IMPACT OF THE WINE INDUSTRY ON THE LOCAL MARKET:

For the last 300 years, the industry has formed a big part of the Stellenbosch economy. Since the first "Stellenbosch wine route" was established during the 1970's, the tourist industry has exploded and Stellenbosch has become a popular destination for tourists and for buyers of wine farms. The small lifestyle farms with boutique cellars have become extremely popular with the world affluent as a "must have." There are over 150 wineries in this sub-region.

IMPACT OF THE WINE INDUSTRY ON THE LOCAL MARKET:

The wine industry in Santa Barbara County has grown exponentially with most wineries having not only their own tasting rooms, but also retail locations. Since then, the market has taken off and continues to grow as more people discover this beautiful corner of California's Central Coast.

GRAPES GROWN IN THIS AREA/TOP WINE PRODUCERS:

Mainly Pinot Noir and Chardonnay are grown here, however, with so many microclimates they grow many other varieties as well and Santa Barbara is fast approaching the reputation of the more well-known regions like Napa. IMPACT OF THE WINE INDUSTRY ON THE LOCAL MARKET:

VILLA MALISA: A PRIVATE ESTATE NESTLED IN THE HILLS OF PHUKET

THERE IS, PERHAPS, NO PLACE ON EARTH MORE STRIKING than southern Thailand and the islands scattered throughout the Andaman Sea. Limestone cliffs soar above white sand beaches and turquoise waters that hold vibrant reefs, making this corner of the world a natural phenomenon that has summoned adventurous globetrotters for years. Each island has its own unique character, from five-star resorts to beachside camping, and world-class scuba diving off Ko Tao to rock climbing in Krabi. For those seeking the ultimate place to luxuriate, Phuket is the definitive destination.

Nestled in the hills of this enchanting island and overlooking Surin Beach, one of Phuket's most exclusive enclaves, Villa Malisa is perfectly positioned to showcase panoramic views across the Amanpuri headland and the awe-inspiring beaches of Bang Tao Bay. Fusing the traditional aesthetic and materials of a Thai-style villa with cutting-edge lifestyle amenities, the contemporary design was strongly influenced by the owner, a longtime Phuket resident who had the three-story home constructed in 2010.

The vision was a villa offering expansive sea views from every room, while being entirely under one roof, an atypical characteristic of the homes on Surin Hill. The owner had previously lived in Thai villas with a separate building or 'sala' (reception hall) for each room, and while the look was elegant, it wasn't necessarily practical for today's lifestyle. With this in mind, Villa Malisa was designed to flow from one room to the next without going outside, creating a beautiful and functional open concept.

Soon after completion, the Lifestyle TV channel featured Villa Malisa, giving viewers a glimpse of luxury living in Southeast Asia's high-end resort property destination. Viewers enjoyed the interior finish of the Villa, the ocean views, and the master bedroom with unique his and hers en suite bathrooms and the grand walk-in wardrobe decorated in rich hues of teak and silk panels situated on the entire top floor. Coupled with the master suite, an oversized indoor jacuzzi bath opens onto magnificent ocean views from the top-floor balcony, ideal for relaxing and watching the sunset over the horizon.

"I love the combination of natural hardwood timbers and Thai silk! It creates an ambiance of 'warmth', or as the Thai's say, 'sabai'. I will miss waking up in the morning and opening the curtains to reveal the turquoise hue of the Andaman Sea in all its glory," stated the current owner.

Completing the indoor/outdoor living, the second-level living area flows beautifully onto the infinity pool with a covered deck, merging the two tranquil spaces with ease. This level also includes a dining room and fully equipped European kitchen, a chef's paradise prepared to handle large-scale cooking and entertaining and an ideal spot for cooking the popular Thai dish, Tom Yam Goong hot soup. A powder room, office, and additional bedroom with en suite bathroom and built-in oversized bunk beds complete the floor, an exemplary space for teenagers and children to get away. And speaking of family entertainment, the villa also incorporates a dedicated soundproofed private HD home cinema with projector and curved screen for family movie nights and screenings with guests.

This established estate with a gated entry offers the utmost privacy and space and comes tastefully decorated and furnished with Thai antiques, elegant indoor teak floors and teak trim, which enliven the senses. Villa Malisa truly embodies all that Phuket's island lifestyle offers, with the added benefit of being just minutes from upscale shops and restaurants, world-class beaches, golf courses, resorts, spas and, of course, an exceptional nightlife scene.

