HALF-YEARLY GENERAL MEETING.

A Half-yearly General Meeting of the Society was held on Thursday, 9th May, at the Solicitors' Buildings, Four Courts, Dublin, the President, Mr. Henry P. Mayne, in the chair.

The following members were also present: Messrs. James F. D'Arcy (Vice-President), C. G. Stapleton (Vice-President), P. R. Boyd, E. H. Burne, W. S. Hayes, W. S. Huggard, M. E. Knight, E. J. Mallins, W. McA. McCracken, W. J. Norman, Peter O'Connor, L. E. O'Dea, S. O hUadhaigh, T. G. Quirke, A. G. Joyce, J. R. McC. Blakeney, J. J. Walsh, J. Horgan, H. E. M. W. Flanagan, D. Fitzgerald, E. A. J. Plunkett, L. J. Egan, D. J. Mayne, V. E. Kirwan, J. D. Hollinger, M. Horan, D. B. Gilmore, C. J. Rutherfoord, J. D. Moran, H. H. Hurley, S. Hayes, P. K. M. Carey, G. Crowley, J. J. O'Connor.

The Secretary read the notice convening the meeting and the Minutes of the Halfyearly General Meeting held on the 27th November, 1939, the latter of which were signed by the President.

On the motion of Mr. Stapleton, Vice-President, seconded by Dr. Quirke, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"That Mr. A. E. Prentice, Mr. P. Glynn and Mr. E. J. O'Brien be appointed Auditors of the Society's accounts for year ending 30th April, 1940."

The President nominated the following members to be Scrutineers of Ballot for election of Council to be held in November next: Mr. H. G. Sweetman, Mr. Desmond J. Collins, Mr. Thomas Jackson, Mr. R. McC. Blakeney and Mr. C. W. Grove-White.

THE PRESIDENT, addressing the meeting, said:--

Since the meeting of the Society held on the 27th November last we have lost through death an unusually large number of members of our profession. I cannot allow this occasion to pass without making special reference to the late Mr. John J. Duggan whose death occurred with startling suddeness on the 23rd February. He had attended a meeting of the Council on the 15th February, and had taken, as he always did, an active part in the proceedings. At a further meeting on the 22nd February we learned with much concern that Mr. Duggan had become seriously ill that morning. The next day the end came.

To many of you Mr. Duggan was known as a Solicitor of great distinction, occupying the position in our profession to which his outstanding ability and high character entitled him. To those of us who served on the Council as his colleague, his death caused a feeling of personal loss hard to express.

The ability and robust commonsense which Mr. Duggan brought to bear on every problem which came before the Council, and the energy and tact which he displayed, not only during his year of presidency, but at all times, in his work for the profession will not nedian of cent of elicity do the be forgotten by those who worked with him. Yet I venture to say that great as were his talents, and strenuous and successful as was his work for the profession, his colleagues will best remember John J. Duggan as a great gentleman, with qualities of heart and character, not easy to analyse or define, which inspired not only admiration and respect, but affectionate regard in those who had the privilege of his friendship.

I also wish briefly to refer to the late Mr. James A. Denning, a former member of our profession, who served on the Council of the Society up to the year 1914 when he was appointed as Taxing Master. To the younger members of the profession Mr. Denning can only have been known as Taxing Master, but many in this Hall to-day will recall him to mind as a distinguished practising Solicitor and a loyal colleague. He died full of years and honour, and with many of us his memory will long remain.

The late Mr. Thomas Ireland for many years acted as one of the honorary auditors of the Society's accounts. He was a much respected member of our profession. His death and the deaths of many others of our professional brethren are deeply deplored.

During the last six months the Council has been unusually busy in attending to matters affecting our profession. A great deal of work has been done, not all of which can at the moment be referred to in detail. One of the principal matters engaging the time and close attention of the Council may possibly be the subject of a special meeting of the Society at a later date.

LAND REGISTRY.

As a result of representations made by the Council to the Registrar of Titles a change has been introduced into the Office practice, and for the future Solicitors lodging copies of Folios to be written up will receive them back with the copies of the revised Folios when issued. The Registrar who has at all times carefully considered suggestions from the Council in reference to improvements in Office practice, has emphasised the advantages from the point of view of Solicitors of the revision of Folios, resulting in a lessening of labour in tracing out-of-date entries of dealings with registered land no longer pertinent to the title.

LAW REPORTS.

The Council through its representatives on the Incorporated Council of Law Reporting has raised a question about the method and expense of obtaining official copies of judgments required for Appeals, or other purposes. Our representations on the subject were sympathetically received, and while it is too soon to say that the grievances put forward will be wholly remedied, I have great hopes that an arrangement will be made for a more equitable system of charges. We recognise the great difficulties besetting the path of the Council of Law Reporting in its endeavours, with resources wholly inadequate to the task, to continue the official reporting of decided cases, without which the work of the Courts would be severely hampered. We can only hope that the sympathy of the Government may be enlisted and that a substantial grant, adequate to the necessity of the case may be forthcoming. I think our own Society might fairly be asked to increase the annual grant of thirty pounds which we make to this important work.

LEGAL TEXT BOOKS.

Somewhat similar to the difficulties of maintaining adequate law reporting are the difficulties confronting the Council in the matter of text books to be prescribed and recommended for our professional examinations. The list of such books is revised every year in consultation with the Special Examiners. The text books suitable for the use of our apprentices in some branches of law, notably the law of real property, are few in number, for the recent editions of standard English Text books deal only with English law of property which since the year 1925 has undergone revolutionary changes. We are therefore thrown back upon text books written before 1925 which is not altogether satisfactory, but the difficulty already exists and every year is becoming more acute that these old editions of the text books are scarce and even second-hand copies are in some cases almost impossible to obtain. So far we . have been able to prescribe books which can, though with difficulty, be obtained, but unless more Irish text books are produced, the day is approaching when legal education in this country will be seriously hampered.

EXAMINATION RESULTS.

A year ago Mr. Reilly, my predecessor in the chair, referred at some length to the falling-off in the standard of answering at our examinations which was a matter of concern to the Council. I regret to say that at any rate so far as the Final Examination is concerned there has been no improvement. For a considerable time even a special certificate has seldom been achieved, and at times the standard has been so low that the Council has felt unable to award the valuable Findlater Scholarship. As against this very unsatisfactory state of affairs, we are able to record a marked improvement in the results of recent Examinations in the Irish language. I do not say that there is necessarily any close connection between the improvement in the one case and the disimprovement in the other, but I desire to impress upon candidates for our examinations that proficiency in the Irish language, while a condition precedent to entry to the profession, must not be achieved at the expense of a knowledge of law and practice, and that the Society has no intention of lowering the standard of legal education and knowledge required for admission to the profession. In fact it may be found necessary to follow the tendency exhibited by other professions and to prescribe even stricter and more onerous tests of proficiency before passing apprentices into the responsibilities of practice.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE SOCIETY.

At the risk of being accused of lack of originality I venture to repeat the appeal so often made by my predecessors in office for an increase in membership of the Society. I am of course, aware that all of you whom I am addressing are members, but through your efforts others of our professional brethren who so far have not joined the Society might very well be approached with a request to do what to my mind is their obvious duty. In particular I would appeal to every Solicitor who has an apprentice to see that the advantages of membership are · impressed upon him or her. I have recently seen a statement that the English Law Society is seeking an Act of Parliament which will make membership of the Law Society compulsory for all Solicitors. I am not sure that such a method of obtaining members for our Society would be desirable even if it were feasible, but I trust that the day will come when every Solicitor admitted will voluntarily as a matter of duty to his profession and to his own interest, join the Society.

The Meeting then terminated.

The Council of Law Reporting informed the President and Dr. Quirke of the financial difficulties involved and undertook to discuss the matter more fully later on and to submit further particulars.

Land Commission.

A letter was read from a member drawing attention to delays on the part of the Land Commission in the noting of assignments of lands not yet vested. It was directed that a letter be written to the Land Commission drawing attention to this matter.

Blake represented Galway Solicitors, and Mr. Blood-Smyth represented Limerick Solicitors. The Chairman and Hon. Secretary of the Dublin Solicitors' Bar Association were also present.

After considerable discussion the deputation was informed that applications from Solicitors practising in the four cities, stating reasons and necessities for special consideration for increased allowance of petrol, based exclusively on wants for professional purposes, and stating registration number, make, and horse-power of car, would receive consideration; the applications in cases of Solicitors members of the Incorporated Law Society, other than members of Dublin Solicitors' Bar Association, to be countersigned by the Secretary of the Society; in cases of applications by members of the Dublin Solicitors' Bar Association, by the Hon. Secretary of that Association; in cases of applications by members of the Southern Law Association, countersigned by the Hon. Secretary, and in cases of Galway and Limerick, by the Hon. THE IRISH, AGRICULTURAL ORGANISATION SOCIETY.

At a recent meeting of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society a communication from the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society in reference to the transfer of shares in Co-operative Creameries was considered.

The communication pointed out that owing to the failure of Shareholders in many Cooperative Societies to transfer their shares in accordance with the Rules of the Societies when disposing of their farms such shares could not be transferred to new owners on the deaths of the shareholders in the absence of legal personal representatives of such shareholders.

It frequently transpired that on the death of a farmer, who had transferred his farm in his lifetime, that his only assets were the few shares in the local Creamery and as the expense of extracting administration was generally out of proportion to the value of the shares no steps were taken to raise representation to his estate with the result that such shares could not be legally transferred to a new owner.

The I.A.O.S. have suggested that solicitors, particularly those practising in the country, might favourably consider drawing the attention of their clients to this matter when farms are being transferred, and thus assist the Committees of Co-operative Societies in keeping the share registers up-to-date.

The Council were of opinion that the suggestion of the I.A.O.S. is worthy of the consideration of all practising solicitors.

The President, addressing the Meeting, said:—

Since the last half-yearly meeting of the Society we have lost through death a large number of members of our profession. I wish to pay a brief-tribute to the memory of two past members of our Council who faithfully discharged the duties of their offices and whose deaths are deplored by all who knew them.

Mr. John Fottrell was a member of the Council from 1900 to 1913 and was a Vice-President of the Society in the year 1902-3. Although he had retired from practice sometime before his death, many in this Hall will remember him as an active member of our profession, carrying into our own day the high tradition of a family which for a hundred years has borne an honoured name in the legal life of our country.

. Within the last few days the Society and our profession has suffered a great loss in the death of an honoured and beloved Past President. The late Mr. Robert G. Warren served on the Council for a long period and occupied the presidential chair in the year 1918-1919. I think only three of the members of the outgoing Council served under Mr. Warren as President, but many of us remember him as a wise and loyal colleague ever ready to place his long experience and sound judgment at the disposal of the Council or indeed of any member of the profession who sought his aid.

To the relatives of both these past members of the Council I beg to tender on behalf of the Society an expression of sympathy.

It is satisfactory to note that during the past year the membership of the Society has increased by the substantial figure of fortyone. As mentioned in the Report, this happy state of affairs must be attributed to the speech made by my predecessor in the chair, Mr. D. J. Reilly, at the meeting in November 1939 Mr. Reilly thus closed his year of office, in which he did such splendid work for the profession, by an appeal which proved successful beyond expectation, though not beyond its skill or merits. I should like to think that Mr. Reilly's appeal has not yet spent its force and that the membership of the Society will show a further increase during 1941.

The principal matters which have engaged the attention of the Council during the past year are mentioned in the Annual Report, and I need not weary you by referring at length to all of them. I think the record shews that the Council has looked after the interests of the profession with care and diligence. It is probably unnecessary to say that by far the greater part of the work of the Council is not that which finds its way into the Annual Report, but is nevertheless of the highest importance to the profession at large, to individual members of the Society and to the public.

I may, however, be excused if I occupy your attention for a short time in referring particularly to one very important matter which occupied the Council during the past: year, namely, the production of a draft Bill, which if, and when, it receives the approval of the Society, will be introduced into Parliament, and it is to be hoped will in due course pass into law.

At page 9 of the Annual Report appears a brief account of the origin of the Bill and the steps so far taken in regard to it.

The Council approached the task imposed upon it by the resolution of the Annual Meeting of November, 1937, with a feeling of great responsibility. It became evident at the start that the direction given to the Council by the resolution could only be effected by means of an Act to confer additional powers on the Society. The first point to be decided was whether to promote a Bill to amend the Act of 1898 in certain particulars only or to seek a more comprehensive measure effecting such changes in the law as were considered necessary or. desirable in relation to the profession and giving the Society wider powers than it now has by law. This is not an opportune time to explain the provisions of the draft Bill or to debate its merits. The draft has been sent to each local Solicitors' Bar Association throughout the country, and copies will be available for perusal in the Society's library. but it is felt that a reasonable time should be given to enable the members of the Society to acquaint themselves with the provisions of the Bill before proceeding with its consideration.

It is intended in due course to call a special meeting of the Society at which the Bill will be fully, but privately, considered, and the Council will then be prepared to explain the reasons which appeared good to them for seeking a comprehensive measure rather than a mere amending Act, and to give all such information and explanations as may be necessary for its full examination and discussion.

Meanwhile I suggest that every member of the Society who is interested in the matter, and that I hope means the majority of our members, should read the draft Bill and make up his mind as to the desirability or otherwise of the Bill as a whole in its wider bearings.

It is not the wish of the Council that criticism of the Bill should be discouraged or that free discussion should be curtailed, but it will save a great deal of time if members of the Society will consider the Bill in advance of the proposed meeting. I can assure you that an immense amount of care and labour has been expended on the draft Bill by the Committee which was responsible for its preparation in the first instance, and by the Council which considered it line by line.

The draft in its original, intermediate and final forms is the handiwork of Mr. Wakely and of both junior and senior Counsel of great experience, and I think that you may feel satisfied that the actual wording of the draft is not likely to be improved by amendment. I therefore suggest that in examining the Bill you might well confine yourselves for the present, at all events, to a consideration of its broad principles.

Before passing from the Bill I must refer to the immense amount of work which fell upon Mr. Wakely in its preparation. It is a remarkable and very happy result of Mr. Wakely's long tenure of the office of Secretary of the Society that he should have had the responsibility of the Bill which became the Act of 1898 and, after more than forty years interval, should again be engaged on a similar task. I can only say that Mr. Wakely has given of his best in the very heavy labour of preparing the present draft Bill. Much of it is his own original work and the rest is compiled from precedents which, thanks to his vast experience, ripe judgment and almost uncanny memory, he knew how to use and where to find. I should also like to thank Mr. Phelps, K.C. and Mr. Davy, Barrister-at-law, formerly a member of our own profession, for their skill, care and patience in settling the original draft of the Bill, and advising the Committee and the Council on the many points which required elucidation and discussion and in the drafting and re-drafting of fresh clauses and amendments as from time to time became necessary.

In conclusion I would remind you that during the coming year the Society will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its foundation. I expect the occasion will be marked in some suitable manner, but this will be a matter for the consideration of my successor in the chair and the new Council just elected. I hope that the Society at large will assist in making whatever form of recognition of the centenary may be decided on the success which such an auspicious occasion demands.

I beg to move the adoption of the Report.

Mr. Cecil G. Stapleton (Vice-President) seconded the resolution adopting the Report, and Messrs. O'Reilly, O hUadhaigh and Roger Greene having spoken, the President replied and put the motion that the Report be adopted, which was passed unanimously.

Mr. Stapleton (Vice-President), having taken the chair, on the motion of Mr. T. G. Quirke, seconded by Mr. W. S. Hayes, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the President, and Mr. Stapleton having warmly commended this resolution to the meeting it was passed with acclamation.

The President having returned thanks the meeting terminated.

Phayre, J. D. Guinan, F. Reilly, G. A. G. Byrne, G. Crowley, L. Jameson.

The Secretary read the notice convening the meeting and the minutes of the Halfyearly General Meeting held on the 26th November, 1940, the latter of which were signed by the President.

On the motion of Mr. Norman, Vice-President, seconded by Mr. D. O'Connell, Vice-President, the following resolution was unanimously adopted—"that Mr. A. E. Prentice, Mr. P. Glynn and Mr. E. J. O'Brien be appointed auditors of the Society's Accounts for year ending 30th April, 1941.

The President nominated the following members to be scrutineers of Ballot for election of Council to be held on Friday, 21st November, next: Mr. H. G. Sweetman, Mr. Desmond J. Collins, Mr. Thomas Jackson, Mr. R. McC. Blakeney, and Mr. C. W. Grove-White.

The President, addressing the Meeting, said:-

Gentlemen, the first thing I wish to refer to is to members of our profession who have passed away since the last General Meeting. First of all every member of the Council feels with sincere and deep regret the loss occasioned by the death of their colleague, the late Mr. Daniel J. Reilly, who died on the 29th January, 1941. Mr. Reilly was a member of the Council from the year 1925 and was President of the Society for the year 1938-39. Only those intimately associated with him can fully realise what he did for the profession, of which he was an honoured and respected member. I think I have somewhere referred to the strained relationship which existed between country solicitors and the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland when I was a youthful apprentice; happily that relationship no longer existswe are now a happy family; no one has done more to bring that position about than our deceased brother, Dan Reilly.

In January we also lost an esteemed member of our profession, Mr. Claude J. Rutherfoord, who was for many years Law Agent to the Bank of Ireland, and in the same month we lost Mr. James W. Hanrahan. who had been for fifty-seven years Clerk of the Crown and Peace for County Fermanagh and was admitted a Solicitor so far back as 1873. In February we lost Mr. Robert H. Carson, Chief Crown Solicitor for Northern Ireland; he had been Sessional Crown Solicitor for Co. Tyrone from the year 1905 to 1922 and Crown and Sessional Solicitor from 1922 to 1929, and from 1929 he was Chief Crown Solicitor for Northern Ireland. In the same month we lost Mr. Hunt Walsh Leech, who was admitted so far back as 1869. Other respected members of our profession have also passed away.

The number of members of the Society at present is 842, an increase, I am glad to say, as against the number of members last November, when an increase on the previous year from 794 to 835 was reported. We are glad to note that the Society is holding its own particularly so in this centenary year of the Society. The Society, I need hardly point out to you, knows no boundary save Fair Head in Antrim and Mizen Head in Cork, and has no politics.

As you are all aware, on the 17th June next, the Society will have attained the one hundredth anniversary of its existence. It has been referred to a Committee to report as to how most suitably the event can be celebrated by the Council. I am free to tell you that the Committee has met and gone into this question most carefully; their report will in due course come before the Council, and, if confirmed, the purport of it will be circulated. .

As regards the present position and prospects of our profession, I wish I could speak more hopefully. With a serious curtailment of litigation due to the petrol shortage, the curtailment of Land Purchase and the war conditions now prevailing, I am afraid that the position is not a hopeful one, and parents and guardians of intending apprentices have to face the fact that the apprentices are heading for an overcrowded profession. It has been stated that the examinations for the Final have been made more stringent than formerly, and criticism of the Examiners' methods have been made. criticisms are best answered by the fact that at the Final Examination held since our last Half-yearly General Meeting thirtynine new Solicitors have been let loose. This number constituted 70 per cent. of those who sat for the examination. It is to be regretted that for three years in succession ending in 1940, the Findlater Scholarship could not be awarded, the required standard not having been reached, and I am sorry to say that the position of 1941 will not be any better.

There is one other matter I would wish to refer to. When the Courts of Justice Act was passed it was understood that the appointment of District Justices would be divided fifty-fifty between Counsel and Solicitors. For some years past that has not been followed, but I am glad to say that the last appointment was that of a Solicitor. We can only hope that a gentleman's agreement of 1924 will be observed for the future.

The Solicitors' Bill, 1940, has been before the Council on several occasions. The draftof the Bill has been circulated to the different Sessional Bar Associations throughout Eire, and the views of their members have been obtained and received careful consideration. and we hope in the near future to be in a position to hold a General Meeting of the Society to consider the Bill.

CENTENARY.

On the 17th day of June, 1841, The Society of the Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland was instituted. The Society obtained a Charter on the 5th April, 1852, and a supplemental Charter on the 14th December, 1888, and under the latter its title was altered to that of "The Incorporated Law Society of Ireland." On the seventeenth day of June, 1941, the Society attained its centenary. The Council had hoped to celebrate the event in a manner fully appropriate to the occasion but felt that owing to the present national emergency the time was inopportune for the holding of any public social function. The Council has decided in order to mark the event, to found a Centenary Incorported Law Society of Ireland annuity, to be administered by the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, and to invite subscriptions with this object in view from the members of the Society, and it is intended to issue this appeal at an early date.

