DRUMMING TO THE BABESTA BEAT

Welcome to our first issue of Babesta Beat. It's a catalog-slash-magazine on the world of a cool city child. Read it, enjoy it, shop it. One thing to note though, at Babesta some of the fashions are in and out of the store like wildfire, so you have to be fast. But we promise as soon as a fresh style goes out another one comes in, so you're never lacking for cool threads.

This, like many things we've done, was conceptualized on the fly, and then we got excited about it and knew we had to see it through. We were lucky enough to work with a host of amazing creative powerhouses, including photographer Katrina Tang, stylist Michel Onofrio, and make up artist Laura Castellano.

On top of that, the whole Babesta team pitched in like crazy with creative ideas and lots of legwork. In the end, we hope you like it. Our fashion editorial, "Mimi & the Magic Forest," was shot in the Berkshires on an on-and-off rainy day in the beautiful town of South Egremont. The kids became the characters of our little story and we transformed a forest into a magical wonderland brimming with the latest children's furniture, toys, fashion and gear.

This fall will be a very exciting time at Babesta. We love the back-to-school season, followed by the fun of the holidays. Keep a look out for our ever-evolving blog and follow us on our social media channels, including Facebook, Twitter, Pinterest and You Tube.

See ya in the shop!

CHECK MATE

We've fallen for the Pendleton x Bugaboo stroller and accessory line.

We can imagine that sunny, first fall day where a pair of new parents hit the street with their new Pendleton for Bugaboo stroller. The Navajo-inspired prints and classic red and black tartans are both distinctive and sophisticated and feel just right for the season. With the custom options Bugaboo offers stylish parents, the high quality stroller raises the bar on the intersection of fashion and function.

With the Pendleton collaboration, each stroller model has a unique design specially picked to be complementary. "Representing North, South, East and West, the Crossroads design for the Bugaboo Cameleon<sup>3</sup> reflects the power of the four directions, making it a perfect print for the multi-terrain stroller," says Madeleen Klaasen, Chief Marketing Officer at Bugaboo International. "The Jacquard pattern is a rugged and recognizable pattern enhanced by intense gray and deep red tones, while the Spirit of the Peoples print is used for the accessory set suiting the Bugaboo Bee," Klaasen adds. The twin-ready Donkey Stroller is outfitted with the Rob Roy red and black tartan print.

Collaborations with noted fashion and art luminaries have been a trend of late for the stroller company that started as a school project and has swelled to an internationally recognized brand, sold in 50 countries with no less than 1,000 employees. "We love for designers to bring their own design DNA to the table," says Klaasen. "When our mutual passion for design is combined, this leads to inspiring creative synergies and ultimately to special editions with a surprising edge."

SWEET SEAT Jeremy Scott collabs with Cybex.

We are wild about Jeremy Scott's new collaboration with uber baby gear brand Cybex. The over-the-top Scott (known for putting wings on sneakers at Adidas) has added comic appeal to some of the more mundane childhood commodities. "It started with a thought or rather phrase in English called "food fight" as would happen usually in movies in the '80s. There would be a cafeteria scene where one student would throw a piece of pizza at someone else, who'd throw another piece and everyone would be throwing food," notes Scott.

"That always seemed to happen in movies but I've never had one happen in my life . . . It always seemed like a cool thing happening in a cool high school. So I was thinking about that one day and I thought how funny this name 'food fight' was!" He proceeded to design a pattern with each food character in a state of combat—from wearing boxing gloves to throwing popcorn. The pattern is applied to a range of goods at Cybex, from our fave car seat, the Aton, to convertible strollers and even a diaper bag. We don't have an exact ETA on these, but rest assured, you'll find the collection at Babesta.

Aton car seat by Jeremy Scott, 12657, $550-$600.

TIME TO CHILL

Nuna's Leaf is the hottest chair for a cool pad.

If I were a baby, laid back in a Nuna Leaf is just how I'd like to chill. This lounger uses an organic, kinetic rocking motion to get your child in a state of relaxation. It features a rock safe base, motion lock, removable, machine washable seatpad, organic cotton insert, and 3-point adjustable harness for safety. It sustains lots of weight (read: all (adult) sales associates plopped down in it), and it doubles later on as a pretty fly gaming seat. From infants to X-boxers.

