Schokoladenshake

mit Sommerfrüchten & Salzkaramell

Für 4 Gläser à 200 ml

Karamell:
200 g Zucker
90 g Butter
120 ml Sahne
¼ TL Fleur de Sel

Shake:
400 g Schokoladennis
300 ml Milch

Tipp Wenn es schnell gehen soll, einfach fertige Karamellbällchen nehmen und diese gut mit Salz untermischen.

Für das Karamell den Zucker in einer Pfanne karamellisieren lassen. Mit 250 ml warmem Wasser ablösen und einige Minuten kochen lassen. Butter, Sahne und Fleur de Sel zugeben und so lange köcheln, bis sich der Zucker aufgelöst hat und eine dickflüssige Karamellmasse entstanden ist. Für das Topping die Sahne steif schlagen, Erdbeeren und Aprikosen waschen und trockentupfen. Die Erdbeeren entkernen und die Aprikosen entkernen. Beide Fruchtarten einzeln pürieren. Nach Belieben mit Zitronensaft und Honig abschmecken. Für den Shake das Schokoladennis mit der Milch erst kurz vor dem Servieren mischen, sofort in Gläser füllen und mit Sahne und Fruchtpuree toppen. Das Salzkaramell darüberlaufen lassen und servieren.

SPENDABEL

Er steht auf Gartenpartys gern im Mittelpunkt, ist aber auch im Büro immer für ein Miniwasser zu haben: der Fünf-Liter-Getränkspender von Kilner. Damit sein Zapfhahn nicht versiegt, können Kaltgetränke durch die Clipdeckel-Öffnung mit Gummidichtung eingefüllt werden. Gespült wird das knapp 32 Zentimeter hohe Gefäß von Hand, der Hahn lässt sich zum Reinigen abschrauben. Erhältlich ist der Spender in matterem Glas in den Farben Blau, Weiß und Lilie oder in der transparenten Version in Grün und Rosa.

Healthier DIY salad dressings & marinades

by Clare Fairs, June 20, 2018

Salads are a wholesome, low-calorie meal – until your smother a supermarket salad dressing on them! If you'd like to start whisking or shaking up healthier salad dressings or marinades, we'll show you how with our simple recipes and tips!

If you're trying to lose a few pounds before a holiday, the chances are salads have become your summer staple. But if you're drizzling your leaves in a shop-bought dressing, it's time to take a closer look at the label. Even 'light' or 'healthy living' dressings are usually made with refined oils that are sweetened with sugar, thickened with xanthan gum (an additive created from the same bacteria that causes black rot in cabbages and cauliflower) and then given a longer shelf life with potassium sorbate.

Yet it's actually incredibly quick and easy to make your own salad dressings and marinades with natural, wholesome ingredients. Once you've invested in a few storage bottles (we like kilner!), it's much cheaper too – and your homemade recipes will be much tastier than anything from the supermarket.

Yet it's actually incredibly quick and easy to make your own salad dressings and marinades with natural, wholesome ingredients. Once you've invested in a few storage bottles (we like kilner!), it's much cheaper too – and your homemade recipes will be much tastier than anything from the supermarket.

Win a DIY dressings goodie box!

If you'd like to start making your own salad dressings and marinades after reading our blog, you won't want to miss your chance to win this prize! We've teamed up with our friends at Kilner and Aspell to create the ultimate dressings and marinade making kit. Our prize box contains Hillfarm cold pressed rapeseed oil and honey, a range of Aspell organic vinegars and their extra special apple balsamic vinegar, plus a 4-piece selection of Kilner bottles and jars to shake and store your creations.

REVIEW: KILNER FERMENTATION SET

This cheap and easy-to-use kit is the nudge you need to start making your own pickles, sauerkraut, and kimchi.

RATE 8/10

PRICE $30

BUY NOW

Right now, though, I'm really enjoying Kilner's Fermentation Set—a three-liter jar (big but not huge), with a pair of glazed ceramic half moons that easily slip inside the mouth of the jar to weigh everything down, and a lid with an air lock, a simple one-way valve that keeps unwanted guests out and allows the whole thing to gurgle away without building pressure in the jar.

The Kilner setup certainly has a bit of a "home science kit" look to it with that air lock up top, but it costs a very affordable $30 and it's simple—you can figure out how it works just by looking at the picture on the box. From there, chop and salt the cabbage, add it to the jar, set on the weights, pop on the lid and set it somewhere cool. Unlike a crock, the jar's clear glass sidewalls allow you to keep an eye on things, which is particularly helpful when you're making sure everything stays submerged or watching for unwanted mold growth. In the early stages of your fermentation career, the less guesswork the better.

goldfinchelson Good morning- I hope your weekend is going well- we had a great day yesterday with the children. visiting our village fete. This shot is shortly going to be available on my print shop(it's ready to go- just trying to figure out how to transfer my domain name.. I am a real technophobe!) I nearly didn't post today. Yesterday I posted something different to my usual #petalsandbottles and I feel as though, because it's different, it is not seen by most of you and my feed seems very short. as though some kind of restriction is imposed. I don't know why it happens and I'm sometimes bewildered by it🙄 I was wondering if anyone else experiences this?

gypsyncowgirlkitchenco The beets in my garden were ready to be plucked from the rich soil they have been nesting in. I brought them in the kitchen to be pickled! This is probably my most favorite pickled vegetable! 🍷🍷🍷 I'm going to let them sit in the herbaceous pickling brine for a couple of days in the refrigerator before I dive in!!! I adore my KILNER clip top jars for every food preservation project I tackle! Seriously...isn't this pretty?! Kilner #pickledbeets #eatwhatyougrow #ilovepickles #ilovebeets Gypsyncowgirlkitchen.com It is super easy! For the beets you would have to cook them to soften them up same thing goes for carrots or any other hard veggie! Easy Peasy!

iammrsmack @lorrainepascale mine never looks that appetising, it's always a yucky greeny brown colour 😬 lady_fox88 @lorrainepascale does the dried & ground turmeric have many health benefits? Does it lose any? I genuinely have no idea. Love this recipe. 😊