The President addressing the Meeting said:

There is very little to add to the Report of the Council for the year ending to day, which has been put before you. The membership of your Society shows a small but satisfactory increase following up previous increases; we trust this increase will continue. I wish I could say the same of the general prospects of the profession. Our profession is, an overcrowded one. During this year 67 new solicitors have arrived. Owing to the shortage of petrol and coal, travelling facilities, so important especially for the Country Solicitors, have proved a very serious matter. It now means to me that every time I come to Dublin to attend a Meeting of the Council I am absent three and often four nights. The journey from Cobh to Dublin prior to the curtailment of the train service took three-and-a-half hours. I have recently made the journey from Dublin to Cork in eleven hours, but I am told that many others have been less fortunate. I have made the journey from Cork to my home town, a distance of just over fifty miles, in six-and-a-half hours, but again, I do not hold the record.

The position of the Country Solicitor is at present not a happy one. His city, brother is not much better off. Owing to the shortage of petrol there has been a substantial decrease (I was going to say a regrettable decrease) in the number of actions for personal injuries. Land purchase is also dying out. Legal work of every kind has been badly hit, by the present unsettled economic situation. When the trouble in this country was at its worst the country solicitors were largely fed with Criminal Injury Applications, and while we will not ask for a return of those days nothing has come to replace the shortage of litigation.

As you know this has been the Centenary year of our Society. We have celebrated it by proceeding to establish a permanent annuity to be administered through our very efficient Benevolent Association. I was hoping, and am still hoping, that we would have a sufficient fund to establish an annuity of £40 a year. 'We are still a little short of that mark, but with a strong pull, and a pull' all together, we should be in a position to accomplish it. When we do, many a widow and many an orphan will bless the Centenary year of our Society.

May I venture an optimistic note as to the prospects of our honoured profession. What the veil of the future may hide is not given to man to know, and the darkest hour is that before the dawn, and may we hope and pray that the dawn of the Legal Profession in Eire will soon break; Universal peace would bring that; and may we hope and pray that it will not be long in coming.

I beg to move the adoption of the Report.
Mr. W. J. Norman, Vice-President, seconded the adoption of the Report, and Mr. McLoughlin, Mr. Desmond Moran and Mr. E. H. Burne having spoken, the President replied and put the motion that the Report be adopted, which was passed unanimously.

Mr. Norman, Vice-President, having taken the chair, on the motion of Mr. E. H. Burne, seconded by Mr. O'Connell, Vice-President, and supported by the Chairman, Mr. Norman, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the President who returned thanks and the meeting terminated.

REQUIREMENTS OF DUBLIN CORPORA-TION RE PURCHASING OF HOUSES.

The following is copy of a letter appearing in the Irish Law Times of December 27th, 1941:

> Corporation of Dublin, Streets Section, 1 29 Castle Street, Dublin. 19th December, 1941.

Ine Editor, Irish Law Times.

Dear Sir.

I would ask you to draw the attention of all practising Solicitors to a matter which is of great importance to purchasers of houses and to the Municipality.

2 .a . 23° The Corporation will not take a road into charge and light and maintain it unless such road has been constructed in accordance with the requirements of the Corporation. It is, therefore, advisable that every Solicitor who is acting for a prospective purchaser of a house should, before completing the purchase, enquire from the Corporation whether or not the road on which the house is situated has been constructed to the satisfaction of the Corporation and is in charge, and if there are any charges or notices of the Corporation outstanding against the premises. neglect to make these enquiries occurs, the purchaser may find himself in possession or in occupation, of a house on an unfinished and unlighted road (a state of affairs for which the Corporation is not responsible), with the added disadvantage that the Corporation may, at any time, feel bound to exercise its powers under Section 28 of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878, and reconstruct the road and provide a lighting installation at the expense of the then owners of the houses fronting on the road.

> Yours faithfully, "(Signed) P. J. Hernon, City Manager and Town Clerk.

FOR CIRCULATION AMONGST MEMBERS

DEATH OF MR. WAKELY

It is with feelings of deepest sorrow and regret that we announce the death of the beloved Secretary of our Society, William George Wakely, who died at his residence, "Elmhurst," Temple-Gardens, Rathmines, on the 26th March, 1942.

Mr. Wakely was born on the 20th June, 1865, at Dublin. He was the third son of John Wakely, M.A., J.P., D.L., High Sheriff, 1853, of Ballyburley House, Edenderry, King's County (now Offaly) the family seat for nearly 500 years, and of Mary Catherine, daughter of Reverend Richard George, Rector of Kentstown, Co. Meath. He served his apprenticeship with Thomas Falls of Dublin, obtaining first place and silver medal at his final examination. He was admitted a Solicitor in Michaelmas Sittings, 1887. In the autumn of the following year he was appointed Secretary of the Incorporated Law. Society.

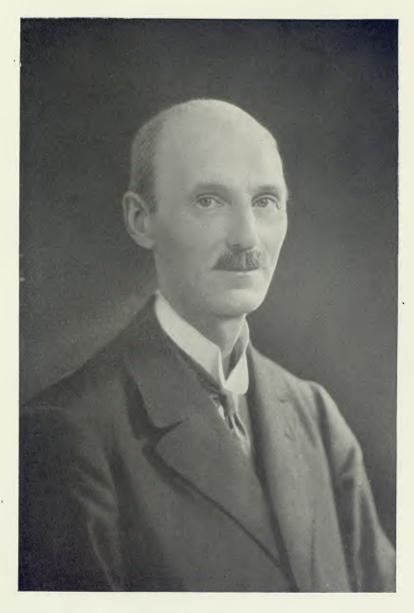

The history of the Society is his life story. When he was appointed Secretary, the Society was working under its Charters with very limited powers. The scope and influence of the Society were considerably extended during his term of Office, and largely as a result of his personality and efforts.

It is hard for the younger members of the profession to realise how vastly matters have changed since 1889.

During the early years of his Secretaryship. the arrangements in the Courts and Court Offices were under review. These reforms included the removal of the Probate Office from 'Henrietta Street to the Four Courts and the codification of the rules of procedure in the Supreme Court. The Council succeeded in having a clause inserted in the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act associating the Presidents for the time being of the Society with the Judges as the rule-making authority. During this first period the Council were actively engaged for some years in drafting a Bill governing the profession which ultimately became law as the Solicitors (Ireland) Act, 1898. This entailed considerable work and anxious thought on the part of the Secretary, necessitating several visits to London, interviews with members of the House of Commons, and with the Law Officers of the crown. Ultimately, however, the Act was passed in the form approved by the Council.

From the date of the passing of these Acts up to the outbreak of the Great War the history of the Society was not marked by any feature now of special interest.

WILLIAM GEORGE WAKELY
BORN 20th JUNE, 1865. DIED 26th MARCH, 1942.
SECRETARY, INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY, 1888—1942.

The severe dislocation of business on the outbreak of the Great War led to much anxiety on the part of the Council. It was hoped that on the termination of the war the common round of legal activities would be resumed, but a few short years afterwards, the Four Courts were destroyed, including the Solicitors' Buildings, with the consequent temporary removal of the Society to offices in Kildare Street. With the establishment of the Irish Free State, legislation in the Oireachtas has engaged the continuous attention of the Council. In 1929 the Legal Practitioners (Qualification) Act was passed with some considerable modifications obtained as a result of the Council's efforts. Then, followed the reconstruction of the Four Courts, including the re-building of the Solicitors' Buildings, in all of which matters the Secretary took a most active part. Finally in the year 1938, the Council took up the matter of a new Bill for the regulations of the profession, and this Bill, now nearly in its final form, is still receiving the attention of the Council. The part played by Mr. Wakely in the history of the profession during the past fifty years was always unobtrusive, but his influence was deep, widespread and lasting. During his term of office the Findlater and Overend Scholarships were founded and the Government began contributing a yearly sum to the Society in aid of the expenditure incurred by the Statutory Committee.

The destruction of the Solicitors' Buildings in 1922 had occasioned the loss of the portraits of over fifty Past Presidents which formerly adorned the hall. Mr. Wakely succeeded in procuring replicas of every one of them, a remarkable feat when it is considered that the first President held office in the year 1842.

Last year was the 100th Anniversary of the foundation of the Society. The Council decided that owing to the circumstances at present existing, it would not have any formal celebration. Mr. Wakely was determined to mark the occasion and, along with the President, Ex-President, and Vice-Presidents, arranged a gathering in the Council Chamber. The Chief Justice attended and congratulated the Society on the commemoration of its centenary.

It is impossible for one intimately associated with Mr. Wakely to speak of him except in terms which might appear exaggerated praise to an outsider, but it is the simple truth to say that he was loved, not only by every member of the Council; but by all the members of the profession. Indeed, this esteem and affection which he inspired so universally was remarkable and can only be explained on the ground that each one saw in Mr. Wakely a living example of those virtues which we all prize most highly. The affection extended to Mr. Wakely by the profession and the deep appreciation of his work and devotion to duty was shown by the handsome presentations made to him on the completion of his fortieth year of office, and again, on the occasion of his fiftieth year as Secretary.

The President and the Press have paid their tributes to his character, and they are reproduced elsewhere in this issue. We would like to supplement them. As the resolution passed by the Council truly states he was in all respects a truly great-hearted Christian gentleman and possessed himself all the Christian virtues. He was most courteous and kind in his dealings with all, and regarded everyone with whom he came in contact primarily as a human being, no matter what his station in life.

Needless to say, he was the perfect Secretary. It is unrecorded that at any time there was any difference of opinion between himself and the Council, nor is it known that his judgment was ever called in question. His only fault, if fault it can be called, was a certain diffidence which restrained him from putting forward his views unless when called on. His views were always sound and were almost always adopted in toto. His methods were always persuasive. He voiced his opinions quietly and unaggressively, but it extraordinary how often a mere suggestion from him would reconcile opposing views and procure a unanimous opinion from the Council on controversial issues.

The Council of Northern Ireland had the benefit of his advice and guidance when their Society was first set up in Northern Ireland and they are glad to acknowledge how useful his advice was and how glad they were to have it.

He was a great friend of the apprentices. He seemed to understand them and fought their battles before the Council and nearly always with success. On one occasion he went so far as to give an undertaking to the Council on their behalf, and he was proud to record his faith in them was fully justified.

His record as Secretary, in such a responsible position, must be unique. He had served over fifty-three years, so that the hundred years' existence of the Society is spanned by three Secretaries: Edward Iles, 1841-1864; John Hawksley Goddard, 1864-1888; William George Wakely, 1888-1942.

A deeply religious man, he took a great interest in charitable and philantrophic work of various kinds. He was a member of the Church of Ireland and served on the general Synod, and the Dublin Synod, and for a very considerable time was a diocesan nominator. He was a trustee and a metropolitan director of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, and served for many years on the boards of the Molyneux Asylum (Leeson Park), of the Mageogh Home and also of the King's Hospital. He was a life governor of the Royal Hospital for Incurables.

In private life, he was very devoted to his wife and family. His wife, Elinor, daughter of Charles Thompson of Dublin, died in 1933, and her death and that of his daughter, Mrs. Rathborne, which occurred very shortly prior, were to him grievous blows. He is survived by his son, His Honour Ion G. Wakely (Colonial Service) and two daughters, Mrs. CaldBeck and Mrs. Johnson.

Every member of the profession feels he has lost a dear friend. As the President said, he left no enemies behind him. To the Council his loss is irreparable.

To the members of the family, the Council, in its resolution, tenders its sincere and most heart-felt sympathy.

We quote the following extract from the "Irish Times" of 27th March, 1942:

"We regret to announce the death, which "took place at his residence, Temple Gardens, "Rathmines, "yesterday, of Mr. William "George Wakely, Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland. Son of the late John Wakely, D.L., and brother of Judge "Wakely, he qualified as a Solicitor in 1887, " and shortly afterwards, at the early age of "twenty-three, was appointed Secretary of "the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland, a post he held for fifty-four years until his death. A man of frail physique and retiring "disposition, it was wonderful that for so "long he carried with such distinction so onerous a duty; but, as two generations of solicitors have proclaimed, there was no "man more untiring or unselfish in his "devotion to his work. He had out of his "ripe experience a remarkable knowledge of "the rules, regulations and conditions of the "Solicitors' profession and on all matters " was a walking encyclopaedia; never having " to refer to a text or other reference book for "any point on which he was consulted. "The calls on him in this regard were many, "and he acted as Counsellor, guide and "friend for all who sought his advice. Apart "from the Incorporated Law Society, he "took a keen and active interest in the "Solicitors' Benevolent Fund, and never "missed a Meeting, or neglected an oppor-"tunity to further its interests.

"Mr. Wakely had seen the destruction of "his office in the Four Courts, but here again "he had sensed such a happening and had " arranged for the removal of all his precious "records to a place of safety, so that he was "able to carry on the affairs of the Society "without interruption. As more than one "occupant of the office of President of The "Incorporated Law Society stated in his "Annual Report, they could never have "managed without William George Wakely. "His death will mean a heavy loss to the "Society and to all its members. The warm "regard in which he was held was demonstrated in practical manner, when on the occasion of his jubilee in the profession every Solicitor throughout the length and " breadth of Ireland was associated with the presentation. He had seen the setting-up of two States in Ireland, and had given his "advice, freely taken, in the setting up of "the Solicitors' Society in Northern Ireland. "There, as in the rest of the Country, he counted many warm friends. The deepest "sympathy will go out to his daughters and "son in the bereavement."

We take the following from the "Irish Law Times and Solicitors' Journal" of 4th April, 1942:—

" Soon afterwards, at the "early age of 23 years, he was appointed to "the important Office which he held with "such conspicuous success. Although Mr. "Wakely had attained great years, his death " came as a shock to all who knew, admired, " and respected him, and it is truly felt that "the Solicitors' Profession in Ireland has lost "a sage counsellor and friend. Their "sympathy will go out, with that of Mr. "Wakely's innumerable friends, to all who " are so sadly bereaved. Among others too, "who regret Mr. Wakely's passing are those, "who through the IRISH LAW TIMES AND "SOLICITORS' JOURNAL, serve the legal profession in Ireland. To them also, he "was always available with ready, wise, "and friendly help and advice given out of "the ripe experience of long and honoured "service, and valued accordingly. In par-"ticular, the Society Mr. Wakely served so "long and so well will miss him and mourn "his loss "

FUNERAL.

The funeral took place on Monday, 30th March, from Christ Church, Leeson Park, to Mount Jerome. The Archbishop of Dublin, Most Rev. Dr. Barton, the Rev. N. H. Hamilton, the Rev. R. B. Stewart and the Rev. J. W. Murray officiated. There was a large attendance at the funeral, including the President of the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland, and the President of the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland wearing their chains of office, the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland, the Chief Justice, Judge Hanna, the Rt. Rev. A. E. Hughes, D.D., Bishop of Kilmore, formerly Rector of Christ Church, Leeson Park, the leading solicitors of Dublin, representatives of the Dublin and Provincial Bar Associations, The Solicitors' Apprentices Debating Society and the general public. The members of the Council walked in procession behind the hearse.

There were many beautiful floral tributes; from the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland "in memory of our devoted Secretary, a faithful servant, a wise adviser, and the beloved friend of every member of the profession"; from the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland "in affectionate memory of an esteemed friend"; the General Council of Provincial Solicitors, Limerick Bar Association, Provincial Solicitors' Association, Carlow Sessional Bar Association, County Kerry Law Society and The Solicitors' Apprentices Debating Society.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

A Special Meeting of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society was held on the 30th March, 1942, to pass a vote of condolence with his family on the lamented death of its Secretary.

Although there was a large attendance of members, including the President of the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland, Mr. Archer, a number of members were prevented by distance or ill-health from being present in person, and in every case messages of sympathy and regret for their inability to attend were received by telegram, telephone or letter.

In moving a resolution of sympathy, the President (Mr. G. Acheson Overend) said that the Council had met that day under the shadow of a great personal loss in the departure of their true friend and beloved Secretary; Mr. W. G. Wakely. Mr. Wakely had been present in good health at the Council Meeting on the 19th March, but on the morning of Sunday, the 22nd March, when preparing to go to Church, he had accidentally fallen. Although the fall was a severe one no bones were broken and it was hoped at first that he would survive the shock. He had strained his shoulder badly in the fall and had been in great pain throughout Sunday and Monday but on Tuesday morning no other symptoms of any kind had developed, and his heart appeared to be standing the strain well. Unfortunately, on Tuesday afternoon, he had a bad heart attack, and in spite of everything that the Doctors could do he died early on the afternoon of Thursday, the 26th March.

The President said it was difficult to find words to express his own feelings, feelings which he knew were shared by every member of the Profession. From the first moment that he had come in contact with the Secretary as an apprentice he had received nothing but the greatest courtesy, kindness and help on the many occasions that he had consulted Mr. Wakely. He knew that all his friends had the like experience. It was indeed one of Mr. Wakely's outstanding characteristics that he had treated everyone in the Profession from the oldest member to the youngest apprentice in the same way. Of few men could it be said with greater assurance that he had left not a single enemy behind him. Throughout his long life he had never done anything of which he had reason to be ashamed or to regret, and his sole thought had been the good of the Profession as a

A remarkable feature of Mr. Wakely's character was his youthful outlook which made him ready to sympathise at all times with the apprentices who had no stauncher advocate at the Council Meetings than Mr. Wakely.

Various members of the Council had suggested to him on different occasions in recent years that the Council would be only too ready to appoint an assistant as they felt that with advancing years the onerous duties might, on occasions, be too much for him, and they were desirous of retaining his services as Secretary to the very last. It was characteristic of him that he refused the offer of an assistant on the ground that to accept it would not be in the best interest of the Society. Such appointment, he felt, might limit the choice of the Council in appointing a suitable successor when his time came to resign. He had talked about retiring as soon as the Solicitors' Bill, now in draft, was on the Statute Book and expressed the view that this would be a fitting climax to his career as Secretary. Unfortunately, this was not to be, and he has not been spared to see the Bill in which he was so much interested pass into law. He had a fund of knowledge on all matters connected with the Solicitors' Profession, and of every individual member thereof; the Profession would no longer be able to have the benefit of his unrivalled experience.

The President mentioned that every member of the Council was present either in person or had sent an apology and that even Solicitors from the extreme corners of Ireland, North, South, East and West, had come at great personal inconvenience to pay their last tribute to the Secretary. The President of the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland and the Secretary of the Council there were both present at the funeral and he was sure their own Council appreciated very much this tangible evidence of the sympathy of their brethren in the North.

Mr. W. S. Hayes, the father of the Council, in endorsing the President's remarks, said that no words could do full justice to the exceptional qualities of their late Secretary.

The following resolution was then put to the Meeting and passed unanimously in silence, all members standing:—

"The Council has learned with feelings of the deepest sorrow and regret of the sad death of its esteemed Secretary, Mr. W. G. Wakely and tender to all the members of his family its deepest and most heartfelt sympathy in their great loss."

The Council feels that it is only fitting it should attempt to express in words, however feeble, its unbounded admiration for its late Secretary. He had been Secretary for over 50 years and it was largely due to his unusual gifts that the Society had attained its present high position in the regard of the public. His undoubted abilities, his unfailing tact, his courtesy and his kindly disposition endeared him to every one who had the privilege of coming in contact with him. These qualities he showed in equal degree to the youngest apprentice and to the oldest practitioner, and each alike felt that in him they had a true friend and a wise counsellor.

During all his long service as Secretary his one and only thought was how he could best promote the interests of the Society; no trouble was too great for him to take to this end-and President after President learned to rely on his ripe experience and sound judgment in the many problems which confronted them: Whatever President came or went, so long as Mr. W. G. Wakely was at the helm, the Society could feel sure that its course would be steered aright and the many shoals and storms that must arise would be safely negotiated. It is with feelings akin to dismay that the members of the Council face the prospect of having to conduct the affairs of the Society without the assistance of their late Secretary.

To each member of the Council he was a personal friend and with the passing of this truly great-hearted Christian gentleman each member feels the poorer. It is no exaggeration to say that he was loved by every member of the profession."

Passed unanimously, 30th May, 1942.

FOR CIRCULATION
AMONGST MEMBERS

HALF-YEARLY GENERAL MEETING.

A Half-yearly General Meeting of the Society was held on Friday the 15th May, 1942, in the Solicitors' Buildings, Four Courts, Dublin, the President, Mr. G. Acheson Overend, in the chair. The following members were also present:-H. St. J. Blake, P. R. Boyd, W. Gordon Bradley, E. F. Collins, A. C. Cox, W. S. Hayes, W. S. Huggard, M. G. R. Lardner, R. A. Macauley, H. P. Mayne, W. J. Norman, Danl. O'Connell, L. E. O'Dea, Sean OhUadhaigh, P. F. O'Reilly, Thos. G. Quirke, C. G. Stapleton, Ivan Howe, J. T. Hamerton, Denzil O'Donnell, W. J. Keery, H. W. McCormick, J. P. L. Murphy, D. D. McDonald, R. N. Keller, W. Boyle Fawsitt, Jas. Fagan, R. Mc. C. Blakeney, D. B. Gilmore, C. G. Vanston, D. Dowling, E. J. Kenny, S. Hayes, T. J. Kenny, G. E. Grave White, C. T. Blair White, G. G. Overend, H. E. Woulfe Flanagan, T. H. R. Craig, A. Joyce, A. Marshall, A. E. Walker, C. H. Maidment, D. Moran, Raymond G. Kenny, James J. Hickey, C. Gore Grimes, T. O'Reilly, J. H. Gorman, John Murtagh, R. P. Humphries and Wm. Walsh.