Available in twilight, bisque and navy. $220.

Going Dutch

Your child's room is like a trip to Europe without the passport and the bad airline meals.

This is Dutch, an Amsterdam-based design furniture company that has just arrived stateside, is raising the bar on super cute storage options. The quaint, house-shaped cabinets can easily store anything from hanging clothes to toys, coats, or clogs. There are three different gable types to choose from and lots of bright and poppy color options. Designed in Holland, made in the USA. Colors include sparkling blue, loving blue, heaven blue, cobalt blue, violet, apple green, pink party, firemen red, black, gray, white and cream.

Dimensions: H 78" x W 21.7" x D 21.7". $1299.

Magic Carpet Guilhem de Castelbajac's oversized rugs

are like exclamation points of style.

When we ran into a ginormous robot rug at ICFF (International Contemporary Furniture Fair), we had to stop in our tracks. The bold designs by Guilhem de Castelbajac, son of French designer Jean-Charles de Castelbajac, have definite out-of-this-world room-making potential. There might even be some funky collaborations in cotton and wool blends with Babesta this fall! Oversized styles in 100% wool, $2900.

EPHANT IN

Oeuf's new Elephant Crib is as easy as 1-2-3 and doesn't forget the style.

OEUF NYC is one of our favorite go-tos for great style and quality furniture, and we are excited to spread the word about their newest model released in July, whimsically called the "Elephant." The first collaboration between Oeuf and Spanish designer Carlos Tiscar, the Elephant Crib is available in both gray and white and is made of eco-MDF. The real gem here is that the crib is super-easy to put together (they estimate 10 minutes tops!), so new parents needn't feel nervous about their handyman skills. Of course, we at Babesta will continue to offer our white glove service if you don't have the time. Crib $675.

San Francisco, Baby!

AXL Brand launches an organic line that's cool, simple and made in Shaky Town.

RYAN LAFRENZ STARTED AXL brand (Spell it to say it: A-X-L, not pronounced like G N' R's front man) when he had his son Anderson. "We found that he spent a lot of time in loungewear and we weren't finding the simple, clean and modern basics that we would prefer," he notes. Lafrenz decided to fill the gap himself. Having formerly worked in an environmental field, he was very concerned with the agricultural and manufacturing impact of his product-to-be, and knew organic cotton was a no-brainer.

"We found that our local sewers (in San Francisco) are some of the best around," says Lafrenz, and with them and his strict quality guidelines and oversight, a standout layette line was born. When we saw the line in Las Vegas a year ago, we knew it was for us-in fact we were told we were the first retailer to pick it up. How could we resist an organic layette line made in the U.S. in our signature colors of gray and orange?

Heavy Metal Gold tones give girls some seasonal sparkle.

FULANO LIBRIZZI MIXES up new tunes with old faves, showing a musical range well beyond his years. The 10-year-old has been deejaying since the ripe old age of 5, when he took lessons at Dubspot, a school focused on music and media technology in NYC. Taken under the wing of the formidable DJ Cassidy (the deejay of choice for everyone from Barack Obama to Kanye West, Jay-Z and Jennifer Lopez), Fulano worked his extra-curricular hobby until it started taking on a life of its own—he's recently spun for PetitePARADE (Children's Fashion Week), The Clinton Foundation, Cartoon Network, the Knicks (at MSG), and Bugaboo. He's even set to release his first single this year. His sense of style, both musical and fashion, is clear from the get-go—he opts for a rad mix of classic and modern, with a hint of funk. A consummate entertainer, Fulano collects and trades Yu-Gi-Oh! cards (and can tell you the health points, elements of each character, who defeats whom) and performs magic tricks where he can tap the deck & call your card to the top in a beat. photos by Ilona Lieberman

Ready to go back-to-school? Here are some tracks that DJ Fulano, 10-year-old mix master, is listening to this fall:

- ▶ Groove is in the Heart by Deee-Lite
- Love Come Down by Evelyn "Champagne" King
- ▶Blame it on the Boogie by The Jacksons
- ▶ September by Earth, Wind & Fire
- ►Walking into Sunshine by Central Line
- ▶Jingling Baby by LL Cool J
- ►We Found Love by Rihanna
- ► Suit and Tie by Justin Timberlake
- ▶Get Lucky by Daft Punk