POKÉ: THE QUINTESSENTIAL HAWAIIAN DISH

Poké, the unofficial "state snack" of Hawaii, is a classic raw-fish salad that can be found almost anywhere throughout the Aloha State.

This delightful combination of ingredients has been influenced by the history of the islands and the many cultures that have inhabited them, poké is Hawaiian for "to chop" or "to cut crosswise." The centuries-old snack has maintained a fresh appeal, and today the Hawaiian-style treat is gaining a global following, popping up in many new and creative iterations, on menus around the world and is more popularly served as a complete meal.

How to prepare it | Poké is an exceedingly simple dish to make, so why not try it at home? You can get creative to suit your palate, with many modern variations drawing inspiration from Japanese and other Asian culinary traditions. One of our favorites calls for gently mixing chunks of lean ahi (yellowfin) tuna, soy sauce, sesame oil, sweet Maui onions, and a sprinkling of sesame seeds or scallions. You can also include dried seaweeds like hijiki or wakame. Simple and ready to eat in fifteen minutes.

Where to eat it | No matter where you are these days, chances are you can score some delicious poké while out on the town. From Hawaii to New York to London and Australia, here are a few of our favorite spots for a delicious bowl of poké from different parts of the world.

POKÉ STOP | HAWAIIAN ISLAND, O'AHU

Chef Elmer Guzman was born and raised on the island of Maui and opened Poké Stop Waipahu in 2005. He grew up fishing on the island and developed a lifelong love of fish and even served as a sous chef under well-known television chef Emeril Lagasse, in Emeril's Restaurant, in New Orleans. While Poké Stop's outward appearance seems casual, it has become extremely popular for in-the-know locals and tourists alike to come here and get their poké fix, prompting Guzman to open a second location on the same island in Mililani and a third location in Honolulu. poke-stop.com

Recommendations | Try the creamy Spicy Salmon Poké, the Wasabi Tako Poké or the popular Sesame Ahi Poké.

NOREETUH | NEW YORK CITY

Noreetuh, meaning "playground" in Korean, is an appropriate name for this fun modern Hawaiian restaurant located in the East Village. Chef Chung Chow and his partners Gerald San Jose and Jin Ahn have created an atmosphere where guests can enjoy artfully crafted food paired with wine. The menu is complemented by a carefully curated wine list of approximately 200 selections, with a strong representation from France. In addition to the wines, there are several craft beers and specialty sakes on the list. noreetuh.com

Recommendations | Be sure to try the Shrimp Poké with cucumbers, wasabi, pearl onions and yuzu or the Big-Eye Tuna Poké with macadamia nuts, pickled jalapeños and seaweed.

TOMBO—POKÉ & MATCHA BAR | LONDON

Tombo, London's first authentic Japanese café and matcha (green tea) bar, is situated in the heart of the South Kensington museum district, offering a new experience in modern Japanese food and the art of tea. From healthy bento boxes, handmade sushi and salads to comforting katsu curries and noodles, and, of course, fabulous fresh poké, Tombo has just the right dish, whatever your mood. All dishes are perfectly accompanied with special teas that will leave you feeling refreshed. tombopoke.com

Recommendations | Try one of their signature poké dishes like the Spicy Mayo Prawn Bowl with serracha mayo, edamame, crispy shallots and shichimi chili or build your own bowl out of ingredients like salmon caviar, tuna, kimchee and more.

WHEN DISCUSSING ELECTRIC CARS, One company has dominated the conversation: Tesla. To date, the Palo Alto automaker has seen very little in the way of competition, but based on the latest unveilings, it may not be a one horse race for long. Several recently released electric vehicle concepts have caught our eye, while only time will tell if they can offer a driving experience that can challenge Tesla's stronghold on the market, the following vehicles bear watching for anyone in search of a ride that's equal parts luxurious and eco-friendly.

LUXURY CARS GO ELECTRIC

LUCID MOTORS

Lucid Motors has made some big promises as well, stating that their production-ready prototype will be capable of traveling over 643 kilometers (400 miles) on a single charge with a noteworthy 1,000 horsepower. The most compelling reason to put stock in these stats is undoubtedly Peter Rawlinson, the chief technology officer of Lucid Motors and former chief engineer for Tesla. Hoping to have cars on the road by 2018, Lucid recently announced plans to build a $700 million production factory in Arizona.