The Secretary read the notice convening the meeting and the minutes of the halfyearly General Meeting held on the 26th November, 1941, the latter of which were signed by the President.

On the motion of Mr. T. G. Quirke, seconded by Mr. W. S. Hayes the following resolution was unanimously adopted:-

"That this General Meeting of the Incorparted Law Society begs to tender to the members of the family of the late Mr. W. G. Wakely its sincerest sympathy in their bereavement. The Profession learnt of his death with the deepest sorrow and regret. The meeting wishes to associate itself with and to adopt the resolution of sympathy passed by the Council, which it feels, does nothing more than justice to the memory of its great Secretary."

The President nominated the following members to be scrutineers of ballot for the election of the Council to be held on Monday 23rd November next :--- Messrs. John R. McC. Blakeney, Desmond J. Collins, Thomas Jackson, Hugh G. Sweetman, and Roderick. I. Tierney.

On the motion of Mr. Mayne, seconded by Mr. O'Dea the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"That Mr. A. E. Prentice, Mr. P. Glynn and Mr. E. J. O'Brien be appointed auditors of the Society's accounts for the year ending 30th April, 1942."

On the motion of Mr. Cox, seconded by Mr. Blake it was resolved that the appointment by the Council of Messrs. Kevans & Sons, Auditors, of 1, 2, 3, Westmoreland Street, Dublin, as professional auditors of the Society's accounts for the year ending 30th April, 1942, be approved.

The President, addressing the meeting, said:—

Gentlemen-Since our last meeting death has dealt very heavily with our Society. We have lost our beloved Secretary who, for over a half century gave of his very best to the interests of our Society. You will have seen from our Gazette some of the tributes that were paid to him, and since the Gazette appeared further resolutions of sympathy and letters of condolence have come in from country Bar Associations and from many other sources. These tributes were more than deserved. No man could have striven harder for the good of the Society or with such outstanding success and it is given to few to make so many friends. It may be said of him that he stood in "loco parentis" to every solicitor and every solicitor's apprentice in the country. To know him was to love him and respect him, and we shall sadly miss him from our meetings. Every President regarded him in times of difficulty and distress as the one man whose unerring judgment could be implicitly relied on, and whose tact and courtesy and patience were unfailing. We shall not look upon his like again.

We have also lost during the year a past President in the person of Mr. Edward D. MacLaughlin, who died on the 2nd April, 1942, in Dublin. Mr. MacLaughlin held the office of President in the year 1904/5, and was latter appointed Chief Clerk to the Lord Chancellor in 1907, and after that office was abolished he was Chief Clerk to the Chief Justice up to the year 1926, when he retired.

We have also lost under tragic circumstances John Brennan, a past Vice-President of this Council—a very valued member and a man of the highest integrity. Amongst those who are no longer with us, and whose loss we deplore, are the following:—

James G Franks, Solicitor, died 2nd November, 1941; Patrick J. Kavanagh (Senior), Solicitor, died 3rd November, 1941; George Green, Solicitor, died 15th November, 1941; Daniel McLoughlin, Solicitor, died 17th November, 1941; Thomas W. Franks, Solicitor, diéd 18th November. 1941; William J. McClenaghan, Solicitor, died 14th December, 1941; C. Rupert Robinson, Solicitor, died 21st December, 1941; Edward Leahy, Solicitor, died 31st December, 1941; J. Cecil B. O'Dowd, Solictor, died 4th January, 1942; Edward Phelan, Solicitor, died 10th January, 1942; Patrick O'Connor, Solicitor, died 12th January, 1942; Attwell H. Allen, died 14th January, 1942; Francis J. Anderson, Solicitor, died 9th February, 1942; Thomas F. Figgis, Solicitor, died 20th February, 1942; William J. Verlin, Solicitor, died 26th February, 1942; John Brennan, Solicitor, died 28th February 1942; George Nicholls, late County Registrar, Galway, died 11th May, 1942.

The Council at its meeting yesterday appointed Mr. Eric A. Plunkett to be our new Secretary, and I would like on behalf of the Society as a whole to extend a warm welcome to him. He will have an unenviable task in following as Secretary in the steps of such an outstanding personality as Mr. Wakely, but I have no doubt he will worthily uphold the great tradition of his office.

It will be within your recollection that at a special General Meeting of the Law Society held in September of last year the draft of the Solicitors' Bill was referred to a special Joint Committee composed of some members of the Council and representatives of the different Sessional Bar Associations throughout Éire, and it was understood that all suggested amendments would be sent to the Joint Committee for consideration. various Sessional Bar Associations were asked to send in their views in advance. Numerous suggestions and suggested amendments were received, and early this year the Joint Committee held a prolonged sitting, at which something like 90 to 100 amendments were considered and dealt with. In the vast majority of cases the Joint Committee was unanimous in its view, and in any other case the voting showed a large majority for or against the amendments, as the case might be. Mr. Wakely then submitted the papers to Counsel to revise the draft of the Bill in the light of the Joint Committee's work, and he had had three consultations with Counsel prior to his death. Since then two further consultations have been held with Counsel. The Bill, as revised by them, will come before a fresh meeting of the Joint Committee to-morrow for further approval.

I have every hope that it will be possible to summon a further special meeting of the Society in the early autumn to finally approve the Bill as so revised.

There is one matter to which I think I should refer at this meeting, and that is, there are still a very large number of Solicitors who have not become members of the Incorporated Law Society. It is difficult to understand this attitude. Surely it is not the very small annual subscription which deters Solicitors from joining. Is there any reason why Solicitors remain outside the ranks and refuse to become members of the Association which guards and protects their interests, and to whom they apply when they are in difficulty and trouble.

Another matter on which I would like to comment is the response to the Centenary Fund to commemorate our 100 years existence. You will hardly believe it when I tell you, the replies received show that out of nearly 1,400 Solicitors on the Roll, only 250 subscribed. This, I think, shows a lack of interest in our Society, and a disregard for its great history and traditions—which is, indeed, regrettable. The subscription list will-close on the 30th May. As the funds collected will be applied for the benefit of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, I appeal with confidence to those who have not yet subscribed to do so at once.

Otherwise, gentlemen, the half-year under review has not been marked by any matter of outstanding importance, though the Council's time has been fully occupied with the ordinary business affairs of the Society, which need constant attention, if all is to go well.

REGISTRY OF DEEDS.

The following letter which has been received speaks for itself. The Council considers the suggestions therein worthy of adoption.

"To The Secretary, Incorporated Law Society, Four Courts, f Dublin.

Dear Sir,

I would be grateful if you would bring before the Council of the above Society this letter as I would appreciate its views as to our legal position and, if the Council should so determine, its aid in mitigating what is, without doubt, a weakness in the present-day practice of the Registry of Deeds.

I have had complaints recently from several Solicitors that certified copies of Memorials registered in this office have been of no value to them as the habendum consisted simply of the words "TO HOLD as therein." In the absence of the Deed, which had been either lost or destroyed the Memorial was valueless. Some Solicitors go so far as to suggest to me that a complete copy of each Deed should be lodged as a Memorial.

By Act 2 and 3 William IV. C. 27. Sec. 29, it is enacted that 'only when a Memorial shall contain such particluars required by this Act to be set forth in the Abstract Book are found to be truly stated, shall a Deed be registered but not otherwise.' The Abstract Book in the same Act requires the "general nature of the Deed" to be entered but whether this would enable the Registrar to insist on a fuller habendum has never been decided or even considered.

I beg to draw attention to the danger at present existing of the destruction of Deeds and the necessity of providing against this by all and every means in our power. Here in the Registry we have fire-proof vaults and a very complete Air Raid Protection system and, to put the matter on its lowest grounds, it seems to be a waste of time and money if the Memorials we are at such pains to preserve prove to be valueless in the absence of the Deed.

I hope the Council will persuade the members of the profession to give favourable consideration to the suggestion that the habendum of a Deed as set out in the Memorial should be either a full copy, or, at least such an extract as would enable the tenure of the grantee to be fully determined from the Memorial.

Please explain to the Council that the Registry has no desire to dictate or even suggest to Solicitors how they should conduct their business. Our relations with the profession have always been on a very amicable basis and this suggestion is made with a desire to be even more helpful in case of emergency.

Yours faithfully, SAMUEL S. WEIR, Assistant Registrar."

NOVEMBER, 1942

FOR CIRCULATION AMONGST MEMBERS

SOLICITORS' BILL, 1942.

The adjourned Special General Meeting of the Society for the purpose of reconsidering the draft Bill, was held in the Hall of the Society on the 1st October, 1942, at eleven o'clock, a.m. A synopsis of its text, together with a copy of the report of the Joint Committee, was sent out with the notice convening the meeting. Copies of the Bill were also sent to each Bar Association in Eire. The meeting lasted all day and the draft Bill was fully discussed. The following resolutions were passed by the meeting:—

- "That Section 59 of the draft Solicitors' Bill, 1942, making membership of the Society compulsory should be retained in the Bill."
- "That the omission from the present draft Bill of Part VII of the draft Solicitors' Bill which was submitted to the Special General Meeting on the 30th September, 1941, be adopted."
- "That the Council be instructed to proceed forthwith with the Bill as approved."
- "That the Joint Committee's report be adopted and that the revised draft Bill as submitted to the Meeting be approved."

The Meeting also authorised the Council to consider all suggestions which had been put forward during the discussions on the draft Bill and to make such minor amendments as might seem to be indicated.

A vote of thanks was passed to the President and the Members of the Council and the Joint Committee for their services in connection with the draft Bill.

The Council is proceeding to consider the suggestions put forward and when it has approved the Bill in its final form, will proceed as directed.

MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

Ist October, 1942.
Twenty-seven members present.

22nd October, 1942.
Thirty members present.

Examinations.

The results of the "First" and "Second" Irish Examinations, also the Preliminary and Intermediate Examinations, held in October last, were submitted and approved by the Council.

The results of the Final Examination, held in October last, were submitted and approved by the Council at an adjourned meeting held on the 29th October, 1942.

Annual Report.

Draft Annual Report of the Council was adopted.

SITTINGS AND VACATIONS OF SUPREME COURT AND HIGH COURT.

The Minister of Justice has signed new Rules prepared by the Rules Committee which will, in effect, replace Order XXXI of the Rules of 1926. The principal alteration effected by the new Rules is to appoint fixed vacations in lieu of the former Easter and Whit vacations, which will be independent of the variation of Easter Sunday and Whit Sunday in the calendar from year to year. The new Rules were published in Iris Oifigiuil on 27th November, 1942.

DISTRICT COURT RULES, 1941. No. 2.

The Rules which relate to the enforcement of Court Orders abolished through an error Forms 16 to 28 (relating to Ejectments and other matters) printed in Schedule I Part II of the 1926 Rules. It was apparently intended to abolish Forms 21 to 28 which relate to the enforcement of Court Orders but Forms 16 to 20 were inadvertently included. This obvious mistake is now to be rectified by The District Court Rules, 1942, published by the Stationery Office.

LAND REGISTRY FORM.

The attention of the Council has been drawn to a clerical error in Form 22 in the Schedule to the Land Registry Rules, 1937, which is a form of voluntary transfer of free-hold Land, by a registered full owner, with a power of revocation. The words "To revoke the use hereby limited to E.F." in paragraph 2 should read "To revoke the use hereby limited to C.B." and practitioners should note this clerical error when using the form.

SCHOLARSHIP, 1942.

The Overend Final Examination Scholarship (Real Property and Conveyancing) has been awarded to James A. Casey.

The Overend Preliminary Examination Scholarship and the Findlater Scholarship for 1942 will not be awarded.

VOTE OF THANKS TO ... MR. GEORGE A. OVEREND.

The newly-elected President, in tendering the thanks of the Council to Mr. Overend, outgoing President, said:

GENTLEMEN:

My first duty on addressing you as President of the Incorporated Law Society, is, on your behalf and on my own behalf, to tender to my predecessor, Mr. G. A. Overend, the very sincere thanks of this Council, of the Society, and of myself for the splendid services he rendered to our profession during his year of office.

In the first place this Council can never forget the wonderful manner in which he carried on the affairs of the Society in that very difficult period after the death of our late Secretary, and until the election of our present Secretary. During that time the official work of the Society was carried on by Mr. Overend exactly as if the Secretary of our Society was in office. Nothing was too much for him to undertake and no business too small for him to overlook. This was only equalled by the great services he gave to the work of the Bill Committee, with the result we all know, at the Special Meeting over which he presided. He diligently practised, what he proudly stated he was taught in childhood-" never to accept any position unless he was prepared to give of his very best in that position." During his year of office he was unsurpassable in service. He gave us his very best. He presided over our meetings with marvellous tact and good humour and he leaves office with every one of us cherishing a memory of a man from whom we expected much, but, who gave us far in excess of what we anticipated. I trust, and I know, that during my term of office I shall receive from Mr. Overend every assistance that he can give, and I shall depend and rely on his advice and experience.

On behalf of our Council I present to you, Mr. Overend, this badge, a replica of your badge of office, which I know you will cherish as a proud memory of the honour that had been conferred upon you and the confidence placed in you by your colleagues.

Go dtugaidh Dia Saoghal fada dhuit faoi Ráth agus Faoi Shonas. As I have just said in our own tongue: May God grant you many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Sharpe served his apprenticeship with the late Mr. William Milward Jones, and the late Mr. Alexander C. Cameron, both of Dublin. He was admitted in Hilary Sittings, 1899, and practised at 6 Dawson Street, Dublin, as a member of the firm of Milward Jones, Mayne & Sharpe. '

He was Professor of Common Law to The Incorporated Law Society from 1909 to 1914.

SOLICITORS' COSTS—GROSS SUM.

The recent English Decision in the case of In re J. N. Nabarro & Sons (59 T.L.R.24) on the construction of the Solicitors' Remuneration (Gross Sum) Order, 1934, is of interest to Irish Solicitors in as much as the relevant part of that Order is identical with our General Order of 15th November, 1920. (printed at page 465 of the Society's Calendar for 1942). The following statement appears at page 382, Cordery on Solicitors; 4th Edition :---

"Where a Solicitor charges an unexplained gross sum the client may, before taxation, require an explanation, which the Solicitor is bound to give, and which may then be used on taxation, or the Solicitor may tender such explanation without the client's request and in either case the explanation may be used on taxation to explain (but not so as on increase) the gross sum."

The words in brackets are no longer a correct statement of the law in England since the above-mentioned decision, which it is submitted would be followed by the Irish Courts. A firm of Solicitors having delivered to a client a Bill of Costs for a gross sum, subsequently at the client's request, as they were obliged to do, delivered an itemised Bill. This Bill taxed to an amount greater than the gross sum and it was held by the Court of Appeal that the Solicitors were entitled to recover from the client the full amount of the detailed Bill as taxed.

The President proposed, and Mr. W. Gordon Bradley seconded, the adoption of the following new Bye-laws of the Society in lieu of the existing Bye-laws Nos. 15, 16 and 17.

NEW BYE-LAW 15:

At the General Meeting in the month of November in each year a professional accountant or firm of professional accountants shall be elected to audit the accounts of the Society. Such auditor or auditors shall hold office until the General Meeting held in November of the ensuing year, but he or they shall be eligible for re-election. The said auditor or auditors shall be employed and be remunerated by the Council out of the funds of the Society. If the said General Meeting shall fail so to elect an auditor or auditors the election shall be made by the Council.

NEW BYE-LAW 16.

If any vacancy occur in the office of auditor during the year a new auditor or auditors shall be elected by the Council to fill such vacancy.

NEW BYE-LAW 17.

The audit and examination of the Society's books and accounts for the year to 30th April shall be carried out by the auditor or auditors not later than the 31st day of July following. A copy of the Revenue and Expenditure account and the auditor's Certificate thereon shall be submitted by the Council with the Annual Report at the November General Meeting following the audit. After the reading of the accounts at the meeting and their approval by the meeting or adoption by any other means the Chairman of the Meeting shall sign the accounts in testimony of such approval and such accounts shall be binding and conclusive on all the members of the Society. If at any time the Council considers it to be advisable the Society's accounts shall be audited more frequently than at yearly intervals and at such times as may be directed by the Council.

The proposal was carried unanimously.

The Meeting approved of Messrs. Kevans and Sons, 'Auditors and Accountants, 1 Westmoreland Street, Dublin, as the auditors of the Society's accounts for the year ending 30th April 1943.

The President, addressing the Meeting said:—

GENTLEMEN:

.Since our last Half-yearly Meeting I am sorry to say that death has been busy in our ranks and I find that 13 members of the Society have passed away. Of these, Mr. Adam Lloyd-Blood'is the only one who has been a Vice-President, but you will all have been familiar with him here in the City of Dublin where he was so well known and respected. This loss in the membership of the Society is inevitable and, of course, must be made good by new recruits to our ranks. This, very naturally, brings me to the question of membership of the Society and I am amazed to see that the membership of the Society still lags so far behind the total number of Solicitors on the Roll. You will see from the Report that 1,388 persons are on the Roll as Solicitors, and yet only 840 are members of the Society: I can. only think that this great disparity is due to the fact that many Solicitors, particularly the younger members, do not realise the amount of work that is done on their behalf by the Society, and more particularly by the Council.

There are many Committees of the Council and I may mention the following:—

The Finance Committee
The Parliamentary Committee
The Costs Committee
The Gazette Committee
The Circuit and District Courts
Committee
The Land Acts Committee
The Privileges Committee

as well as the Court of Examiners, and of course, the Statutory Committee.

In addition to all these Committees, there are from time to time special Committees set up such as the recent Solicitors' Bill Committee. Some of these Committees meet monthly and some, of course, at longer intervals. You will see in the Report that it is stated that there were fifteen meetings of the Council and thirty meetings of Committees during the year. This does not give a true picture as it only refers to the meetings actually held up to the date when the Report was drafted over a month ago. Since then there have been two more meetings of the Council and six or seven meetings of the Committees and the total number of meetings held in this way are certainly not less than fifty-four or fifty-five in the year. To this has to be added ten meetings of the Statutory Committee, three meetings of the Joint-Bill Committee, ten or eleven meetings of the sub-Committee dealing with the Bill, the meetings held in connection with the election of a new Secretary, etc.

At all these meetings your President and Vice-Presidents are ex-officio members of the Committee and attend if they can. It is the privilege of your President to preside at all of them and I am happy to say that I was able to attend and preside at every single one of the meetings (whether of the Council or Committees) held during my term of office, with the sole exception of one Finance Committee which was summoned for the same time as the High Court Rules Committee.

Apart from these meetings of the Council and its Committees there are various other duties that your President has to perform.

He is a member of the High Court Rules Committee and during my term of office I have attended five or six meetings of this Committee. He is also expected to preside at your own Half-yearly and Yearly General Meetings, at any Special Meetings of the Society and at least two; if not more, meetings of the Solicitors' Apprentices' Debating Society. In addition, he is frequently called upon to interview officials in Government Offices and I have personally interviewed the Solicitor to the Revenue on two occasions in reference to questions of stamp duty. I have also seen the Estate Duty Office, and one other member of the Council has attended and discussed the position under the Land · Registry Rules with the Registrar of Titles.

I believe I would be very nearly accurate in saying that during the year I have presided at almost one hundred meetings of one kind or another.

Even there the functions of the Society do not end. In addition to providing a Library which is available to all full members of the Society in the premises in which this meeting is being held, the Society answers numerous queries which are constantly being received by your Secretary from members who are in doubt as to some point of practice or otherwise. These letters while replied to by your Secretary if they raise any serious question are always discussed with the President and possibly some other members of the Council before your Secretary's reply is drafted.

I think from this short resume of the work of the Society new members will appreciate that there is a very great deal of work done by the Council, all of it voluntary, and all of it done most cheerfully, and that although the results may not always be very apparent, the interests of the Society are constantly watched and safeguarded.

I believe if these duties and functions of the Council were more carefully realised the members of the Profession as a whole would be only too glad to stand behind the Society and join in membership. As you know, the subscription is only £1 per annum or, in the case of country members who do not desire to avail themselves of the full privileges of the Society, may be only 10/- per annum. This is a very much smaller subscription than is levied by the average Trades Union from its members and I do not think that the amount should deter anyone from joining. I would, therefore, particularly ask all members to impress on any solicitor who is not a member, the real desirability of his joining, and more particularly, would I ask members to impress on their apprentices who are nearly out of their time that, as a matter of loyalty, they owe it to the Society who has done so much for them during their apprenticeship, to become members and pay their annual subscription.

