HBCC TENNIS NEWS

PERFECTING THE SERVE

One of the most common statements we hear is, "My serve is weak. How can I serve faster?"

Usually there are two areas we can look at straight away that limit the pace and consistency of the serve: the ball toss and follow through.

THE TOSS

The ball toss is one of the most important, if not THE most important, aspects of the serve. Think about it, if your ball toss is not consistent, how can you have a consistent serve? If your ball toss is different each time, you actually have a different serve each time.

When working on the ball toss we focus on three important factors.

- #1 - RELAX When starting your serve, ensure that you are relaxed and focused on the serve. A relaxed ball toss arm, with the wrist laid back, will help you replicate the ball toss time and time again.
- #2 - WEIGHT TRANSFER Ideally we want to transfer our weight onto the front foot when releasing the ball. By starting on the back foot and transferring the weight to the front foot, it helps us to ensure the ball toss is in front. Often we will see players consistently tossing the ball behind themselves, and most often the problem is they are transferring their weight backwards.
- #3 - BALL TOSS RELEASE & POSITION We speak to our players about reaching up to release the ball. Too often players will "throw" the ball causing an inconsistent toss position. By reaching up and "placing" the ball into position, we find that you will become much more consistent with getting the ball into the correct hitting position. The contact position should be in line with the right shoulder and approx. 1 foot in front of the baseline.

THE FOLLOW THROUGH - ACCELERATING THROUGH CONTACT

The follow through after contact shows us a lot about what is actually happening at contact. Many players will stop their swing just after contact thinking this will give them more control, when in fact it results in a weaker serve. If your swing is stopping just after contact, it means that your racquet was decelerating on contact with the ball. To help increase pace on serves, we want to focus on accelerating the racquet head through contact and toward the target. By accelerating through, this will also help you become more consistent and accurate with your serve.

Try these couple of tips to get more pace and consistency on your serve, and be sure to check in next month as we break down the backhand!!!