FARADAY FUTURE FFZERO1 CONCEPT

California-based startup Faraday Future put themselves on the map when they introduced the FFZERO1 Concept at the 2016 Consumer Electronics Show (CES) in Las Vegas with a claimed top speed of over 321 km/h (200 mph) and a 0–97 km/h (0–60 mph) time under three seconds. We will soon find out just how real the young, ambitious company is, as they indicated via twitter that CES 2017 will mark the unveiling of Faraday Future's first production model vehicle.

GREEN LORD MOTORS G4

The Japanese-made G4 from Green Lord Motors (GLM) made quite the buzz upon its debut at the 2016 Paris Auto Show. Sleek and sporty with gullwing doors that make it look part supercar, part transformer, the G4 boasts a top speed of 250 km/h (155 mph) and an impressive range of 400 kilometers (248 miles) on a single charge. PERSPECTIVES ON THE AFFLUENT CONSUMER & THE LUXURY REAL ESTATE MARKET

2016 WAS AN UNPRECEDENTED TIME FOR THOSE WHO MARKET SIGNIFICANT PROPERTIES.

As we reflect on this past year it was a unique confluence of global events that took place, including the economic uncertainty presented by Brexit, the flux of the Chinese economy, global threats caused by terrorism and the refugee crisis and political unknowns derived from the race for the Presidency in the United States which all resulted in not surprising reports of a softening in the market, particularly in those markets that have recently attracted global buyers, like London, New York, San Francisco, Paris and Hong Kong.

Our perseverance to gain the latest knowledge through our partnership with YouGov Affluent Perspective reflects a healthy environment for personal wealth. Today's affluent are cautious, but optimistic. The highest-net-worth among us feel good about their lives, are confident about their decisions and have a very strong intent to purchase real estate. This is a group of successful individuals who know what they want, are driven by passions, are interested in keeping their families and loved ones safe, and embrace the latest innovations, particularly in technology and sustainability.

With confidence and innovative thinking comes a consumer who increasingly prefers strong, independent brands. From the perspective of Luxury Portfolio International,[®] a collection of market-leading, local, independent real estate brands in the world, that's terrific news as we begin a new year.

Real estate is a passion for high-net-worth individuals and is often seen as the ultimate sign of success. It is a lifestyle choice, a discretionary purchase that can be an investment in, and reward for all their hard work.

At Luxury Portfolio, we constantly strive to better understand the drivers and motivations of those with significant means. The following segment of the report is a terrific snapshot of just some of our latest findings, in concert with our research partner, YouGov.

REAL ESTATE DEMAND FROM THE WEALTHY

Over the next three years, we can see the demand for purchasing exceeds the demand for selling both in the U.S. and globally. The result may be a mix of a sellers' market or a boom to the new construction market. Within the U.S., 25% of the wealthy are looking to purchase, with 18% looking to sell. Outside the U.S., 45% of the wealthy are looking to purchase, with 23% looking to sell. Regardless, nearly 1 in 4 of the Global Top 1% plans to make a real estate purchase in the next three years, with almost as many considering selling as well.

The market for sustainable living technologies is more vibrant than ever with the majority of global wealthy committed to sustainable living. Whole-house energy solutions that start with sound construction decisions have gained the most traction. Closely following is the convenience promised by mobile devices. The ability to remotely adjust temperature throughout the home, or control lights, window shades and small appliances, makes living in the home as energy efficient as possible.

CULINARY GETAWAYS

Treat your palate to the ultimate fine dining experience at Troika Sky Dining located on the 24th floor of The Troika, a three-tower, luxury condominium development. Deemed the most striking of fine dining experiences in Kuala Lumpur, restaurant-goers can try one of the three dining rooms, including the Cantaloupe (fusion-focused), Strato (Italian cuisine) or delight in the wine bar, Claret. Each restaurant is in a different tower with sky bridges connecting them. Elegant and stylish décor fill each space with attention drawn to the double-height glass panels for striking views of the city. Dine surrounded by subtle water features at Cantaloupe and try the truffled poached egg and smoky duck cooked in shallot oil with tangy garlic crisps. From Strato, we recommend the Wagyu beef cheek and trotter ravioli with sage brown butter, lemon and fried onion. And don't forget to try the tasty wines and cocktails at Claret, which boasts a beautiful outdoor terrace with comfy sofas, allowing you to take in the breathtaking skyline. Claret also hosts delightful monthly wine-tasting events. Each space is perfect for business meetings or a special meal experienced with family and friends.