There is another matter to which, perhaps, I should refer, and that is the question of the new Solicitors' Bill, which is now practically in its final form. You have just heard the minutes of the last Special Meeting of the members of the Society read and signed. At that meeting a few minor suggestions were made for further improvements in the Bill and these suggestions have all been considered and some of them have been put to Counsel to see if there is any practical difficulty in the way of their acceptance. Subject to this, I think it may be said that the Bill is in its final form, so far as the Society is concerned. It will go before the new Council at a very early stage and, as you know, the General Meeting has directed that the Council should then take such further steps as it may think right or proper to endeavour to have this Bill put through both Houses and passed into law.

You are already familiar with its main provisions and all I would like to say is that we hope and believe that if and when the Bill becomes law it will tend to the better regulation of the Profession as a whole and will give an added protection to the members of the public who are our clients.

The Report which you have in your hands deals very fully with most of the other matters that came before the Council during its year of office and I do not think that I can add very much to what is set out therein.

Another point I should, perhaps, refer to is the overcrowding of the profession. It is a matter of common knowledge that the Solicitors' profession is attracting to its ranks more newcomers than it can possibly absorb. Newly qualified Solicitors are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain employment or, if they set up on their own to acquire a practice, sufficient to provide for running expenses and leave any adequate margin. Such overcrowding, in the view of the Council, is not good from a professional point of view and is definitely bad from the point of view of the public, but is even worse from the point of view of the newcomers and their parents. The latter have incurred very heavy expenses in payment of apprenticeship rees, stamp duty and licence fees, and it must be very disheartening when, at last their sons are qualified, to find that there is no opening before them. I know that many other professions are complaining also of overcrowding but I would strongly urge parents to give this question their most serious consideration before deciding to make Solicitors of their sons. What the public hardly realise is the very heavy expenses which Solicitors have to incur in maintaining office staffs, etc., and from my own experience I can say that between 60 and 70 per cent. of the professional fees earned is absorbed in payment of such overhead expenses.

Before I close I would like to say how much we will miss Dr. Quirke from the Council. It came as a great shock to me to learn that he was not allowing his name to go before the members for election. He has served the Society faithfully and well for many years and his fellow members on the Council were always deeply appreciative of his sound judgment and ripe experience which he so willingly placed at their disposal.

I do not propose to delay you any longer, but have great pleasure in moving that the Council's Report for the year be adopted.

Mr. Hayes seconded the adoption of the Report which was carried unanimously.

The Press, having withdrawn by request, Mr. McLoughlin, Mr. P. C. Moore and Mr. Glynn addressed the Meeting on domestic matters.

Mr. W. S. Hayes, having been moved to the Chair, Dr. T. G. Quirke proposed that the best thanks of the Society be given to the President for his distinguished services to the profession during his year of office. He said that, speaking from an experience of thirty years on the Council, he did not know of any President who had to carry such a heavy burden, owing to the death of Mr. Wakely, the Secretary, whom we had all come to regard as almost the permanent. head of the profession. Coming from a distinguished family of lawyers, Mr. Overend devoted his hereditary talents whole-heartedly to the best services of the Society. During the interval between the death of Mr. Wakely and the appointment of the new Secretary, he had given all his time and abilities to the interests of the profession. His work was characterised by clear thinking, and his addresses to the Council and the Society, particularly in connection with the controversial clauses of the Draft Solicitors' Bill, were models of lucid exposition.

It was unnecessary to say anything of his invariable courtesy and kindness at all times to his colleagues. Above all, was his conspicuous success during the most difficult period in the Society's history, a success which was achieved by a great self-sacrifice, and for which he deserved the Society's heartiest congratulations and best thanks.

In seconding the resolution, Mr. E. F. Collins said:—He only wished to add to what Dr. Quirke had said, that in his opinion this vote should not be limited to the members of the profession who were there that day, He felt that every Solicitor in Ireland owed a deep debt of gratitude to the President. for the outstanding way in which he governed the Society, and managed its affairs during a year of unprecedented difficulty. He was quite sure that if it was possible to have a permanent President of the Society, Mr. Overend would be unanimously elected, but the rule was, that a President could only occupy the Chair for one year. This rule, he thought, was based on an old legal maxim, "Nemo bis vexare," which, being literally translated, meant, "Don't break the poor man's heart by giving him a second year of Office." -

. He had great pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks.

MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

10th December.

Fourteen Members present.

Statutory Committee.

A letter was read from the Hon. the Chief Justice appointing the following members of the Council to be the Statutory Committee for the year ending 26th November, 1943:—Mr. E. F. Collins, Mr. John B. Hamill, Mr. M. E. Knight, Mr. James J. Lynch, Mr. Henry P. Mayne, Mr. G. A. Overend and Mr. Jasper Travers Wolfe.

Committees.

Committees of the Council for the year were appointed.

OBITUARY.

Mr. THOMAS C. WYLIE, Solicitor, died on 3rd December, 1942, at his residence, "Ashmere," Culmore, Londonderry.

Mr. Wylie was admitted in Hilary Sittings, 1893, and practised at Londonderry.

MR. JAMES C. McGIFFORD, Solicitor, died on 17th December, 1942, at his residence, Locksley Park, Finaghy, Co. Antrim.

Mr. McGifford served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. Joseph Lockhart, of Lisburn, was admitted in Hilary Sittings, 1904, and practised at Lisburn.

Mr. Louis J. Walsh, Solicitor, died on 27th December, 1942, at Letterkenny.

Mr. Walsh served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. John Harbison, of Magherafelt, was admitted in Hilary Sittings, 1905, and practised at Ballycastle until the year 1923, when he was appointed a District Justice for County Donegal. He was a distinguished author and playwright. He was interned in Ballykinlar by the British authorities in the years 1920 and 1921.

SOLICITORS' COSTS—GROSS SUM. General Order of 15th November, 1920.

Our attention has been drawn to the fact that the note in the December issue of the Gazette on the English-decision in re Nabarro (on the interpretation of the English equivalent to the above Order) might suggest without a careful perusal of the Order, that the scope of the decision is wider than it is' in fact. The principle laid down in re Nabarro in its application to this country relates only to the business specified in the Order, namely, business the costs of which are regulated by Clause 2 (c) of the General Order made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. It does not affect the principle operating in regard to contentious business or any noncontentious business not covered by Clause 2 (c). It would appear that the remuneration for business not within Clause 2 (c) is still governed by the limitation stated in Cordery, and that accordingly a client who has received a bill of costs for such business for a gross sum may require it to be furnished in detail and taxed without the risk of having to pay the excess should the detailed bill tax to more than the gross sum.

LIABILITY OF SOLICITOR FOR HONEST MISAPPLICATION OF TRUST FUNDS.

Solicitors acting for trustees will welcome the decision, in Williams-Ashman v. Price & Williams (1942) 1. Ch.219., in which the Plaintiff, who was a beneficiary under a trust, sought to make the Defendants, who were Solicitors for a deceased trustee, personally liable for an honest misapplication of the trust funds on the instructions of their client. Thè, Plaintiff's argument was based on the following passage in Underhill's "Trusts," 9th Edition, page 548-" Where trust funds come into the custody and under the control of a Solicitor, or indeed of anyone else, with notice of the trust, he can only discharge himself of liability by showing that the property was duly applied in accordance with the trusts." The Solicitor defendants who, some years previously had prepared, and still retained, the trust deed, had forgotten its existence, and on the trustee's instructions had received portion of the trust monies and applied them for purposes unauthorised by the trust deed. Bennett, J., held that although one of the defendants had acted, perhaps, incautiously none of them had inter-meddled by doing acts characteristic of a trustee and outside their duties as Agents in such a manner as to become trustees de, son tort, and the action failed.

COSTS OF SOLICITOR PRACTISING WITH-OUT LICENCE.

In the case of Cooling v, the Minister for Finance (as yet unreported) the plaintiff obtained judgment for damages with unascertained costs against the defendant. His solicitor served the defendant with a bill of costs and issued a summons to tax. After the costs had been taxed and certified the Defendant discovered that the Plaintiff's Solicitor had not in force a practising Certificate. He refused to pay the costs and by consent the matter was brought before the Court on Notice of Motion.

It was held by the President of the High Court that an objection to the payment of costs under Section 48 of the Solicitor's (Ireland) Act, 1898, by a Defendant must be made before the issuing of the Taxing Master's Certificate. The case, he said, turned on the meaning of the word "recover" in Section 48 which was "recover in an action". It was held that the certified costs had merged in the judgment and that unless the judgment was set aside it must be acted upon. It was too late at that stage to take the objection.

It should be noted that the reasoning of the decision, which was based on the merging of the costs in the judgment already entered in the action, is not applicable to the Taxation of Costs by a client on a requisition to tax where there has not been previous judgment for the costs.

Furthermore, in Cooling's case it would appear that the judgment for the damages and costs was in favour of the client and that the judgment did not decide whether the Plaintiff's Solicitor would be entitled to enforce payment to him by his client of the costs so recovered if paid to the Plaintiff.

PAPER SHORTAGE.

The Society has received from the Minister of Supplies a letter pointing out the gravity of the position regarding paper and inviting the co-operation of the profession in endeavouring to alleviate the shortage of raw materials by increasing the collection of waste paper. It is pointed out that even a partial breakdown of the supply of paper would be sufficient to cause a stoppage in the business activities of the country carried on in professional and commercial offices and would give rise to great unemployment hardship and dislocation of essential services. The matter individually concerns every citizen, and the Society, at the request of the Minister, wishes to bring it before members. The leading waste paper merchants have agents in many towns, but in any event the Secretary, Waste Paper Merchants' Association, 55 Dawson Street, Dublin will on request, nominate a merchant to collect waste paper in any areas where no agent resides.

OBITUARY.

MR. EDWARD H. BURNE, Solicitor, died on 20th January, 1943, at his residence, 20 Waterloo Road, Dublin, aged 62.

The late Mr. Burne served his apprenticeship to Mr. Arthur H. Burne, of Dublin, and was admitted in Michaelmas Sittings, 1903. He joined the firm of Gerald Byrne and Company with which he practised until his death. At the time of his death he was a member of the Council of the Society to which he was elected in 1916. He became President of the Society in 1928-29. For many years his counsel and advice on all matters affecting the profession and his sound commonsense in matters of business were unreservedly at the service of his colleagues and were highly valued by them. An of tanding advocate with wide experience of both the former and the present. systems, his services were in demand both in the former Petty Sessions and in the District Courts. He was the author of the standard work published on the rules and practice of the District Court. He was the representative of the Society on the Rule making Committee.

Outside his strictly professional activities, the late Mr. Burne was keenly interested in the work of many public and private charities, including the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, of which he was Deputy Chairman. His presence in the Courts and in the Council chamber will be sadly missed by his colleagues in the profession to which he gave many years of faithful service.

At the Meeting of the Council, on February 4th, a resolution was passed expressing sympathy with his widow and family.

The Council was represented at the funeral by Mr. John B. Hamill, President; Mr. John S. O'Connor, Vice-President; Messrs G. Acheson Overend, W. J. Norman, P. R. Boyd, P. F. O'Reilly, H. P. Mayne and E. A. Plunkett, Secretary. MR. FRANCIS C. PILKINGTON, Solicitor, died in Dublin on 25th January, 1943.

The late Mr. Pilkington served his apprenticeship with the late Mr. Frederick G. Kerin, of Ennis. He was admitted in Trinity Sittings, 1901, and practised as the senior partner of the firm of McMahon and Tweedy, 13 Hume Street, Dublin, until his death.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION. Incorporated Law Society Centenary Annuity.

An Election will be held in March for this Annuity of £52. Annual Members of the Association will not be entitled to vote unless their subscriptions for 1943 are paid. Members and intending Members should therefore, without delay, send their subscriptions, £1 1s. 0d., or, if admitted less than three years, 10s. 6d., to the Secretary, 22, Nassau Street, Dublin.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Effect of Adjudication of Bankruptcy in England,

The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of in re Reilly, a bankrupt in England (1942 I.R. 416), seriously affects purchasers of land and Solicitors acting for them. Briefly the effect of the decision of the Court appears to be that an adjudication in England of bankruptcy against the owner of unregistered land in Eire vests the legal estate in such land forthwith in the English Trustee, without the necessity of an Order of the Irish Court or of any registration in the bankruptcy office here or in the Registry of Deeds. As regards registered lands the opinion of the Court was equally divided. Unless special legislation is enacted it would appear that a purchaser of unregistered land will not be safe in paying over the purchase money without first instituting searches against the Vendor in the various bankruptcy offices in England and Wales. As regards registered land, the legal position is uncertain, two judges of the Supreme Court (Sullivan, C. J., and O'Byrne, J.), having held that the mere fact of adjudication of bankruptcy in England operated to give the English Trustee priority over persons claiming an equitable deposit of the Land Certificate from the owner without notice of the bankruptcy, and two judges (Meredith and Geohegan, J. J.), having held the opposite. The resulting position is most embarrasing to purchasers and raises a problem, the answer to which lies with the legislature.

Personal liability of Vendor's Solicitor for non-disclosure to Purchaser.

The recent English decision in District Bank Ltd. v. Luigi Grill Ltd. and others (168 L.T.R. 53) deals with the liability of a solicitor acting for the vendor or mortgagor in 'a conveyancing matter for the concealment from the purchaser or mortgagee of any instrument or incumbrance material to the title. Under Section 183 (1) of the Law of Property Act, 1925, any person disposing of property for moneys worth to a purchaser, or the solicitor of such a person, who conceals from the purchaser any instrument or incumbrance material to the title with intent to defraud is guilty of a misdemeanour. Under Section 183 (2) any such person or her solicitor is also liable to an action for damages for loss sustained by reason of the concealment of the instrument or incumbrance. In the above reported case the first defendants had charged, by way of legal mortgage, in favour of the plaintiffs as security for £36,000, certain premises which shortly prior to the date of the mortgage, had been subdemised to sublessees. As part of the terms of the sublease the sum of £4,500, being three year's rent was paid in advance by the sublessees to the first defendants. The second defendants were the solicitors who had acted for the lessees at the granting of the sublease and had also acted for them in connection with the mortgage to the plaintiffs. The underlease was abstracted for the mortgagee but the fact that three years' rent under the sublease had been paid in advance was not mentioned. The mortgagee suffered loss and instituted proceedings joining the solicitors as co-defendants. It was held that assuming there had been concealment of an instrument or incumbrance (which was not decided) no civil action for damages lay against the solicitors unless the concealment was with intent to defraud. The action against them was dismissed. The Law of Property Act, 1925, does not apply to this country, but Section 183 thereof is very similar to although not identical in terms with Section 24 Law of Property Act, 1859, as amended by Section 8° Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1860.

The Society's Gazette.

A Committee of the Council recently considered whether any and if so what steps could be taken to make the GAZETTE of greater utility and interest to the profession. The Report of the Committee which was adopted by the Council recommended inter alia that members of the Society should be invited to contribute items of professional interest for publication in the GAZETTE. . It was also decided to ask the various Bar Associations throughout the country to keep in touch with the Society through the GAZETTE and to contribute for publication notes of their proceedings and activities and items of general interest. It is hoped that the members of the Society will act on this invitation and in this way co-operate in making the GAZETTE of greater interest to the profession.

Registration of Title Act, 1942.

The above Act became law on 15th December, 1942. Its provisions materially affect the law relating to registered land and should be noted by solicitors.

Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Bill, 1942.

The above Bill as introduced in Dail Eireann is designed to amend Section 46 of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1931, in so far as it defines the term building lease. -Under the present definition of a building lease the land thereby demised must be situated wholly in an urban area. The effect of the amending Bill, if enacted, will be to include leases of land situate outside urban areas not exceeding one statute acre in area. The Bill contains further provisions applicable to cases where permanent buildings have been erected upon land and it is alleged that they were so erected in pursuance of an agreement for a lease to be executed upon the erection of such buildings. Where express, evidence of such agreement is not available but it is shown that the buildings were erected by the person to whom the lease was in fact subsequently made the Bill provides that the Court must presume that they were erected in pursuance of such an agreement. In any case to which the foregoing provision does not apply the Court after hearing the available evidence may make such a presumption if it'thinks fit.

Accidental Fires Bill, 1943.

This Bill has just been introduced in Dail Eireann in order to remedy the situation created by the decision of the Supreme Court in Richardson and Webster v. Athlone Woollen. Mills (77.I.L.T.R.27). The Bill provides that where any person has suffered damage by reason of the occurrence of accidental fire on the building or land of another no legal proceeding shall be instituted in any court by the injured person or his insurer against such other person on account of such damage. The term building is to include any structure of whatever material or for whatever purpose used. The Act is to be retrospective and will repeal the Accidental Fires Act, 1715.

Taxation, of Costs.

The Taxing Masters have made a rule requiring solicitors to lodge their annual practising certificates for noting in the Taxing Master's Office before Bills of Costs lodged by them are taxed. No Bill will be taxed until the solicitor concerned produces his practising certificate or certificates in respect of the period covered by the Bill. The Society has been informed by the Taxing Masters that it will be sufficient if solicitors produce their certificates for recording by the office once at the commencement of each year.

Construction of word "money" in Wills.

The House of Lords in Perrin and Others v. Morgan (59.T.L.R.134) has decided that the word "money" when found in a will is capable of various meanings and that the Court is not bound to construe the term in what was described as its strictly legal meaning of cash in hand or in the bank. Simon, L. C. referred to what he called the pungent and entertaining judgment of Meredith, J., in In re Jennings (1930. I.R.200) in which his lordship observed that the judiciary had waged a long fight to teach testators that money" meant "cash," but that as the ordinary testator who made his own will did not read the law reports he persisted. in constantly using the word in a wider sense, and that it was time that in such cases a popular meaning prevailed over the "legal" one. The decision of the House of Lords has overruled previous English decisions several centuries old and it is interesting to find that in doing so it has adopted the view held by the late Mr. Justice Meredith in 1930. Lord Russell of Killowen and Lord Romer, while in agreement with the conclusion of Simon, L. C. and Lord Atkin, held that the rule of construction referred to should not be disturbed, but that in its application it should be made to yield to the context in which the term "money" is used. The report of this decision should be read for a complete understanding of its effect.

OBITUARY.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. James Wood who was known to several generations of Solicitors as the Society's hall-porter and caretaker. He was in the émployment of the Society for almost fifty years, having been appointed on the 10th October, 1891 and was a highly esteemed and popular figure with the profession. He retired on pension in December, 1939, and spent the last twelve months in a Nursing Home in Dublin where he died on the 2nd April, 1943.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Judges, Juries and Insurance Companies.

No rule of conduct is better known than that whereby a jury must not be informed that one of the parties to an action before them is entitled to be indemnified by an Insurance Company against_any damages awarded in the action. The Rule is based upon the fact shown by experience that juries are liable to be prejudiced if they are aware that there is in existence such a policy of insurance. In the recent-English case of Harman v. Crilly and Others (59.T.L.R.96), an action for Trial by Judge without a Jury, it was sought to bring in by third party notice an Insurance Company by which the defendant claimed he was entitled to be indemnified under a policy of Insurance. The motion was resisted by the Insurance Company on the ground, inter-alia, that the trial would be likely to be prejudiced if it were brought to the mind of the Judge that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of a contract of Insurance. This objection was overruled by the English Court of Appeal. Greene, M. R. protesting against the idea that Judges are liable to have their minds prejudiced by considerations of the kind described. It was, he stated, the duty of the Judge, which would be fulfilled, not to allow the result of one issue to affect his mind in considering the result of another. In an earlier case of Carpenter v. Ebbelwhite (1939 I.K.B. 347), one of the Judges, Greer, L. J., expressed the view that the reason for the Rule no longer exists in the case of trial of motor accident cases before Juries having regard to the fact that every Juror must be known to be aware of the Statutory provisions concerning compulsory insurance by motorists against third party liability. On the question of judicial practice it is worth noting that the two Circuit Judges in Dublin several years ago made a rule that in cases being tried before either of them without a Jury in which money has been paid into Court with the defence, the amount paid into Court is to be left blank by the Court Officials in the copy of the defence attached to the file of pleadings in Court, so that the amount paid into Court is not brought to the attention of the Judge before judgment has been delivered.

Statutory Notice to Creditors.

We have received a letter from Mr. James R. Ryan of 9 Harcourt Street, Dublin, stating that the prevalent practice of publishing the Statutory Notice to Creditors in the Iris Oifigiuil is based on a misapprehension of the law and is, in fact, an unauthorised expenditure of funds by an Executor or Administrator. He points out that the method of publication is laid down in 22 and 23 Vic. cap. 35, Section 29. By this Section it is provided that where an Executor or Administrator shall have given such or the like notice as in the opinion of the Court would have been given by the Court of Chancery in an Administration suit for creditors and others to send in their claims against the estate, such Executor or Administrator shall at the expiration of the time named in the said Notice be at liberty to distribute the assets having regard only to the claims of which he shall have received notice. The present practice of the High Court in Administration Suits, is direct publication twice each at intervals of one week in one Dublin and one local newspaper. Publication is not directed in Iris Oifigiuil. Mr. Ryan further states that in a Bill of Costs in which his firm was concerned some years ago the expenses of publication in Iris Oifigiuil were opposed on taxation and disallowed by the Taxing Master. The legal position as to the proper method of publication appears to be as stated by our member, but those interested in the matter will, no doubt, take an opportunity of verifying it for themselves. Whether publication in Iris Oifigiuil is, as he states, an unauthorised expenditure of funds by a personal representative is a point which seems to be open to argument.