Chatting with Mini Rodini's founder

and designer Cassandra Rhodin

HETHER ON A onesie or a national ad campaign, Swedish designer Cassandra Rhodin deftly pulls from the beautiful, quirky fantasy world she's envisaged, replete with anthropomorphic animals and vintage references, served up with a modern twist. Wielding her pen she knows how to entice and entertain, possibly a genetic talent passed down from her great grandfather, circus king Brazil Jack. Though her heritage and own childhood inspire, when it comes to designing her children's wear label Mini Rodini Rhodin notes, "My biggest inspiration definitely comes from hanging out with my two kids. Their imagination is unbelievable." Fall '13 is arguably her strongest collection to date, and, we hear, Rhodin is growing the label from kids' wear into home goods. We were psyched to sit down with ringleader Rhodin and hear the ballyhoo on the brand.

Babesta: You come from an artistic family – five generations of artists – what kind of art runs through your veins?

Cassandra: My parents and all the grown-ups in my world had creative jobs. [They were] everything from actors, painters and directors to circus-artists, acrobats, ballet dancers and illusionists. I wanted to be an author or an illustrator and I was always drawing and writing as a kid.

B: How did it all begin? What made you think children's wear?

C: The idea started to take form when I became a mother myself. I realized that there were few clothes on the market that I would want to buy for my own children. I couldn't even find basic organic cotton. That's why I started my own label.

B: I understand Mini Rodini was named after your great grandfather who was in the circus. Can you tell me more about him? What did he do in the circus?

C: My great grandfather called himself Rodini when he traveled with gypsies in the romantic 1890's. At the young age of twelve he ran away with a circus, and he worked with the circus, Tivoli, and varieté his whole life. In 1899 – he was then known as Brazil Jack – he started his first circus which has followed my family up to now. He was such an inspiring and eccentric adventurer!

B: Besides leading and designing the collections at Mini Rodini, you also do illustration for some of the largest companies out there—H&M, Elle, Urban Outfitters. How do your bodies of work relate – the kids to the adult?

C: I've been working as a fashion illustrator my whole adult life. I liked it, but I felt very ambivalent towards the whole fashion industry. Becoming a designer for kids' wear wasn't a huge step for me. I still draw everything by hand, and I actually think that the aesthetic of children's clothing suits me really well. It's much more fun!

B: I understand you are designing some home goods too – can you tell us a bit about that?

C: The home collection will be a set of bedding and wall art that will be released this autumn. It is made in the true spirit of Mini Rodini, organic, non-toxic and Fair-Trade. Textiles are exciting to work with and patterns make a big impact on a room, which I think both kids and their parents will appreciate. Fans will recognize the prints.

B: You use mostly organic cotton in your designs. Tell me about your commitment to sustainability and ethical production. Why is it important to you and what are you doing to uphold those values?

C: Sustainability is the most important thing about Mini Rodini's design! We are always trying to make the best products we possibly can, aesthetically, quality-wise, ethically, and environmentally. It is challenging, but we don't want to compromise. Sustainability is our main focus and we have a lot of exciting projects ahead.

B: You collaborated with Bugaboo last year in Europe for some special edition stroller canopies. Are you planning any such collaboration in the U.S. (We, for one, would love that!)

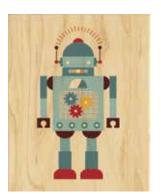

C: We'd love it too if the right one comes along! Who knows? There might be something happening very soon...

B: Who are the five people from history you'd most want to have around your dinner table? (Family excluded)

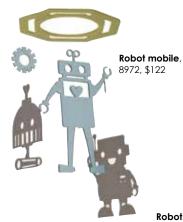

C: I would only invite interesting women and listen to everything about their life stories. I choose Gala Dali, Karen Blixen, Mary Kingsley, Princess Diana and Edie Bouvier Beale.

Last Question:

What's your favorite thing about children's fashion?

I love fashion when it's playful, when it combines comfort with humor, when it lightens our souls with great color combinations, when it allows kids to dress like their games or in their dreams with elements of fantasy. It pays to dress kids in clothes that are special, different and well designed. Don't lose your cool shopping the baby market.
