a standard of material quality, manufacturing processes and testing which GKN provide.

GKN offer a portfolio of high-quality Propshaft solutions for passenger cars, SUV's and the LCV market to offer garages to benefit from the high quality and reliability of the OE brand. As it stands, the GKN Propshaft range covers over 300 vehicle applications.

Each driveshaft is tailored, tuned and harmonised to suit the characteristics and performance requirements of each application.

Key Features of GKN propshafts include:

- One, two and three piece configurations
- Steel, aluminium or composite tube materials
- Propshafts for small and large deflection angles
- Weight reduced parts by virtue of optimised materials and joint selection
- NVH analysis and tuning
- Optimised lifetime at high speeds
- High torsional stiffness
- Optimised crash behaviour

Propshaft vibration is very similar to wheel vibration and may be caused by one of the following:

- A new vehicle where there is a driveline fault
- A modified vehicle where angles or installation are incorrect
- An old Propshaft with worn components
- A balance weight falling off
- Accident damage to the Propshaft or mating flanges
- A poorly repaired shaft

Double Clutch Transmission or DSG Gearbox

Many people liked automatic gearboxes because of their two pedal operation, however they were relatively sluggish at changing gear and significantly increased fuel consumption.

The DSG system gives the driver the benefit of having an automatic transmission with the option of switching to "Sports Mode" a semi-automatic transmission where the driver chooses gearing and increased fuel economy over a conventional automatic gearbox.

The DSG system works by having two gearboxes and two clutches. When you pull away in 1st gear the second gearbox already has second gear lined up for the change. Clutch number one disengages first gear and clutch number two engages second gear for a near instantaneous change. Coupled with some clever electronics the gearbox can predict whether your next change will be up or down.

LuK had to design a very sophisticated double clutch to match the gearbox technology and it will be no surprise to you that special training and tools are needed to change a DSG clutch, in fact LuK will not supply a DSG clutch to a garage that cannot prove it has been certified to carry out this repair.

SPECIAL TOOL

Using special tools is an absolute MUST to ensure correct removal and installation of the double clutch. This ensures professional repairs and prevents damage to the clutch and transmission.

Below table shows overview of tool kit applications:

APPLICATION		AUDI, Seat Skoda, VW	AUDI, Seat Skoda, VW	Renault
		1st Generation	2nd Generation
TOOL KIT	Basic Tool Kit, Part Number - 528 77 3430	X	X	X
	Volkswagen Tool Kit, Part Number - 528 77 3460	X	X
	Renault Tool Kit, Part Number - 528 77 3440			X

ECP offers this highly essential training completely free of charge when you buy the DSG special tool.

DSG CLUTCH KITS

The LuK RepSet® 2CT (Twin Clutch Technology) includes all the necessary components to replace the double clutch transmission. It is recommended that this system be entirely replaced as a matter of course due to the scope of repair required. A combination of used parts and new parts from the LUK RepSet® 2CT is not permitted. And would result in complete loss of warranty.