District Court Rules.

The District Court Rules Committee, with the concurrence of the Minister for Justice, has made new Rules entitled District Court Rules, 1942 (S. R. & O., 1942, No. 299) regulating the procedure under the Enforcement of Court Orders Act, 1926 and 1940. The District Court Rules, 1941 (No. 2) (S. R. & O., No. 337 of 1941) are revoked. The Committee has also made new Rules entitled District Court Rules, 1942 (No. 2) (S. R. & O., 1942, No. 144) prescribing forms to be used in proceedings under Children Acts, 1908-1941, in lieu of the forms contained in the Schedules to the Rules made on 31st July, 1909, under the Children's Act, 1908.

Decision on Costs—Workmens' Compensation Rules, 1942.

In the recent case of Behan v. Grand Canal Company (77.I.L.T.R.36) Judge Davitt had to decide on an application under Rule 51(7) of the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1942, for additional remuneration over and above the applicant's scale costs, in view of additional work entailed in the preparation and institution of the proceedings due to the fact that the workman was a person of unsound mind. The Respondents at first denied liability, but after service of the originating summons had filed a defence admitting liability to make the maximum weekly payment and had paid into Court the full amount of the arrears with the applicant's appropriate scale costs. Judge Davitt held that Rule 51(7) contemplates an award of costs to a party as a condition precedent to the allowance of additional remuneration and that as the applicant was entitled as of right to his costs up to the filing of the defence he was not a person to whom costs had been awarded. The award of costs presupposed an issue as to the applicant's right to same and as there was no issue as to the applicant's right to his initial costs the Court was reluctantly compelled to dismiss the application for additional remuneration.

LEGAL APPOINTMENT.

Mr. Donnchadh UaDonnchadha has been appointed an Acting District Justice. Mr. UaDonnchadha was admitted a Solicitor in Easter Sittings, 1933, and for some years practised at 16 Nassau Street, Dublin. He was appointed Assistant Solicitor in the Office of the Chief State Solicitor and for the past six years has been engaged principally in the conduct of proceedings on behalf of the State in the Metropolitan and County Dublin District Courts.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

The Law Society's Centenary Annuity of £52 per annum, which was instituted to commemorate the Society's Centenary and which is administered by the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, has been awarded as the result of an election by the members of the Association to Mrs. Florence Roche, widow of the late David Roche, Solicitor of Tralee and Castleisland, Co. Apprentices in the Defence Forces.

It was decided to ask the Government to make an Order under the Emergency Powers Act, 1939, entitling the Council, at their discretion, in cases where they are satisfied that a solicitor's apprentice has, during the period of his indentures, served in the Defence Forces of the State or in any public service connected with the present emergency, declaring that the period of such service shall for all purposes be reckoned as time duly served under his indentures of apprenticeship.

Legal Education.

A Committee of the Council was appointed to consider the education, training and discipline of solicitors' apprentices and to report to the Council as to what changes, if any, should be made in the present system.

State Aid for Prisoners.

Applications will be received up to June 9th, 1943, and should be addressed to the Secretary, Incorporated Law Society of Ireland, Solicitors' Buildings, Four Courts, Dublin.

EXAMINATIONS RESULTS.

The President, addressing Solicitors' apprentices and intending apprentices in announcing the results of the Preliminary and Final Examinations, held in April, 1943, said:—

Preliminary and Final Examinations, I must inform the students present, and in fact, announce that the Court of Examiners have approved of a regulation prohibiting any disclosure of results before the Council of the Law Society has considered and adopted the report of the Court of Examiners. This regulation, enforceable from now onwards, ends a custom which was increasing, whereby students, by various means, obtained advance information.

It is the desire of the Council that the announcement of results should be regarded as a ceremony of importance to our students, who have not the advantage of any formal admission and that on the occasion of such announcement, the President of our Society will deliver a short address to the students.

To those who have passed their Preliminary Examination, I would wish them every success in their work and study. I wish to impress on them the necessity for regular attendance in the office where they intend to serve their apprenticeship, and in the case of students who will serve their apprenticeship in country offices to impress upon them the necessity of regular attendance in the Town Agent's office in the city during the period that they will be in Dublin for the lectures. By this means they will obtain, provided they take an interest in the work in the office in which they are apprenticed, a very excellent knowledge of practice, a knowledge which will enable them to be much more proficient when they qualify, as many newly-qualified solicitors are not at the moment. I also desire to impress upon them the necessity of regular and punctual attendance at the lectures given by this Society and the exercise by them of restraint and discipline at these lectures. Many of these students, I know, will also attend lectures at the Universities, and if they intend to profit by these lectures, together with the lectures they will receive here, they must be regular in their attendance and attentive to the subject of the lectures. It is hoped that shortly, further facilities will be available to our students for a more intensive study of the practice which they will need in the days when they are qualified, and also to a more beneficial legal course.

It is only fitting that I should recommend every apprentice, when he is in Dublin, to become a member of the Solicitors' Apprentices Debating Society. This Society is worthy of support because it affords ample opportunities to its members to become experienced in public speaking and debates. You will also benefit by the social activities of the Society.

For some number of years, our examination results have not been satisfactory, in as much as very few honours have been secured. I would therefore urge those of you who are now entering their student days to endeavour to acquire such an excellent knowledge of both theory and practice, that our future examination results will disclose a more happy result.

Many present are awaiting the results of the Final Examination, and to those who have passed that Examination I desire to extend very hearty congratulations and every good wish to them in the life that lies ahead. It is not out of place to impress upon the students who have now qualified that they are entering a profession with a very great history and splendid traditions. If this, profession is to hold the respect and the esteem of the people whom we serve, it will depend entirely on the conduct and the manner in which the younger practitioners conduct their business and the relations they will maintain with the public, whom they will serve, and their fellow-members in the profession. Every solicitor should place before him the ideals of truth and honesty and never vary, no matter what the temptations may be, from the strict path of proper conduct in the cases that may be entrusted to them, and of strict accounting to their clients for any money which they may receive. I expect that those who will enter the profession, shortly after the results are announced to-day, will use every possible endeavour to live up to the traditions of the past, maintain the credit and the stability of our profession, and endeavour to retain the high place we hold in the country. One of the essential things is to remember that we are not a business, but a profession, and that while we must be fair and honourable in all our dealings with the public, we must also be fair and honourable as regards our. brother solicitors.

I know that there is always a temptation for a young man to make every effort to obtain business, but this effort should not go to the extent of doing his brother solicitors harm and of deliberately, directly or indirectly, canvassing their clients. Where such practices creep into a district it means that there is 'no such thing as honourable practices left among the solicitors in that district, and where one member starts in unfair practices it means that other members will be tempted to follow to safeguard their, interests.

The start of a professional career is difficult, but there is always an opening in every district for a young able man; who is determined to succeed. He should build up for himself a reputation for hard work and a desire to assist his clients in the best possible manner, and also a reputation for honesty and fair dealing. By this means in the course of a year or so, any young solicitor should be able to make a reasonable success of the start of his practice, and he should always remember that, while he is only commencing, one day in the not very distant future he will be a senior member of the profession and one who must give a good example to those who are entering the profession. I wish each and every one of you a very happy and a very successful career.

To those who have failed I would appeal to them not to be discouraged but to remember that there is always another chance coming, and if they will continue their studies and give some more application than they have given up to the present, it may be expected that at the next announcement, their names will figure among the successful candidates.

Tá an t-am tagaithe anois nuair nach foláir díbh sgaradh o'n a chéile agus bhúr slighthe éagsamhla a ghabháil san saoghal. CURRENT TOPICS.

Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1943.

In the March number of the GAZETTE we published a short note entitled "Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Bill, 1942." "This Bill became law on 27th April, 1943. As enacted it bears little resemblance to the measure originally introduced in Dail Eireann which was the subject of the previous note in the GAZETTE. It is entitled "An Act to amend Section 46 of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1931," and the following is a very brief summary of its main provisions: (1) The definition of a building lease is extended to embrace land situate outside urban areas provided that it was demised under a lease for not less than 20 years. (2) Where a lease (termed a "partly built lease") would be either a building lease or a proprietary lease but is excluded either by reason of the noncompletion of the buildings agreed to be erected thereon, or because some of such, buildings were not erected in pursuance of an agreement for the grant of a lease on their erection, the Act provides for the creation of two notional leases, one called the "built on lease," and the other," the vacant lease." The built-on lease, which will comprise so much of the land in the partly built lease, as is covered by buildings and also the land ancillary and subsidiary thereto, will, under certain conditions, acquire the benefits of part V of the Act of 1931. The rent, covenants and conditions of the partly-built lease will be apportioned between the lands comprised in the built on lease and the vacant lease in proportion to their respective areas. (3) Lessees under leases which expired before the passing of this Act, but which, if they had not so expired, would have been entitled to the benefit of the Act, can, under certain conditions. preserve their rights. It is important to note that the period during which the lessee 🗻 under such an expired lease is entitled to obtain a reversionary lease is limited to six months from the 27th April, 1943, the date of passing of the Act, and solicitors who, may have such leases in their safes would be well advised to inform themselves without delay of the provisions of the Act and their clients' possible rights thereunder. (4) The fact that the lessee under such an expired lease has before the passing of the Act accepted a new lease from his lessor will not of itself deprive him of the benefits of the Act if the terms of such lease-are less favourable than those of a reversionary lease. (5) The Court is empowered to presume that buildings erected by the person in occupation of lands were erected in pursuance of an agreement for a lease, where such lease was in fact subsequently granted, even in the absence of direct evidence of such an agreement. The foregoing does not purport to be a complete summary but it may be sufficient to indicate the importance of the matter to solicitors, particularly having regard to possible loss of clients' rights through lapse of time.

Solicitors and Stockbrokers.

Where a solicitor in the course of his business instructs stockbrokers to sell stock or shares, the property of a client or other third party, is he liable to indemnify the brokers as principal or is his liability only that of an agent? This was one of the questions raised in the recent case of Hichens Harrison, Woolston & Co. v. Jackson & Sons (59 T,L.R. 112). The defendants were solicitors who had instructed the plaintiff stockbrokers to sell stock registered in the name of a third party by letter in the following terms :-

"Dear Sirs.

We enclose herewith certificates for £250 Consolidated Ordinary Stock in the Bristol Waterworks together with blank transfer duly executed. We shall be obliged if you will realise the stock for the best price obtainable and let us have cheque in due course.

Yours faithfully,

Jackson & Sons."

The plaintiffs sold the stock but before the transfer could be registered, the registered owner, a Miss Lucas, objected to the registration of the transfer with the result that the Company refused to act on same. The plaintiffs suffered damage and held the defendants responsible to indemnify them as principals. The contract note sent by the plaintiffs to the defendants was headed "Sold for account of Messrs. Jackson & Sons. Commission divisible with above firm. Miss E. A. Lucas." It was proved on behalf of the defendants that the stock certificate was in the name of Miss Lucas, that the letter written by the stockbrokers with the contract note was headed "A/c. Miss E. A. Lucas," and that the contract note stated that the commission was to be shared between the defendants, and the plaintiffs, and these facts were relied upon as showing that the plaintiffs dealt with the defendants as agents for a disclosed principal. The House of Lords rejected this argument, holding that none of these facts was sufficient to displace the written authority contained in the defendants' letters quoted above and the terms of the contract note sent to and accepted by the defendants and that they were therefore liable to indemnify the - plaintiffs. Per Lord Atkin: "The fact that the plaintiffs supposed that the solicitors were acting for a client or knew that they were or even knew that the client was Miss Lucas (which is certainly doubtful) would have no effect to indicate that the plaintiffs. were regarding the defendants as anything but principals as against them."

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

The President, addressing the meeting, said:

It is with very great regret that I must, in the first place, refer with feelings of very deep sympathy to the loss that our Council and our Society sustained by the death early this year of Mr. Edward H. Burne, - As you know, the late Mr. Burne had been a member of our Council and of our Society since 1916. and was President in the year 1928/29. There was no member of the Council whose advice was more sought by his fellow members than our late colleague. He was an outstanding and fearless advocate. In spite of a very busy professional life he had time to prepare and publish the standard work on the Rules and Practice of the District Court. In addition, he was our representative on the Rule-Making Committee of the District Court. The late Mr. Burne was, as you are aware, keenly interested in the work of many public and private charities, especially in the work of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, of which he was Deputy Chairman. His loss is keenly felt by his colleagues on the Council to which he gave many years of faithful service.

In addition to the loss of Mr. Burne our profession has suffered heavily by the death of many of our members in the past six months.

A great Solicitor, a great District Justice and a famous Irishman was lost to us by the death of Mr. Louis J. Walsh. 'He practised in Ballycastle until 1923, when he was appointed one of the first District Justices.'

He was a distinguished author and playwright. In connection with national activities he was interned in Ballykinlar by the British Authorities in 1920/21.

The late Mr. Frederick Sharpe was a Professor of Common Law to our Society from 1909 to 1914, and was one of the best known Solicitors in the City of Dublin.

We also sincerely regret the deaths of Mr. Thomas C. Wylie, Derry; Mr. James C. McGifford, Lisburn; Mr. James P. Ringwood, Dublin; Mr. Francis C. Pilkington, Dublin, and Mr. Hugh C. Cochrane, who formerly practised in Strabane.

I should also refer to the death of a very old servant of the Society, the late James Wood, who was well known to several generations of Solicitors as the Society's Hall Porter and Caretaker. For almost fifty years he was in the service of the Society until his retirement on pension in December, 1939.

May they rest in peace.

You will-recollect that at a special meeting held last October, final approval was given by the Society to the proposed new Solicitors' Bill, subject to certain amendments which were to be considered by the Committee appointed. The Committee considered all these amendments and the Bill in its final form was submitted, as directed by that meeting, to the Department of Justice.

However, recently a Bill was introduced and enacted by the Oireachtas entitled the Solicitors' Act, 1943. This Act deals solely with members of the profession employed full time in the Government Service and exempting these members from the obligation of paying any annual Licence duty. This Act affects the Society to the extent that we will lose a sum of about £20 or £25 per annum, but it does not in any other way affect the Society.

I understand that our Bill as presented by the Society is receiving the consideration of the Department of Justice and also the other Departments which might be affected by the Bill. In the discussion on the Act, to which I have referred certain points were raised which make it perfectly clear that our Bill is desired, not alone by our profession but by the members of the legislature. As you are aware we are seeking increased powers which the Society can exercise over its members and generally to improve the discipline of our members. The Act of 1898 which governs our Society is, with the passing of years, completely out of date. principal item in the proposed Bill is the compelling of Solicitors to keep clients' monies in a separate account thus preventing any mixing of clients' monies with the private affairs of a Solicitor. If the Bill becomes lawwe will be authorised to prepare the necessary regulations for this purpose and to see that these regulations are enforced. It is unfortunate that a few members of our profession make default in dealings with their clients. These cases receive great publicity but no publicity is given to the vast majority of our members that conduct all their cases with the public and their clients in an extremely honest and trustworthy manner. The percentage of the defaulters is only a fractional percentage of the total members of the profession. This is an extremely high standard, but our Society feels that even this very low percentage should disappear, and we trust that the new powers which we hope will be granted, will enable such a low percentage to be completely wiped out. It is in the interest of the members of our profession as well as in the interest of our clients that the public should regard every member of our profession as above reproach and that all monies entrusted to them are in safe hands.

Some criticism has recently been made on the work of the Statutory Committee. This criticism is made by uninformed persons. The Statutory Committee is a Committee appointed by the Chief Justice. The only power possessed by the Committee is to hear complaints which are brought before it by aggrieved persons and if any complaint is not proceeded with and no evidence given, there is no action that the Statutory Committee can take. When a complaint is proceeded with and the Committee is satisfied on the affidavits submitted that there is a prima-facie case then they proceed to a hearing. At the hearing the complainant is entitled to appear in person or be represented by a Solicitor and by Counsel. The Respondent is also so entitled to appear. The evidence which is recorded by an official shorthand notetaker is given on oath. The Committee has no power to take any view other than that Respondent is guilty or not guilty of professional misconduct. The Committee has no power to impose a sentence, but must submit its report to the Chief Justice. In a case in which professional misconduct has been found the Chief Justice hears the opinion of the Society and the Respondent's explanation and then decides as regards the punishment. I desire to make it perfectly clear that the only person entitled to remove a Solicitor from the Rolls for professional misconduct or to suspend or punish a Solicitor is the Chief Justice. When a Solicitor has his name removed from the Roll he can only be reinstated to the Roll and practise again by order of the Chief Justice. In no case is such a person permitted to practise again unless he satisfies the Statutory Committee and then afterwards satisfies the Chief Justice that he has made full and ample restitution, not alone to the party who made the complaint, but to any other of his clients who may have suffered. It is very rarely indeed that a Solicitor once struck off the Rolls has been reinstated and then only on the system to which I have referred. The proposed new Bill will bring into force a Committee called the Disciplinary Committee, with much more extended powers. This proposed Committee will have power themselves to remove a Solicitor from the Rolls or to suspend him. They will also have power to deal with cases of unprofessional conduct as apart from professional misconduct, which latter phrase means for all practical purposes misappropriation of clients' monies. An appeal from the decision of this Committee may be made to the Supreme Court both by the applicant and respondent. If I may express an opinion it is that the powers sought for in the proposed Bill will be ample to meet the situation and there will be no necessity for the suggestions made recently by a member of the Seanad. I may say that the members of our Society are keener than anyone else to uphold the integrity of our profession and seek that this Bill be enacted for the purpose of giving us the necessary powers. Every case brought before the Statutory Committee has received a fair hearing and every complainant afforded every facility to prove his case. I therefore hope that the Oireachtas will grant us the powers we seek and I can assure the members of the Oireachtas that if these powers do not prove ample, the Society will immediately seek further and more extended powers.

I had hoped on this occasion to have referred at some length to a matter which I think requires the attention of the members of both branches of the profession and the public generally and that is the question of the setting up by the Legislature of a Commission or Commissions to enquire into and report on the necessity for reform of our laws. The State took over the existing laws when it was set up in 1923 by the Adaptation of Enactments Act. Since then there has been some small adjustments of the law but there has been no general consideration or any attempt ·made for a complete reform of laws to bring them up to date. I trust that this matter will receive early consideration. It is only necessary to refer to the Company Laws and to the Bankruptcy Laws. We are also faced with the feudal system of primogeniture which affects all real property, except that covered by the Local Registration of Title Act. It is time the question of the unjust Will by which a Testator may leave all his property away from his wife and family was dealt' with. The passing of property in intestacy also requires consideration, and the widow's right to £500 when her husband dies intestate and without issue requires, under present circumstances, to be drastically altered. This is only a very brief resume, as the question of the reform of existing laws requires very careful and exhaustive examination.

I desire to stress the magnificent work carried out by our Benevolent Association and to express surprise that every Solicitor is not a member of this Association. No one knows the day or hour that he may be called from this world and no one of us can say that we will leave those near and dear to us in a position of affluence. The work of this Association is a great charitable work and one to which every Solicitor should give every possible assistance and financial aid.

There is just one other matter to which I feel I should refer and that is the educational standard, in recent years of those students who seek admission to our profession. Our Council and our Court of Examiners have viewed with considerable alarm the lack of the former high standard of proficiency in the examinations, especially in the Final Examination. I, of course, only refer to the "lack of honour passes in the past number of I am afraid that a considerable amount of this lack of honours has been due to the great strain imposed upon the students in passing their Final Irish Examination the same year as they present themselves for their Final Law Examination. When the Legal Practitioners' (Qualification) Act, 1929, was passed your Council undertook to the Department of Justice that they would carry out that act to the letter and in the spirit and they have done so. The standard required for the Final Irish Examination is a very high standard and must have mitigated against the intensive study required to obtain honours at our Final Law Examination. There is no person keener on the development and restoration of our national language, than I am and I believe that we are justified in recommending to the Department of Justice that our students should be permitted to present themselves for their Final Irish Examination in the second last year of their studies. I also am of opinion that the whole educational system of our apprentices should be enquired into and amended to meet modern conditions. With this in view your Council has authorised the setting up of a Special Committee to consider this matter and to report in due course. We hope that as a result of the work of this Special Committee our students will be better able to deal with the very many difficult problems that arise under modern conditions. At present there are different problems to face than fifty or even twenty-five years ago.