2017 GLOBAL REAL ESTATE PERSPECTIVES

SITTING DOWN WITH OUR CHIEF ECONOMIST, MARCI ROSSELL, PH.D.

MARCI ROSSELL, PH.D., Chief Economist for Leading Real Estate Companies of the World®

As a former Chief Economist for CNBC and groundbreaking financial journalist, Rosell served in this position in the months immediately following September 11th. She is known for taking complex economic issues and making them relevant to people's lives, families, and careers.

Prior to her career in broadcast journalism, Rosell served as Corporate Economist and Investment Spokesperson for OppenheimerFunds, one of the nation's largest mutual fund companies, and prior to that as an Economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas. Rosell earned a Ph.D. in economics from Southern Methodist University, where she was named one of the Young Alumni of the Year in 2002. She brings a world of experience — from Main Street to Wall Street when discussing the U.S. economy, international events, and movements in capital markets.

LP: What are your predictions for the global luxury real estate market in the coming year?

MR: The Great Recession is long in the rearview mirror, and the affluent buyer is expecting a stronger global economy in the years ahead. With confidence in the economy comes security around income and asset values. So, the affluent buyer will continue to see real estate as a prudent, essential component in their investment portfolio. And despite the fact that interest rates are rising in the U.S., I expect 2017 to be a strong year of global luxury real estate.

LP: How do you see these predictions reflecting on specific parts of the world?

MR: The European Central Bank began its Quantitative Easing program two years ago, so I expect the positive results of that to hit the European market in the second half of 2017. We learned from the U.S. experience in 2009 and 2010 that it takes time for monetary stimulus to have an effect. The U.S. will probably grow at 3% in 2017, while Europe and Japan will expand at a slower pace, closer to 1%, but I expect the effects of quantitative easing by the European Central Bank and the Bank of Japan to come on strong in late 2017.

LP: How do you see the real estate market impacting the global economy today?

MR: Real estate matters to everyone. Buyers are confident when they feel their income is secure, regardless of where interest rates are headed. I think the underlying strength of the economy will be a bigger factor in 2017 than the Federal Reserve moves on interest rates. In the U.S., real estate accounts for about 30% of the net-worth of the wealthiest 20% of households and it makes up over 60% of the net-worth of middle-income Americans. While movements in interest rates have some effect on the market, income matters more.

"Real estate matters to everyone. Buyers are confident when they feel their income is secure, regardless of where interest rates are headed."

LP: In 2016, Millennials overtook Baby Boomers, how do you see this effecting the real estate market?

MR: Boomers are entering the time in their lives when they are motivated by legacy buying. And Millennials are just now hitting their 30's, when we can expect them to be fully engaged in their careers, getting their first bonuses, and nearing the end of their student loan payments. With that comes the first round of Millennial home buying.

LP: What recommendations do you have for brokers on how they can talk to their clients?

MR: Both Boomers and Millennials want prudent real estate investments, but for different reasons. Affluent Boomers are seeking legacy investments for their family that will be there for generations to come. The oldest Millennials are in their early 30's and were heavily scarred by the Great Recession. Affluent Millennials appear to be more risk-averse and sensitive to the possibility of income insecurity than prior generations. Luxury matters, but prudent, low-risk investments are very attractive to them.

LP: Will we see more corporate growth in 2017 and if so how will this impact the real estate market?

MR: The stock market rally in late 2016 suggests that investors are expecting a strong year for corporate America in 2017. Lower corporate taxes, deregulation and fiscal stimulus for the economy are all on the table this year. Real estate, being pro-cyclical, will also benefit from all these trends.

LP: With global currency fluctuations and a stronger U.S. dollar will we see more people buying in the U.S.?

MR: 2017 could be the time when U.S. buyers look outside their borders for attractive luxury properties and the value of a global network. The U.S. dollar has appreciated more than 20% since July 2014. For people whose wealth is held primarily in dollars, that's like a double-digit return on their dollar-denominated assets in two years. U.S. buyers will certainly keep acquiring properties domestically, but because their dollars will buy more today than they would have a few years ago they may search abroad as well.

"The Great Recession is long in the rearview mirror, and the affluent buyer is expecting a stronger global economy in the years ahead."