It is customary to review the work of the Council at this half-yearly meeting. During. the past six months your Council and the various Committees have been engaged in the ordinary work of the Society, and from time to time there have appeared in the GAZETTE reports of the work of the Council. You will recollect our Past-President referring to the many Committees of the Council necessitated by the fact that there were in existence eight different Committees, in addition to the Court of Examiners and the Statutory Committee. For various reasons some of these eight Committees were out of date and gave unnecessary work both to the members of the Council and to the staff. Accordingly a Committee was set up to consider the Bye-Laws of the Council, and as a result new Bye-Laws were drafted and approved by the Council and the number of Committees were reduced to four as follows:-

(1) Legislation and Privileges.

(2) Court and Offices.

(3) House, Library and Finance.

(4) Gazette.

There is, of course, in addition, the Court of Examiners and the Statutory Committee, and the Council has power from time to time to appoint any other ad hoc Committee or Committees as it thinks fit. Each of the Committees have met from time to time and have reported to the Council on the various matters which were left before them for their consideration.

It was felt that changes could be made in the GAZETTE so that it might have greater interest for the profession, but the changes which we desire cannot be proceeded with at the moment owing to the Emergency and the paper shortage. It was decided, however, that certain changes should be made in the GAZETTE and that members of the Society and the various Bar Associations throughout the country should be invited to contribute items of interest. Such contributions will be welcome but those contributing must realise that at the present time anything inserted in the GAZETTE requires consideration as regards space.

Correspondence has taken place between the Society and the Appointments Commission, in which the Commissioners have stated that they are willing in certain vacancies, to accept the recognised honours in our Final Examination as being equivalent to a University Honours Degree. We are still awaiting information as to what standard they will consider as equivalent.

A member objected to the form of Certificates issued by the Accountant General on the grounds that they did not show the gross dividend from which the Income Tax is deducted. A number of interviews took place between members of the Council and the Accountant General in the course of which the Accountant-General said that he could not agree to changing the present system as it would involve scrapping his ledgers and obtaining new ones and the Council decided that nothing further could be done in this matter.

An objection was also received to the practice of the Taxing Masters requiring Solicitors to lodge their stamped Certificates before taxation of costs. The Society has obtained an Agreement from the Taxing Office that a Register will be kept in the office so that it will only be necessary to lodge the Certificates at the commencement of each year.

A difficulty has arisen as regards apprentices serving in the Defence Forces. The Council is anxious that every facility should be given to these apprentices but, unfortunately, your Council does not possess the necessary powers.

It is proposed to ask the Department of Justice to issue an Emergency Powers Order which will give us the necessary powers.

As you are doubtless aware the Society appears in the Register of Nominating Persons, entitled to nominate candidates for the purpose of election of the Seanad.

Our profession will have a great part to play in the changed conditions that will exist in the future, when this terrible scourge of war has passed, and I trust that we will all be prepared to play our part in the building up of our own Nation and make it an example of a noble Christian State.

CERTIFICATE OF DISCHARGE OF INCOME TAX.

The attention of members is drawn to a notice which was published in the GAZETTE in April, 1933, with reference to the practice of charging against the purchaser of land the costs of obtaining and furnishing the certificate under Section 6 (1) Finance Act, 1928. In the case of Hopkins v. Geoghegan (1931 I.R. 135) it was held that the production of this certificate if required by the purchaser is an expense which by Section 3 (6) of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, must be borne by him in the absence of any provision to the contrary in the contract for sale. In 1933 the matter was considered by the Council, which, while not questioning the validity of the opinion expressed by the Court, advised the profession that in conveyancing matters the certificate in question should be furnished by the vendor's solicitor without charge either against his own client or against the purchaser. The Council is aware that while, in general, the practice suggested above is adopted, there is not complete uniformity in this regard. It is considered that in the interests of the profession as a whole members would be advised to follow the opinion expressed by the Council in a April, 1933.

INCREASE OF WORKMENS' COMPENSA-TION WEEKLY PAYMENT.

The attention of Solicitors is drawn to Emergency Powers (No. 274) Order, 1943, the effect of which is to entitle a workman who is in receipt of a weekly payment, in certain circumstances, to an increased weekly payment.

The Order is on sale at the Government Publications Office, College Green, Dublin.

THE Council has elected Mr. John B. Hamill, M.A., LL.B., of Ardronan, Dromiskin, Dundalk, Co. Louth, President of the Society and Mr. Eugene F. Collins of Messrs. Eugene F. Collins & Son, 19 Eustace Street, Dublin, Chairman of the "Leinster Leader" Co. as the Society's nominees on the Cultural and Educational Panel of candidates for the Seanad under the provisions of the Seanad (Panel Members) Electoral Act, 1937.

It is considered desirable that the profession should have representatives in the Seanad in a position to speak with authority on behalf of the Society and the profession, particularly in view of the early introduction of the Solicitors' Bill. It is hoped that members throughout the country will use their influence in securing preferences for the Society's nominees. Those having votes are requested to give the Society's nominees their No. 1 or an early preference.

SEARCH FEES

In view of the numerous queries as to the propriety of Search Fees the Council has decided to lay down general principles on which, in its opinion, Solicitors should normally act.

- (1) It is the duty of a Solicitor to keep his clients' valuable documents (such as documents of title, wills, or other documents specially entrusted to him for safe custody) carefully, and so as to be readily accessible. Normally no search should be necessary for such documents and, therefore, no search fee should be charged where the documents are required by the owner or by his Solicitor or by persons claiming under him. Where, however, a Solicitor is required to make a search for such documents and the search shows that they are not in fact in his custody, a search fee may properly be charged.
- (2) Where the Solicitor is required to hand over papers not falling under head (1) in a matter concluded at least one year previously, and where a search is genuinely necessary, a reasonable search fee may be charged dependent on the work involved. The sum of two guineas is generally fair, but in many cases the fee might be less or possibly more.
- (3) Papers under head (2) in a current matter or a matter concluded within one year should be handed over without a search fee.
- (4) A Solicitor is in all cases entitled to charge a reasonable fee dependent on the work involved for his attendance and for scheduling documents to be handed over. Such fee will normally be covered by the search fee where chargeable.
- (5) The above rules apply in the case of a Solicitor who acquires the practice of another solicitor, whether by death, purchase, or gift or otherwise.
- (6) Where a Solicitor is retained to wind up the practice of another Solicitor or of a deceased Solicitor, and has so acquired the documents of such Solicitor for safe keeping without acquiring the goodwill, the Solicitor is entitled to claim a search fee.

- (7) Where documents are required to be produced by some person other than the client or his present Solicitor, and the Solicitor holding the documents is at liberty to produce the documents, he should be normally entitled to a search fee.
- (8) Where a Solicitor is required to give information which necessitates making a Search, a fee may properly be charged.

This opinion of the Council will be published in the Society's Calendar and Law Directory.

CURRENT TOPICS

The Society's Gazette

The present issue of the Society's Gazette appears in a form different to that which has become familiar to members of the Society since it commenced publication. The Council in deciding to adopt this new form have had in view the desirability of increasing the utility and interest of the Gazette within the limits imposed by wartime restrictions. While the Gazette is and will continue to be published primarily as a record of the Society and will aim neither to emulate nor to compete with other publications of greater legal. interest, the Council hopes to increase its scope by keeping the profession in touch with recent decisions of the Irish and English Courts of peculiar interest to solicitors, by noting statutes of the Oireachtas and important Government regulations as soon as possible after they become law, by more extensive reports of the proceedings of the Society, and by the publication of notes which members are invited to contribute. It should, however, be borne in mind by contributors that brevity is essential in the present circumstances of paper shortage. Views expressed by contributors in the Gazette will not of necessity coincide with those of the Council except in so far as it may expressly endorse them.

Liability of Solicitors as Estate Agents

Solicitors who act as Estate Agents over their clients' property have in many cases been held liable to the Sanitary Authorities for the expenses of complying with the various notices which may be served on the owner on account of defects in tenanted property under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1878. This liability arises by reason of the definition of "owner" in Section 2 of that Act as "the person for the time being receiving the rack rent of the lands or premises in connection with which the word is used, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person, or who would so receive the same if the lands were let at a rack rent." Watts v. Borough of Battersea (1929, 2.K.B.63) Mr. Watts, the solicitor for the personal representatives of a testator, part of whose estate consisted of property let to occupying tenants, instructed Mr. Spicer, a builder who had collected the rents during the testator's lifetime, to continue to do so and to account to him on behalf of the actual owners from time to time. By a majority of the Court Mr. Watts was held liable as "owner," within the meaning of a statutory definition similar to that in the Public Health Act, 1878, to comply with a notice served by a public authority in respect of the premises. In a dissenting judgment Greer, L. J., expressed the view that Mr. Spicer who received the rents from the tenants was not the agent of the solicitor but rather of the actual owners who were entitled to the rents, the solicitor being a mere intermediary through whom the rents were passed on to the owners. The position, in so far as it affects solicitors, was alleviated to some extent by the recent decision in Northern Ireland in Londonderry Corporation v. Gillespie and Glass (1938, In that case the defendants were N.I.144). solicitors for the actual owners, all of whom resided abroad, of certain tenanted property. and the local authority relied on Watts v. Battersea Borough Council as establishing their liability as owners, within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1878, to comply with a notice to abate a nuisance in respect of the property. The defendants proved that the rents collected by them, although admittedly received over an appreciable period, were all in respect of arrears and not current rents. Andrews, L. C. J., in delivering the judgment of the Court in favour of the defendants drew a distinction between the position of a solicitor acting as such and enforcing payment of arrears of rent and that of an estate agent collecting current rents, and held that in the former case the solicitor is not subject to the liability of an owner under the Act. This, he said, sufficiently distinguished the case from Watts v. Battersea Borough Council in which the solicitor received the current rents from the actual collector. His Lordship also, by way of obiter dictum, indicated his preference for the dissenting judgment of Greer, L. J., to that of the majority of the Court in Watts' case. There does not seem to be any more recent decision on the matter in Ireland, but if the views of Andrews, L. C. J., and Greer, L. J., commended themselves to the Supreme Court the area of liability of solicitors who manage their clients' property would be considerably reduced.

Omission to ask for Costs .

It sometimes happens at the end of a complicated trial that Counsel, whose attention may be engaged by weightier matters, inadvertently omits to ask for the costs of some interlocutory motion which is not automatically included in the General Order for Costs. Order XXVIII Rule XI of the Rules of the Supreme Court provides that clerical mistakes in judgments or orders, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the Court or a Judge on motion or summons without an appeal. This is an exception to the general rule that the Court cannot modify an Order after it has been perfected, in the absence of some extraneous element such as misrepresentation. In Fritz v. Hobson (1880, 14, Ch.D.542,) the Court overruled a submission that the rule did not apply to the accidental omission by Counsel to ask the Court for something which ought to have been provided for, saying that such an omission was very natural when Counsel's attention was directed to matters of greater importance. In the recent case of re Inchcape (1942 2 All E.R.157.) it was held that the corresponding English Rule, which is identical in terms with ours, entitled the Court to allow costs, incurred before the issue of the summons, of collecting evidence upon domicile and of obtaining Counsel's opinion, which Counsel had omitted to ask for as part of the general costs, previously directed to be taxed as between Solicitor and client and paid out of the estate. An accidental omission on the part of Counsel as the result of which the Judge does not make the Order as to costs that he would otherwise have made is an "accidental slip" within the meaning of the Rule.

Banks as Executors

THE President of the High Court is unofficially reported in the Irish Law Times and Solicitors' Journal of 19th June as having made an Order in the Goods of Bessie B. B. Mitchell deccased, authorising the issuing of a grant of probate in the name of a bank, registered as a body corporate in England but not in Eire, which was appointed Executor of the Will. The practice which has heretofore obtained in such cases has been to allow such a grant to be made only where the bank was registered as a body corporate in Eire. In the case of a bank not so registered the grant was made to a syndic appointed by resolution of the Board of Directors to act on behalf of the bank. One of the consequences of this has been that where a bank not registered as a body corporate in Eire was appointed to act jointly as co-executor, either the bank or the other executor had to renounce the right to the grant here, as a grant will not be issued in the joint names of a syndic and another person.

Following the principle laid down in this case the President of the High Court on the 11th July, 1943, made an Order the effect of which is that in future a duly qualified Body Corporate, which is corporate within England, Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland, may apply for and obtain a grant, either through a syndic, nominee or attorney, or in its corporate title as it may elect; but no such body having a registered place of business within Eire may act through an attorney in obtaining such a grant. This procedure will not, without further order, apply to any body corporate which is corporate outside Eire and outside the areas above mentioned.

Enforcement of Court Orders Act

THE Secretary read a letter from a member of the Society referring to defects in the existing procedure under the Enforcement of Court Orders Act, 1926, and stating that the procedure required considerable amendment in order to be of service to the public. The matter was referred to a Committee with power to consider the working and effect of the Act, and make recommendations for any suggested alterations or changes in the present procedure.

CURRENT TOPICS

Interviewing Opponent's Witnesses

THE Times, of 15th July last, published an extract from the remarks of Lewis J. in the course of a criminal prosecution before him during which it transpired that a woman, who had been summoned as a witness by the prosecution; went at the request of the Solicitor for the accused, to his office, and was taken through her statement by his clerk. The Judge was reported as having said that for a Solicitor, or for his clerk, when instructed by a prisoner, to interview a witness for the prosecution was most reprehensible, and he proposed to obtain a transcript of the evidence and send it to the Law Society. His Lordship took a serious view of the girl's evidence if true, and if it was not true the solicitor ought to be cleared of such a charge. The case does not appear to have been officially reported and, as published in the Times, the Judge's remarks were divorced from There may have been circumtheir context. stances connected with this case not disclosed in the report which were the real basis of the Judge's condemnation of the conduct with which he was dealing. If such circumstances were not present many will feel that the prohibition laid down by the Judge was too wide. Most solicitors would be surprised to learn of any universal rule whereby merely interviewing any witness, whether already sub-poenaed or not by another party to the proceedings, is regarded as a breach of propriety. Cases will occur in which common sense will suggest that it would be improper to seek to interview a particular witness. There seems, however, to be no valid reason why a solicitor, preparing instructions for Counsel for the defence in a criminal prosecution should be obliged to rely upon depositions or proofs of evidence taken down by the police or someone else if he has reason to believe that they may be incomplete or may omit to deal with matters within the knowledge of a witness which he foresees will be important The popular terms, for his client's defence. "witness for the prosecution" and "witness for the defence," though sanctioned by usage, are really a misnomer. Provided that he scrupulously avoids anything which would constitute an abuse of his privilege the general view of the profession has been that a solicitor is entitled to interview any witness whose evidence may be necessary for the presentation of the facts of his client's case to the Court.

Withdrawal of Bill of Costs

A solicitor differs from other professional men in being subject to the provisions of the Solicitors Acts and, as an Officer of the Court, being under its jurisdiction in the conduct of his client's business. One of the disabilities attaching to his official status is that a Bill of Costs, once delivered to a client, cannot in general be withdrawn or amended, either so as to increase or. diminish the charges, otherwise than by consent. A solicitor, on delivery of a bill may expressly reserve the right to withdraw or alter it on condition, provided that the condition is such as can fairly be imposed by a solicitor on his client. The Court has jurisdiction to permit the withdrawal or alteration of a bill in proper circumstances. In a recent decided case, In re a Solicitor and In re Taxation of Costs, 59 T.L.R. 68, a solieitor was given leave to withdraw a Bill of Costs furnished to a client and to substitute an altered bill. He had represented the client in partially successful litigation and the client had obtained against his Opponent in the action an order for payment of certain costs. The taxation of these costs, as between party and party, had been completed, according to the English practice, subject to the vouching of Counsel's fees, and portion of these fees amounting to £298 was still due to Counsel on the date of the party and party taxation. Subsequent to the party and party taxation, but before payment of Counsel's fees, the solicitor furnished to his client a Solicitor and Client bill which included these fees, but by error failed to comply with a regulation requiring unpaid disbursements to be set out in the bill in a particular manner. He did in fact pay all fees due to Counsel before taxation of the Solicitor and Client bill, as a result of which the client obtained against his Opponent a certificate of taxation, as between party and party, of an amount which included these fees. On the taxation of the Solicitor and Client bill, the irregularity in the setting out of Counsel's fees was relied upon by the client in order to have them disallowed. The solicitor, on application to the Court, was granted liberty to withdraw the defective bill and to furnish another setting out the items correctly, but not altered in any other respect. The Court held that it had a discretion in the matter, and exercised it in favour of the solicitor, chiefly because failure to do so would give the client the pecuniary benefit of the payments made to Counsel by the solicitor. Order LXV Rule 45 (c) of the Rules of the Supreme Court (Ireland) 1905, provides that no addition or alteration shall be made in costs after they have been lodged for taxation, except by permission or direction of the Taxing Master, so that it would seem that such an application in this country need not be made to a Judge in the first instance.

The War and the Perpetuities Rule

It has been held in England recently that a gift over in a Will on a condition subsequent which could happen only after the termination of the present war, was bad, as infringing the rule against perpetuities. The Testator had bequeathed stock upon trust for a Church to apply the income as an endowment fund with a gift over in the event of services in German not being regularly conducted there after the war. The High Court held that it could not be said that the present war must end within the period limited by the rule against perpetuities, so that the residuary bequest must vest within twentyone years from the Testator's death, and the gift over was accordingly held bad. (re. Engels 195 L.T.138).

Court Behaviour (contributed)

A provincial member writes: The recent announcement that the occupant of the almost forgotten (to us) Woolsack has come to the conclusion that women appearing in Court and taking the oath on giving evidence may do so without affecting the elaborate head-dress beloved of the well-known coloured sporting tipster, or even the modest handkerchief, raises the question of how far our own Courts may be disposed to recognise women litigants appearing without head covering. At least in our Circuit and District Courts, men are admonished to "take off your hat, Sir," while women sweep by arrayed in all their glory. There is the case of the sprightly junior who wished to draw the attention of a certain County Court Judge to his gorgeously befeathered bar-maid witness in a Licensing appeal, and sought his Honour's approval of "the manner in which his proofs were presented "the witness, of course, failing to appreciate the reason for the resulting laughter in Court.

However, in the matter of proper deportment, or dress, it seems but right to regard the woman who appears in our Courts without head-dress as in no way acting disrespectfully, but what of the two persons of the weaker sex, who were seen recently in the back of a certain Court in the country calmly indulging in a surreptitious cigarette?

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO THE STUDENTS

BEFORE announcing the results of the Society's Examinations, held in October, 1943, the President addressed the apprentices and intending apprentices in the Hall of the Society as follows:—

To-day it is my duty to announce to you the results of the recent Preliminary, Intermediate and Final Examinations, together with the results of the First and Second Examinations in Irish. As I pointed out on the last occasion, Universities have their ceremonies for conferring of degrees. The members of the Bar are called in Court by the Chief Justice, but in our department of the Legal profession, there is no ceremony or formality on admission. Personally, I am a believer in some ceremony in which the President of the Society can formally welcome to the ranks of the Profession, those who have been successful in their Final Examination and that he can then give them words of encouragement and hope for their future careers.

To-day I have again to congratulate all those who have been successful in the Preliminary. Examination. To them and also to those apprentices who have not been under the obligation of presenting themselves for the Preliminary Examination but who are at the commencement of their apprenticeship, I desire, on behalf of the members of the Council of this Society, to wish them every success in their work and in their study, and to express the hope that they will realise that their future will depend on the manner in which they prepare themselves, during their years of apprenticeship and legal training. They should be particularly careful to gain all the legal experience in practice that they possibly can, in whatever office they may be apprenticed; and those who are apprenticed outside the city, should, when they are in Dublin for Lectures, be regular in their attendance in the Town Agent's Office and take advantage of all the extra training in the practice of work in the High Court, that they can possibly obtain. Perhaps it may seem rather strange to add that there should be introduced among our students a greater discipline and a greater desire to appreciate the necessities of the care and of the attention that they must give to their work when they are admitted to our Profession, and that they can only obtain the necessary training for that care and attention by regular and punctual attendance at the lectures given them by the Society and the exercise by them of restraint and discipline at these lectures.

Those who are attending lectures at the University should be most regular in their attendance and attentive to the subjects of the lectures.

To all who have passed the Intermediate Examination I also extend hearty congratulations and I would urge those successful candidates, now that they have passed the first stage in their training, that they should give greater attention to the work that they are doing in their offices and to the study of the subjects that are laid before them in the course for the Final. We feel that our apprentices should make every possible effort to equip themselves to the utmost both in their legal training and their practical work.

Again, to the students who are entering on their apprenticeship and to those who have just passed their Intermediate Examination, may I recommend that everyone of them should become a Member of the Solicitors' Apprentices' Debating Society and benefit by the ample opportunities that the Society affords to its members to become experienced in public speaking and debates. They will also benefit by the social activities of the Society. From the membership of this Society, they will gain the self-confidence that they will require when they are qualified and when they must attend Court on behalf of the clients who will be theirs in the future:

I would also urge upon them to endeavour to acquire such an excellent knowledge of theory and of practice that our future examinations will disclose results far more excellent than any that have been won by brilliant students of the past. I am especially pleased to be able to announce medal awards in the Preliminary and Final Examinations, and the award of the Findlater Scholarship for the first time since 1937.

To those of you who are now waiting for the results of the Final Examination, and who have passed that examination, I desire to address a few brief words of congratulation and encouragement. May I heartily congratulate all those who have passed their Final examination. wish to them, each and every one, a very brilliant career in the profession which they have chosen for their life work and may I hope that in the years that lie ahead, the students who leave this Hall . to-day with the knowledge that they have passed their Final examination will be determined to carry on the traditions of many great members of our profession who have gone before them. Let them realise that in their hands lies the future of this profession and in their hands and theirs alone, lies the possibility of retaining and of increasing the goodwill and the confidence of the people of this country, of the people that they propose to assist, to advise and to serve during their professional life, If we are to hold this respect and esteem, it will depend entirely on the conduct and the manner in which the younger practitioners conduct their business and the relations that they will maintain with the public, whom they will serve and with their fellow members of the profession. As I stated on the last occasion, every Solicitor should place before him the ideals of truth and honesty and never vary, no matter what the temptations may be, from the strict path of proper conduct in the cases that may be entrusted to him and a strict accounting to his clients for any money which he may receive. You will remember all the time that you are not a business, but a profession, and that, while we must be fair and honourable in all our dealings with the public, we must also be strictly honourable as regards our relations with our fellow professional men. No matter what the temptation may be, no matter what glittering prize may seem to await our efforts, never let this hope or desire take any one of you from the strict and narrow path of truth and of honesty in your relations with your fellow professional men and with those who entrust their business to you.

Perhaps it will not be out of place to urge that you young men should not alone be leaders in your professional life in the future, but that you may be leaders of your people, that you can be looked up to for advice, not alone on matters of law, but that you may be looked to, to advise the people of your district and the people of your country in the well-being of those people and in the government of those people. I would urge that, as far as you can, you should take an active interest in the affairs of the country to which we belong.

It is fitting, in this year of the celebration of Féile Leith Chéad Chonnradh na Gaedhilge, and in this week of the Oireachtas, to urge also every young Solicitor to do everything in his power, to spread among the people of this country, the love of their own tongue and to assist to bring back to general use the tongue of the Gael. It is now necessary for everyone of you to have a proper knowledge of the Irish language before you can be admitted to the profession. It was necessary for you to pass a First Examination in Irish and then to pass the Second or Final Examination in Irish to show that you are able to conduct your business, both in Court and in your Offices, through the medium of our national tongue. Too many, when their student days are passed, neglect it. Too many forget that there is a great heritage of the Gael to be saved and that that can be saved only by those of this generation and in no hands can it hope to receive greater help than in the hands of young men and women, such as you are, in encouraging the work and rousing the enthusiasm of all the people of your district in what should be a great national movement. I do feel a little pride that in the position which I have the honour to hold to-day, I am the first since the establishment of this Society, who has addressed its apprentices and its members in our own tongue. I know that many more able speakers of Irish than I am, will follow me from year to year in this office, and I know that they too, will encourage other students in every possible way.

Tá uaim arís comhgháirdeachais a dhéanamh le gach uile duine gur éirigh leis ins na scrúducháin de'n bhabhta seo agus iad-san go bhfuil an scrúdú deiridh buaidhte aca, 'sé guidhim dóibh ná go raibh gach uile shonas aca agus an rath ar a saothar ins na bliadhanta atá ag síneadh amach rompa. 'Go dtugaidh Dia gach uile bheannacht dóibh, agus díbh go léir.

The President, in moving the adoption of the Annual Report said:

GENTLEMEN;

At our half-yearly meeting in May last, I referred to the very heavy loss our Profession had sustained by the death of so many members during that half-year. It is with very great regret that I have again to refer to the passing of so many members. Death has claimed an old and valued member, the late-Mr. P. J. Brady, who was a well-known public representative. While member for the St. Stephen's Green Constituency in the British House of Parliament of 1910 to 1918, he was responsible for the enactment of the act providing meals for necessitous schoolchildren. Mr. Brady was also a member of the St. Vincent de Paul Society and lent his ready help to other charitable works. He was Director of the Hibernian Bank and the Great Southern Railways. For many years a member of our Council, he was President for the year 1921-22. In addition, he was actively interested in the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, of which he had been a former Chairman and Trustee. During the last six months, death has also claimed Mr. William Ingram, Limavady, Mr. J. T. Cosgreave, Rathkeale, Mr. Louis A. Kennedy, Belfast, Mr. A. Plunkett Kenney, Dublin, Mr. Joseph G. Fitzgerald, Sir Henry Wynne, the last Chief Crown Solicitor of Ireland, Senator David L. Robinson, Mr. Patrick J. O'Hagan, County Registrar, Dundalk, Mr. John Davies, formerly of Dublin, and Registrar of the High Court of Justice, Northern Ireland, Mr. Gerard M. O'Brien, Dublin, Mr. Vincent P. Kennedy, Cavan, Mr. Francis F. Cullinan, formerly Crown Solicitor for Clare, and Mr. John Alexander of Belfast. Go ndéanaidh Dia trócaire ar a n-anama.

I propose asking you to take the Annual Report as read. It has been in the hands of every member for some time, and has given you a detailed account of the activities of this Council during the past year.

With your permission, I desire to refer to certain matters set out therein. For some time past, we have constantly been receiving complaints from members about serious delays in the Land Registry. Every member will appreciate how these delays affect the general public in preventing their ordinary transactions being completed promptly. It also very seriously affects our members in their professional relations with their clients who naturally place the responsibility for this unnecessary delay on the Solicitor instead of on a department, with which the ordinary client has no contact and of which he has very little knowledge. On the 2nd July last, the Secretary wrote to the Department of Justice and pointed out the serious inconvenience caused by the lengthy delay in the Registry after documents had been lodged. A reply was received that this question was a subject of correspondence between the Departments of Justice and Finance. Again, on the 18th of last month, the Secretary wrote to the Department of Justice giving a number of instances of delays, and also sent a copy of this letter to the Registrar of Titles. The Registrar replied stating that the delays were due to lack of sufficient staff to deal with the increasing volume of work in the Land Registry. He added that he had made repeated representations to the Department of Justice and understood that the question of staffing was under consideration by the Department of Finance. We are all agreed that no blame is attachable to the Land Registry Officials who are not alone very efficient, but most courteous, and that the Department of Finance is responsible for the length of time they have allowed this matter to drift. I hope that by directing public attention to such a state of affairs, it will immediately be. remedied. It is only right to draw our members attention to the fact that the Registrar states that a great deal of work is thrown on his staff by the careless manner in which some practitioners perform their conveyancing and registration work, leading to much correspondence, queries and rulings refusing registration, much of which would not be necessary if the documents were properly prepared. I trust that all solicitors will endeavour to see that all documents for registration in the Land Registry are properly prepared and so assist the officials in an obviously understaffed office, in carrying out their duties:

In my address at the last half-yearly meeting I referred to correspondence that passed between the Appointment Commissioners and this Society. As a result of this correspondence the Commissioners have agreed to regard 60 per cent. in the Society's Final Examination as equivalent to a University Honours Degree for candidates for Junior Administrative offices. The Commissioners will accept a certificate from the Society as sufficient evidence of the percentage secured by a candidate for one of these appointments.

I feel that I should refer also to another matter which is mentioned in the Annual Report and which is at present the subject of correspondence between the Secretary and the Department of Local Government. Section 20 of the Neutrality (War Damage to Property Act), 1941, authorises the compulsory acquisition of certain property by district planning authorities, on payment of compensation to the owner. The Act does not contain any specific provision for the payment by the public authority acquiring the property of the owners' costs of showing title, and I am informed that the public authorities require title to be fully shown in these cases. The Dublin Corporation have refused to pay the owner's costs of showing title in these cases on the ground that they have been advised by counsel that they have no power to make such payment in the absence of specific authority in the Act authorising the acquisition. In every other case of which I am aware, except one which I shall mention in a moment, it is the invariable practice of the local authorities to pay the owners' costs of making title where his property is taken compulsorily. The exception to which I have referred is the Derelict Sites Act, 1940, in which the Dublin Corporation has refused to pay the costs for a similar reason, viz., that they are not empowered by Statute to do so.

By direction of the Council the Secretary wrote to the Secretary of the Department of Local Government in July last, drawing attention to what are apparently omissions in both these Acts and asking that they should be remedied with as little delay as possible. A reply was received from the Department that the matter was being discussed with the City Law Agent. I am informed that in reply to a question in the Senate yesterday the Minister stated that he was satisfied that the public authorities had full power to pay these costs under existing legislation. It is clear that there is a difference of legal opinion between the Department and the Corporation, for which the public are the sufferers, and which could easily be resolved by a short amending Act or, if necessary, by Emergency Powers Order.

A Notice of Motion for discussion at the meeting has been received suggesting that the Society should urge on the Minister for Justice the necessity for the setting up of a permanent Law Reform Committee, consisting of members of the legal profession, with a view to having the many anomalies and archaic rules in our laws removed or revised. I presume that this Notice of Motion has been sent in as a result of the remarks I made at our half-yearly meeting in May. On that occasion I referred briefly to this matter which requires the attention of the members of both branches of our profession, and the public generally, and suggested the setting up by the legislature of a Commission or Commissions to enquire into the reform of the laws. It would not be possible within the time at my disposal, to deal with this matter at any length. For all purposes it is possible to divide the subject of legal reform into certain divisions, some of which require immediate attention. For instance, the law affecting companies in this country is now completely out of date. We are governed here by the Companies' Act, 1908, and although there has been a call from all parties concerned for the amendment and complete codification of the laws affecting companies, nothing has been done. These laws have received close and careful attention in Great Britain, and have been brought up-to-date. A Commission was appointed to enquire into and report on the Bankruptcy laws. Although the Commission reported and made recommendations, no action has yet been taken which would bring the Bankruptcy laws into line with modern conditions. There is a very urgent demand for the repeal of laws affecting charities, all of which laws are relics of the penal days, and many of these laws are treated now as being dead letters and of no effect. The descent of Real Property and also succession to intestate estates require very careful attention, reviewing and amendment. Then we have the case of the unjust will, by which a man may leave his wife and family penniless. There are many other branches of law in this country which require careful consideration, with a view to bringing them up to date, and bringing them into line with the requirements of the people of this country. All this is a matter of very considerable labour and one which it would almost be impossible to entrust to one Commission. There has been for some time in various articles in the Press, a demand for the codification of our laws. This is a somewhat different matter than that to which I am referring, which is not a codification, but a reform and amendment of laws unsuitable to the country, and particularly unsuitable to modern conditions. As a result of the remarks I made at our last meeting, correspondence took place between the Secretary and the Department of Justice. The Secretary of the Department suggested in correspondence that the Rule-making Authority of the Supreme Court, of which the President of this Society is an ex-officio member had full authority under Section 75 of the Courts of Justice Act. 1936, to consider the matter and make suggestions. I requested the Secretary to reply to the letter and point out that the work involved was so considerable that it would be a very unreasonable and unfair burden to place on such a Committee which consists of the Chief Justice, President of the High Court, Judges of the Supreme Court and High Court, representatives of the Bar and the President of this Society. The only manner in which this matter could be dealt with in a reasonable way would be as suggested in the Notice of Motion by the setting up of a Commission or Commissions to be presided over by a judge or other experienced lawyer, and to consist of members of both branches of the profession, representatives of the business community, of the Trades Unions and of the appropriate Government Departments. As I pointed out, it might be necessary in considering a matter of this importance that a number of such Commissions should be set up and, in fact, it might be desirable that it would be kept, for a time at least, in permanent session, and that they would be in a position to submit ad interim reports which should be at once available to the parliamentary draughtsmen to prepare the necessary legislation. There is nothing political in this matter and there should be no difficulty in having the necessary amended acts enacted without delay. I feel certain that all the members are in agreement on the necessity of such reform, and while I know there is a conservative opinion that this may not be our business, I do feel that a Society such as ours should give a direct lead and should make its opinions felt. I am certain that if such a Commission or Commissions be set up every member of our profession will give all the assistance in his power to enable the work of the Commission or Commissions to be completed in as short a time as possible. It may be appropriate to offer a criticism of the method adopted in passing recent legislation, in fact, a method that has been followed for some years, by which, in various Acts of the Oireachtas, existing legislation has been amended by reference. I presume that we will all agree that this method of legislation is very unsatisfactory and imposes a very considerable burden of checking the various sections in former Acts, of Parliament, which have been amended in this way and this burden affects not alone the members of our profession, but the general public. In addition, we are now faced with a very extraordinary growth of Departmental regulations under various Acts of Parliament, and particularly the growth, since this Great War started, of the regulations under the Emergency Powers Acts. We must recognise that during the emergency, such as we are faced with at the present time, it is necessary to entrust certain powers and duties to the various departments, but at the same time, there should be published, at least annually, a complete and proper index of the various Emergency Powers Orders, to enable all those interested, to ascertain immediately what particular regulation affects their business or profession. I would suggest that this method of Legislation by Order, should receive early attention and that as far as possible, it should be abolished. It is practically impossible at the present time, for the legal practitioner much less an ordinary member of the public, to follow the enormous amount of Emergency regulations that are being made from time to time.

There has been a growing practice, in recent years, of publication in the press of the value of estates of deceased persons, and in many cases, an epitome of the Wills. This frequently leads to very misleading information being conveyed to the general public, and occasions, frequently, very great pain and anxiety to the relatives of the deceased person. I quite realise that in many cases there may be news value in the paragraph in question, but the amount of news value can only apply to very large estates and I would suggest, with very great respect to the members of the Press, that they might consider the abolition of these items of news having regard to the distress which they cause in many cases.

I regret to have to report to you that there has been no further progress as regards the Bill for the better regulation of the Profession, which we submitted in draft to the Department of Justice for their consideration. I understand that the Bill is still receiving the consideration of that Department and also the other Departments which might be affected by it. I had hoped that before my year of office had ended this Bill would have been at least introduced, and that we could have looked forward to its early enactment.

There is another matter that I wish to refer to, that there are very few of our intending apprentices who are candidates for the Overend Prelimiary Scholarship, as most of these candidates are exempt from the Preliminary Examination. I trust that, in future, solicitors will direct the attention of intending apprentices to the fact that this Scholarship exists, and that the competition is at present very limited. The Scholarship is worth approximately £21 and I believe if the attention of intending apprentices were drawn to it, that there would be keen competition for the Scholarship.

It seems to me that the members of our Profession do not take their place in the public life of the country; particularly in provincial areas a Solicitor holds a very important position and he should, in addition to his professional activities, play a more active part in the public life of our country. His qualifications and his training amply endow him with the necessary attributes for public life and our profession could play a much more important part than they are doing to mould the destinies of the country to which we belong. I hope, therefore, that the younger members of our profession will take their places in the future Counsels of the nation. There is, at the moment, a great effort being made from all quarters to revive our national language. It has been made an essential subject for every apprentice, who must pass his "First" and "Second" Irish Examinations before being admitted a solicitor. I would appeal to these young men to play their part in the revival of the language, and by their example to spread it in the districts in which they live.

You will note that during the current year, the membership of our Society increased by forty members, compared with the previous year. There are 1,422 solicitors practising in the Twenty-Six Counties, of whom 68 also practise in Northern Ireland. This leaves a possible addition still to our members of 542, and I would again urge, as my predecessors have urged from year to year, that every solicitor should be a member of our Society. It would strengthen the Society in every way if we could say that every practising solicitor was a member of the Society.

Before concluding, I would desire to express my heart-felt thanks to the Vice-Presidents, Mr. Carrigan and Mr. O'Connor and also to every member of the Council for their wonderful cooperation, and for the splendid assistance they gave me in enabling me to carry out my duties during my year of office. I cannot conclude without joining the Secretary of the Society and all the officials in this expression of thanks. We have indeed been lucky in our selection of Secretary as a very worthy successor to our late Secretary, and I am deeply grateful to him for all the help and assistance he gave me.

There only remains for me to thank the Press for the very ample reports they gave during the past year, of the activities of the Society and to thank sincerely those gentlemen of the Press who are here to-day for their attendance.

I formally move the adoption of the report and accounts.

Mr. Boyle-Fawsitt seconded the adoption of the Report.

The following members addressed the Meeting on matters arising out of the Report: Messrs. M. Purcell, J. H. Bergin, A. E. Walker, P. Glynn, C. M. Gore-Grimes, George Crowley, P. C. Moore.

The President, having replied to the points raised, put the motion for the adoption of the Report which was carried unanimously.

The following Resolution, of which Special Notice had been given, was then proposed by Mr. Cox and seconded by Mr. Crowley: "That the Society urges on the Minister for Justice the necessity for the setting up of a permanent Law Reform Committee, consisting of members of the legal profession, with a view to having the many anomalies and archaic rules in our laws removed or revised." Messrs. J. J. Hickey, M. Purcell and T. D. McLoughlin having spoken, the motion was put to the meeting by the President and carried unanimously. Mr. A. H. S.

Orpen proposed that the best thanks of the Society be given to the President for his great services to the Society and the Profession during his year to office. The motion was seconded by Mr. T. H. R. Craig and carried with acclamation. The President thanked the meeting and the proceedings terminated.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Interviewing Opponent's Witnesses.

A MEMBER has drawn attention to a judicial pronouncement which should be noted in connection with the paragraph under the above heading in the November Gazette. In Attorney General v. Fitzgerald (68 I.L.T.R. 249) there was an appeal by Fitzgerald, the accused, against an order of the Circuit Judge refusing bail and remanding him in custody. The accused had been tried on charges on which the jury had disagreed and fresh charges were pending against him. One of the grounds on which the State opposed the granting of bail was the allegation that the accused had interfered with State witnesses. Per Hanna, J. "The next ground was that of interfering with State witnesses. I am not quite clear what 'interference' means, as suggested by the affidavit. Both accused and his solicitor, if they so desire, may interview witnesses for the State, so long as they do not suborn them to perjury. The mere fact of talking to or having a drink with a State witness is not of itself sufficient to disentitle the applicant to bail." This dictum of Mr. Justice Hanna should serve to dispel any doubts, if they ever existed in this country, as to solicitors' rights in such cases.

Solicitors' Income Tax.

THE COUNCIL is indebted to the English Law Society for permission to print the following report of the case, Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Elvy Robb & Co. from the Law Society's Gazette. It should be noted that it is a decision of the British General Commissioners of Income Tax and not of a Court of Law. The sole question involved in the appeal was whether a loss sustained by the solicitors in the management of a client's affairs was an admissible deduction from profits.

... The facts were that the solicitors had for many years managed the affairs of a lady client by collecting her income and disbursing the same in accordance with her instructions, the disbursements including periodical payments to the client herself. For a number of years the account had invariably been in credit, but as from 1931 there was a serious diminution of income, and by 1933 there was a debit balance of £369 due to the solicitors, which represented payments and advances made by them in excess of the income received. In 1933 the solicitors took a second charge from the client to secure £369 then due. This charge recited the facts and that the solicitors had only agreed to continue to act for the client upon having the security given. No interest had been charged on the balances due on the open account from time to time, but interest was reserved by the charge. ...

After the charge had been given, the solicitors continued to manage the client's affairs in the same manner as previously, but the income did not revive to the extent anticipated and, when the lady died in 1940, she was owing a further sum of about £130 in addition to the amount of £369 before mentioned. Both sums having proved to be irrecoverable, the solicitors claimed the right to set them off as deductions against profits, but the Inspector of Taxes concerned contended that the amounts in question had not been wholly or exclusively paid or expended for the purposes of · the solicitors' profession in accordance with Rule 3 (a) of the Rules applicable to Schedule D, and were not losses connected with or arising out of the profession within the meaning of Rule 3 (e).

The Revenue also relied upon the cases of Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Hagart and Burn-Murdoch (1929) A.C. 396; 14 T.C.433; (1928), S.C.745, and W. A. and F., Rutherford v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue, 23 T.C.8. The solicitors contended that their case was distinguishable from the two cases cited, because in both those cases specific advances were intentionally made to clients as such, and that in neither case did the solicitors concerned endeavour to prove any custom or practice of the profession in regard to making advances of that character. In their own case they urged that the debts arose in connection with a running account dealing with the management of a client's affairs, and that in making payments to or on behalf of a client, which in some instances exceeded the receipts on that client's account, they were merely acting in pursuance of a well recognised professional custom or practice. They called several well-known solicitors, including a member of the Council of The Law Society, to give evidence as to the existence of such a custom or practice.

The Commissioners found that there was a usual practice or custom of solicitors to the effect claimed, and that the debts in question had been incurred in accordance therewith, and were therefore admissable.

Limitation of Actions.

SECTION 3 of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, provides that any action under the Act in respect of the death of a deceased person must be brought within twelve calendar months from such death. This and various other statutory limitations of . time for instituting certain classes of proceedings must be constantly before the minds of those responsible for advising intending litigants. In a recent case under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, the plaintiff's solicitor wrote to the defendant's insurers to know whether liability was admitted. In a subsequent interview with the solicitors the representative of the insurers admitted verbally that they had not a good defence, and that negotiations should proceed on that basis, but that a writ would have to be issued in any event, whether agreement as to the amount of damages was reached or not, as the amount would have to be approved and apportioned by the Court. The solicitors for the plaintiff (who was administratrix of the estate of the deceased) subsequently issued a writ before the grant of administration had issued. At a later date they extracted the grant, withdrew the first writ, and issued another, but in the meantime the statutory period had expired. The defendant's insurers raised the defence that the action was statute barred. The English Court of Appeal held that the defendant and his insurers had agreed not to plead S.3 of the Statute as much as if that undertaking had been put into words, and that the attitude of the insurers in instructing their solicitor to plead the section was both misconceived in law and reprehensible. (Lubovsky v. Snelling 60 T.L.R. 52).

The words in the somewhat similar provision in the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, are that the action "shall not lie or be instituted" unless commenced within six months after specified events. It has been held that negotiations for a settlement do not prevent this statute from running. In view of the difference in the phraseology of the two sections, and the fact that it is the duty of public authorities to avail of this statute, it may be that an implied waiver of the statute would require to be supported by stronger evidence than in the case of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846.

Neutrality (War Damage to Property) Act, 1941.

THE DUBLIN City Manager has decided to make ex-gratia payments to owners of property acquired under the above Act in respect of their costs of making title for the Dublin Corporation, notwithstanding that the Act contains no express provision for the payment of such costs. In a circular letter to owners of property already acquired, or in course of acquisition, the Law Agent to the Corporation states that costs should be drawn on the basis of Sch. I of the General Order dated 16th April, 1884, made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Where the Corporation has already paid or agreed to pay costs of negotiation the scale items dealing with negotiations should be excluded from the bill. The City Manager has also decided, as an act of grace, to consider claims for compensation received after the time specified in S. 20 (2) of the Act.

Junior Administrative Appointments.

THE Civil Service Appointments Commissioners, at the request of the Council, have agreed to accept 60 per cent. in the Solicitors' Final Examination as the equivalent of an Honours University Degree as a qualification for the above appointments in the Civil Service.

A number of applications from Apprentices were dealt with.

Enforcement of Court Orders Acts— Examination of Debtors.

On a report from a Committee of the Council it was ordered that the representatives of the Society on the appropriate Rule Committees should be requested to have the existing procedure under the Enforcement of Court Orders Acts 1926/40 considered by the Committees with a view to ascertaining whether any improvements can be made in the existing procedure.

February 24th. The President in the chair. Present: Messrs. A. Cox (Vice-President), Sean Ó hUadhaigh, John J. Smyth, John J. Dunne, John P. Carrigan, P. R. Boyd, Patrick F. O'Reilly, John J. Bolger, Cecil G. Stapleton, F. J. W. Darley, Daniel O'Connell, W. S. Hayes, G. A. Overend, J. J. Lynch, H. P. Mayne, W. J. Norman, E. M. Fitzgerald, Roger Greene, J. B. Hamill, J. Travers Wolfe, H. O'Donnell, John S. O'Connor.

Advertisements by Solicitors.

On a report from a Committee, the Council considered two advertisements in the Dublin daily newspapers. One of these advertisements purported to be inserted by a solicitor who was stated to be travelling to America, and offered to undertake commissions on behalf of solicitors. The other advertisement was inserted by a solicitor offering to undertake work for professional correspondents. The Council, by resolution, expressed its disapproval of advertisements of this nature and it was ordered that the view of the Council should be published in the Society's Gazette.

Proceedings Against a Solicitor.

THE Secretary was directed to instruct counsel to apply to the Chief Justice to have the name of a solicitor struck off the roll on the ground that he had been convicted of a criminal offence.

Apprentice's Applications.

A NUMBER of applications from apprentices were considered and dealt with.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST SOLICITORS.

By order of the Chief Justice, dated 11th February, 1944, made on a report from the Statutory Committee, it was ordered that the name of Percy J. MacGrath be struck off the roll of solicitors in Eire on the ground of professional misconduct. Mr. MacGrath formerly practised at 15, Kildare Street.

By order of the Chief Justice, dated 11th February, 1944, made on an application by the Society, it was ordered that the name of Seamus S. Byrne be struck off the roll of solicitors in Eire on the ground that he had been convicted of a criminal offence. Mr. Byrne formerly practised at Mohill, Co. Leitrim.

By order of the Chief Justice, dated 11th February, 1944, made on an application by the Society, it was ordered that the name of John Joseph Kennedy be struck off the roll of solicitors in Eire on the ground of his conviction of a criminal offence. Mr. Kennedy formerly practised at 31, Wicklow Street, Dublin.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Appeal from refusal to grant adjournment.

By Section 24 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877, the Court of Appeal (now the Supreme Court) was given jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from any judgment or order of the High Court or any judges or judge thereof. Section 37 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936, gives a right of appeal to the High Court, subject to certain exceptions, from every judgment or order of the Circuit Court. An appeal lies in all cases other than in criminal cases from any decision of a District Justice to the Circuit Court under Section 84 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. On appeals, however, on matters of prac-. tice which are within the discretion of a judge the Appellate Tribunal will, in general, refuse to interfere. The point, which is of interest to solicitors, as to whether an appeal will lie from the refusal of a judge to grant an adjournment or postponement of an action was recently the subject matter of a decision of the English Courts in Dick v. Piller (17 T.L.R.276). . The case is of interest to Irish practitioners, for the statement of Scott, L. J. of the tests which, in his view, should be applied by the judge in granting or refusing an application for the postponement of an action on the ground of the inability of a witness to attend through illness. "If," he said, "an important witness—a fortiori if he is a party—is prevented by illness from attending the Court for an adjourned hearing, at which his evidence is directly and seriously material, what is the legal duty of the judge when an adjournment is asked for? In my view, if he is satisfied (1) of the medical fact and (2) that the evidence is relevant and may be important, it is his duty to give an adjournment—it may be on terms—but he ought to give it unless he is satisfied that an injustice would be done to the other side which cannot be reduced by costs." By Order XXXVI Rule 31 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, which is identical in terms with the corresponding English Rule, a judge may, if he thinks it expedient for the interests of justice, postpone or adjourn a trial for such time and to such place and upon such terms as he shall think fit. In order to found a right of appeal from the refusal of a judge or judges to postpone or adjourn an action it will be necessary to establish that such refusal was "a judgment or order" of the High Court -or the Circuit Court-or a "decision" of a Justice of the District Court, and this might present difficulty if the judge or justice simply made no rule on the application. It was held in Maxwell v. Keun (1928 I.K.B.) that a refusal to grant an application for the postponement of an action, coupled with a direction that the applicant should pay the costs of the application, was "a judgment or Order " of the High Court and subject to appeal, which in that case was allowed. Hanworth, M. R., after referring to the English Order XXXVI Rule 34, quoted with approval the judgment of the Court in Sackville West v. Attorney General (128 L.T.Jo. 265) in which it was stated that although it could not be said that under no circumstances would the Court of Appeal be justified in interfering with the discretion of the learned judge in the Court below, yet it would only be in the most extraordinary circumstances that an application to review the decision of the judge as to the conduct of the business in his own Court could succeed: that the only case in which the Court of Appeal would so interfere would be if satisfied that the decision was such that, notwithstanding the exercise of the learned judge of the power of control which he would have over the action when it came on for hearing, justice did not result, and that he had failed to see that such would be the effect of his decision. While it might be difficult to found a right of appeal from the refusal of the Court to make any order on an informal application for an adjournment, it is probable that the refusal to grant an order for adjournment on an application made formally. on notice and supported by affidavit would be a judgment or order and consequently subject to appeal. Having regard to the essential similarity in terms of the corresponding statutes and rules, it would appear that the right of appeal is governed by the same considerations in the Irish as the English Courts.

Action for negligence against Solicitors.

THE question as to whether an action for negligence by a client against his solicitor falls within the rule "Actio personalis moritur cum persona" was recently decided by the President of the High Court on hearing a reference of a preliminary point of law. The action on the pleadings was based on negligence. The defendant died while the action was still pending and his personal representatives pleaded that the alleged cause of the action abated on his death, as being founded on tort. His Lordship held that he was entitled to look at the substance of the action and not merely at the form of the pleadings. The test to be applied was whether the liability, if any, of the defendant to the plaintiff arose independently of any contract between them, or whether it arose out of obligations undertaken by contract. seemed to him that the substance of the action before him was the breach of a duty arising out of a contractual obligation, and the claim, therefore, did not abate by reason of the death of the defendant. (72 I.L.T.R. 190).

Restriction of Rents Order.

Every Solicitor will probably need a copy of the Emergency Powers (No. 313) Order, 1944 ~ (S. R. & O., 1944, No. 29) which came into force on 8th February, 1944. The effect of the Order is to control the rights of landlords both in regard to recovering possession and increasing the rent of premises to which the order applies. Controlled premises are, subject to certain exceptions, defined as dwelling or business premises situate in the County borough of Dublin or the borough of Dun Laoghaire, if the rateable valuation does not exceed £60, and situate elsewhere if the rateable valuation does not exceed £40. Under Article 4, the basic rent of controlled premises which were let for a term not greater than five years on 7th May, 1941, is the rent payable on that date, or in the case of premises last so let on a date not earlier than five yers before 7th May, 1941, the rent at such earlier date. In the case of controlled premises not within Article 4 the Court is empowered to fix the basic rent.

The Order provides for the recovery by tenants, but not retrospectively beyond 8th February, 1944, of any sum overpaid in respect of rent within six years after the date of payment thereof. It also contains an important provision enabling the Court in certain cases to rescind, retrospectively, ejectment orders made before the making of the Emergency Powers Order. An application to have an ejectment order rescinded under this Article must be made within three months from 8th February, 1944. The Order does not apply to premises already controlled under the Act of 1928. Copies of the Order are now on sale at the Government Publications Office, College Street, Dublin.

Solicitors' Documents in the Central Office.

The attention of solicitors is directed to the fact that, from time to time, many of their documents and copies of documents are left in the Central Office of the High Court. Solicitors are reminded that these documents may be of importance to them and that they should be taken up from the Office. Experience in the Central Office has shown that in taking up their own documents solicitors' assistants sometimes also take away documents of other firms by inadvertence. We have been asked to remind solicitors of the necessity of care by their assistants in this matter, as mistakes may cause considerable inconvenience to other members of the profession.

Our Statute Roll

"A CALENDAR of the Statute Roll in Force" (1922-1943) is to appear early in March at The Sign of the Three Candles. The object of the book, which runs to about 100 pages, is to save protracted research by supplying a "plain and compendious chronicle of the public Acts now in force," passed since the Treaty. Prepared by Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy, the Calendar is intended primarily for the legal profession, and it records by short title, year and number, some 650 Acts, being all the public Acts passed since 1922 and surviving at January 1st, 1944, except the annual Central Fund Acts; the 'parts' of the major Acts are set out; all sections and sub-sections repealed are noted with a reference to the repealing Acts; and the appendices give lists of Acts repealed or expired. Only a limited edition is contemplated because of war difficulties. (Price 21/-, post free 21/6).

Two other publications of interest to solicitors are now on sale at the Government Publications Sale Office, 3/4 College St., Dublin: Acts of the Oireachtas bound volume for 1942, price 15/8, and Index to the Emergency Powers Orders, 1939-1943, price 1/11, both post free.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Arthur G. Riggs, Solicitor, died on 16th January, 1944, at Torquay.

Mr. Riggs was admitted in Trinity Sittings, 1883, and practised at Castlepollard up to the year 1926, when he retired.

Mr. Albert Woodcock, Solicitor, died on 25th January, 1944, at his residence, Shanid, Brighton Road, Rathgar, Dublin.

Mr. Woodcock served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. George H. Lister, Dublin, was admitted in Trinity Sittings, 1918, and practised at 28. Molesworth Street, Dublin, under the style of Woodcock and Son.

Mr. Francis C. D. Joynt, Solicitor, died on 29th January, 1944, at his resdience, 89 Anglesea Road, Dublin.

Mr. Joynt served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. Samuel C. McCormick, Dublin, was admitted in Michaelmas Sittings, 1900, and practised under the style of Joynt and Crawford at 1 and 2 Foster Place, Dublin.

MR. HENRY EXHAM, Solicitor, died on 11th February, 1944, at his residence, 6 Alta Terrace, Monkstown, Co. Cork. Mr. Exham served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. Thomas Exham, Cork, was admitted in Trinity Sittings, 1874, and practised as senior partner in the firm of Thomas Exham and Sons, at 10 South Mall, Cork.

A Cork colleague writes :-

The late Mr. Henry Exham was born on 27th April, 1853. He was educated at Knights School, Cork, and admitted a solicitor in 1874. Until two years ago he came to business regularly every day. He was a very able conveyancer and had a wide experience in Estate Duty Law. In his youth he was a keen yachtsman and continued to take an interest in the sport. He was a member of the firm of Thomas Exham and Sons, who are probably the oldest legal firm in Cork city, as they have been in existence since the beginning of the 18th and probably from the late 17th century. The earliest name of the firm was Carlton and Exham, but the partners for the last four or five generations have been solely Exhams. It may be doubted if there are many firms in Ireland with such a long record. Mr. Exham's brother, the late Mr. Alfred Exham, was solicitor to the Cork County Council and one of the leading local government lawyers in the country. Mr. Henry Exham was universally respected and looked up to by his fellow solicitors in Cork, and his passing severs a respected link with the past.

CORRECTION.

In the obituary notice of the late Mr. William J. Skinner in the last issue of the Gazette it was stated that he had served his apprenticeship to the late Mr. James G. Skinner of Mitchelstown. This was a clerical error and we are glad to state that Mr. James G. Skinner—who formerly practised at Mitchelstown—is still living and practises at Clonmel.

LEGAL APPOINTMENT.

MR. PATRICK J. O'SULLIVAN, Solicitor, Tipperary, has been appointed County Registrar for County Tipperary. Mr. O'Sullivan was admitted in Hilary Sittings, 1986, and practised since his admission in Tipperary.

MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

March 23rd. The President in the Chair. Present: Messrs.A.Cox, Vice-President, Greene, E. Stapleton, Merrick, O'Reilly, Boyd, P. O'Connor, Smyth, Wolfe, Carrigan, Hamill, J. S. O'Connor, Ó hUadhaigh, Overend, Norman, Mayne, Darley, Hayes, O'Connell, Lynch, Fitzgerald, Dunne.

Solicitors' Bill.

THE COUNCIL considered a report from a Committee of the Council on a memorandum received from the Department of Justice.

Lectures and Articles by Solicitors.

THE COUNCIL passed the following resolution:—

"Any activity on the part of a solicitor of a selfadvertising nature designed to attract business is clearly not permissible; lectures delivered or articles published by a solicitor contrary to this principle therefore necessarily involve a breach of professional etiquette."

Betting Act (District Court and Garda Siochana) Regulations, 1931.

On a report from a Committee, the Council directed that the attention of solicitors should be drawn to an error in form 5 in the Schedule to the above regulations, which states that the time for lodging an appeal to the District Court against the refusal by a Superintendent of the Garda Siochana of a certificate of fitness is 21 days, whereas the time, in fact, is only 14 days under the Betting Act, 1931 s. 13 (2).

CURRENT TOPICS.

Mortgage as Security for Untaxed Costs.

A POINT affecting solicitors, who may be compelled to accept a mortgage as security for costs due, instead of payment, was recently decided by the Supreme Court. The principal point in issue was whether interest on a mortgage given by a client to his solicitor to secure untaxed costs, which have been agreed at an estimated amount, runs - from the date of the mortgage or from the date of taxation of the costs. The point was dealt with in previous. Irish eases which can be reconciled only on the assumption that the facts were not identical in all of them. In Lawless v. Mansfield (4 Ir. Eq. 113) the Court reserved the question of the solicitor's right to charge interest on the costs from the date of the mortgage deed, but by a later order, the reasons for which were not reported, the mortgage was declared to be security for the principal sum together with interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the mortgage until payment. In Shannon v. Casev (Ir. R.8 Eq. 307) O'Hagan, L. C., referred to Lawless v. Mansfield as an unsatisfactory authority, and decided that a security taken by a solicitor for untaxed costs gave no right to interest on them in the absence of a special contract to pay such interest. The Lord Chancellor said: "There may be a contract to pay interest, if it be made with full knowledge, sufficient advice, and necessary warning, but, in the absence of those things. even a contract between solicitor and client will be of no force and the solicitor will have no valid claim for interest." In the result the solicitor was not entitled to interest on the untaxed costs. The decision of the Supreme Court is the latest authority on the question. A solicitor, having carried out legal work for a client, and having also advanced him sums of money from time to time. took a legal mortgage as security for the sum of £818, which consisted in part of moneys advanced to the client, and, in part, of costs and outlay due to the solicitor but not taxed. The costs were subsequently taxed at £280 3s. 6d. On proceedings being taken by the solicitor to have the mortgage declared well charged, the Examiner found and certified the amount due on the mortgage, and included interest on the amount of the taxed . costs from the date of the mortgage to the date of his certificate. On an appeal being brought by the mortgagor to the Supreme Court, their Lordships were of opinion, with regard to the question of the interest claimed by the mortgagee on foot of so much of the mortgage as related to untaxed costs, that such interest could run only as from the date of the taxation, and the Court so held. There was no suggestion in the case that the solicitor had acted improperly, or that the costs were anything but fair and reasonable, and, although a reasoned judgment was not delivered, the decision will probably be regarded as settling any doubts that may have survived the earlier Irish cases. [72 I.L.T.R. 66].

Samples in Oil Prosecutions.

A MEMBER of the Society has forwarded a copy of a letter which he received from the Department of Finance with reference to the taking by members of the Gárda Siochana and officers of Customs and Excise of samples of oil in motor vehicles with a view to possible prosecutions. The Department had been requested to instruct officers concerned that where samples of oil are taken under the powers conferred by Sec. 21 of the Finance Act, 1935, and the Emergency Powers (Use of Kerosene in Motor Vehicles) Order, 1941, an additional sample should be officially taken and handed to the prospective defendant when. the latter so requests. The letter from the Department states that the Revenue Commissioners have decided to accede to the suggestion. Steps are being taken to instruct officers concerned that where samples of oil are taken in the circumstances in question, an additional sample, officially sealed and distinctly labelled, is to be supplied to the person concerned if he so requests at the time when the samples are being taken. The decision is being communicated to the Department of Justice with a view to the issuing of a similar instruction to the Garda Authorities.

Juvenile Courts.

A County Kerry member writes:

"I understand some effort is at last being made to improve the manner of dealing with children in the District Court. There is a special Court called the Children's Court in the cities of Dublin, Cork, Limerick and Waterford for the purpose, and I would suggest that, in the big towns too, a special Court should be held, say monthly, to deal solely with every offence relating to children (including school attendance cases), and that in each of the big towns there should be a member of the Garda Siochana (not below the rank of Sergeant) with special training to look after delinquent children, and that probation committees should be set up without delay to assist the District Justice when necessary."

"No attempt has been made to codify the law relating to 'children' and The Children Acts, 1908 to 1941 comprise some five statutes. The latest Actis indeed remarkable for its method of amendment."

DAIL EIREANN. Official Reports, 14th March, 1944.

Practice of Solicitors' Profession.

MR. HUGHES: "Is the Minister aware that there is considerable dissatisfaction amongst the Solicitors' profession that steps have not been taken sooner to amend and modernise the law affecting the practice of their profession with a view to the abolition of the possible openings for abuse, and if he will indicate whether he intends to introduce suitable legislation, and, if so, at what date." MINISTER FOR JUSTICE (Mr. Boland): "A draft Bill on the lines indicated in the question has been. prepared by the Incorporated Law Society and has been under examination in the Department of Justice and other Departments. The results of this examination have been communicated to the Society and, as soon as I receive their further observations, I shall lay the entire matter before the Government for consideration." .

Land Registry.

Mr. Hughes: "Is the Minister aware of the great delay that occurs in the registration of applications in the Land Registry and in the handling of matters incidental thereto; whether other representations have been made to him in reference to this and, if so, on what date, and if he will indicate what steps he proposes to take to obviate the inconvenience caused to practitioners and their clients."

MINISTER FOR JUSTICE (Mr. Boland): "I am aware that the position in regard to the matters referred to in the question is unsatisfactory. The cause of the delays and resultant inconvenience is shortage of staff combined with a marked increase in the volume of business which has to be dealt with. I received representations in the matter last July from the Incorporated Law Society. My Department has been giving active consideration to the problem of providing the necessary extra assistance and I am hopeful that it will be found possible, without undue delay, to bring about a considerable improvement in the position."
