WHAT WE LOVE ABOUT AMSTERDAM

AMSTERDAM: IT'S TRENDING NOW.

The Dutch capital has reinvented itself among travelers, having shed the raucous reputation from its liberal policies and famous red light district, and is today buzzing in a different kind of way. A photographer's paradise and a foodie's delight, from morning bike rides along the canals to dining at a "living-room" restaurant, Amsterdam sits at the intersection of charm and cutting-edge.

ARTS AND FESTIVALS

The culture-lover is spoiled with choices in Amsterdam. No trip to the city is complete without a visit to the Rijksmuseum, devoted to the city's arts and history, as well as the Van Gogh Museum, which holds the largest collection of the artist's work, and of course the famous Anne Frank Museum as well. For a different experience, the Museum of Bags and Purses, as its name suggests, is a veritable handbag heaven. Amsterdam also boasts a plethora of galleries and over 300 festivals annually, celebrating culture and customs throughout the city.

CANAL CRUISING

With 165 scenic canals, it's no wonder that Amsterdam's canals were recognized as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2010. Float down them by day and you can take in the magnificent Renaissance architecture, while the evening brings out romantic views of the illuminated canals. Best known operators include Holland International, Blue Boat and Canal Bus, which also offers a hop-on, hop-off service.

LIVING-ROOM RESTAURANTS

A developing trend among the dining scene in Amsterdam is a comfortable and relaxed setting dubbed as a living-room restaurant in the privacy of the chef's home. The essence of what the Dutch call gezellig (loosely translated to "cozy"), guests can enjoy a savory meal while feeling like they are dining at home, minus the clean-up. These comfy restaurants allow guests to eat freshly prepared home-cooked food in an intimate setting. Notable hot spots are Caro Kookt, Saskia's huiskamerrestaurant and Flair Culinair Cook & Dine Concept.

DECADENT PASTRIES AROUND THE GLOBE

SAMPLING THE LOCAL FARE IS AN ESSENTIAL PART OF TRAVELING,

which means it's only right to indulge when you find yourself before a patisserie in a foreign land. While the French may be the masters of this flaky treat, there are plenty of unique takes around the world that ought to grace your palate and inspire your own homemade creations. In our endless quest to explore the art of the pastry from a variety of cultures, here are just a few of our favorite savory options and where you can find them!

CONDITORI LA GLACE Inner City Copenhagen | Denmark

Founded in 1870, Conditori La Glace is Denmark's oldest patisserie with recipes passed down from one generation to the next. The four dining sections contribute to the historical ambiance, with much of the original furniture from the 1890s and interior design work from 1924 still intact. Dine in the beautiful, historic rooms where you can watch the pastry chefs create cakes and sweets or take a class with the accomplished pastry chef Lars Juul.

MACRINA BAKERY Belltown Neighborhood Seattle | Washington

Macrina opened in 1994 as a means to showcase a love for bread, and shortly thereafter began baking delicate and delicious pastries. Savory delights rounded out the menu, and the café was born, making Macrina so much more than just a bakery. Styled after an old village bakery, their overflowing display case is a feast for the eyes that will leave you loosening your belt. Whether you're looking for a tasty treat or a delicious lunch to satisfy your appetite, stop by and experience the flavors of Macrina.

From tradition to innovation, from Chinese to Western, Tai Cheong Bakery integrates various elements, such as skilled chefs, creative minds and a passion to develop a variety of pastries and cakes today. In the near future, Tai Cheong Bakery will expand throughout China so that more people can enjoy Hong Kong style cakes.

THE CASABLANCA OF MIAMI BEACH

A DARK MEDITERRANEAN HOME IS REIMAGINED
ON A FRESH, WHITE CANVAS

WHEN THE CURRENT OWNERS PURCHASED THIS Mediterranean estate they quickly saw immense potential. After all, it was situated on the highly coveted North Bay Road with 100 feet of prime Biscayne Bay frontage, just minutes from the world-class dining and shopping of Miami's famous South Beach. Though newly built in 2003, the ornamental residence they had just purchased was a long way from their tastes and it would take an arduous, no-expense-spared renovation to bring their vision to life. And thus they began a trend of transformation from the traditional dark Mediterranean revival that was popular among luxury homes in south Florida to the crisp white walls designed for collections of contemporary artwork.

Dark wood coffered ceilings and wrought iron were removed, as they transformed the home with white marble floors and white walls that were in-line with their breezy South Florida lifestyle and would lead them to aptly name the home Casablanca for the romantic setting it evokes. With the goal of allowing natural light to fill the home, walls were knocked down throughout, and a living room was thoughtfully added with a grand skylight in the ceiling center. Additionally, carefully placed direct lighting was added to showcase an extensive art collection, while integrated Smart Home technology provided them with the sophisticated systems one expects in a home of such caliber.

In the kitchen, the ambitious owners opted for a professional-grade cooking space that could equally accommodate family dinners and large functions with a Wolf gas stove, two Sub-Zero refrigerators and two ovens. The open layout freely flows into an airy waterfront family room and an adjacent breakfast nook divided by a see-through glass shelf where fine crystal ware shimmers in the sunlight.

Encompassing an entire wing along the waterfront, the white-walled master suite was designed to provide a private and pampered experience. The generously portioned bathroom with hers and his vanities enjoys a free-standing soaking tub adjacent to a walk-in closet and dressing area with a built-in make-up table. Those with even the most elaborate collection of accessories will find a designated space for everything in the ample closet, with cubby holes for belts, eyeglasses and purses, giving the feeling of walking into a curated designer showroom.

A shared living area with sweeping water views and a built-in bar and television gives way to a fabulous waterfront terrace that defines the fluidity between indoor and outdoor living. From here, as well as from multiple balconies throughout the home, enviable views of the water and downtown Miami skyline are on full display. The 19,200-square-foot lot is landscaped with lush gardens and natural sand brought in to create a beach-like waterfront hangout. Covered terraces and seating areas and a full cabana encircle the sparkling pool and jetted hot tub. Capitalizing on the favorable year-round climate, a shaded summer kitchen allows for al-fresco dining and entertaining, while the private dock means keeping your boat in your backyard is an everyday reality.

Fans of the classic film, from which the home draws its name, will recall that Rick Blaine was misinformed when he went to Casablanca for the waters and disappointingly found himself in the desert instead. If only he had been sent to Miami.

BRING YOUR LIVING SPACE TO LIFE

FRESH AND BOLD, A POP OF COLOR IS A QUICK WAY TO LIVEN UP ANY HOME. FROM PASTEL curtains to cheery throw pillows, exciting rugs to brightly painted walls, getting creative with color can infuse a needed burst of energy into any space. Whether you are looking to make a big splash or just a dab to accent your existing space, the right color scheme will simultaneously make a room feel bigger and the ambience lighter. If the interior designer in you is looking for inspiration, here are a few of our favorite homes that aren't afraid to use a daring palette.

Dubbed Maison du Soleil, the home of fashion icon Max Azria, founder of BCBG, uses color to fill each room with life. Located in the ever-desirable Holmby Hills neighborhood of Los Angeles, California, Azria's eye for design goes beyond haute couture, as demonstrated by this fabulous living room with hues of orange and green in furniture that feels bold during the day and cozy at night. The traditional wall color creates a balance within the room, and a vibrant rug brings it all together for a space that is warm with a visual pop. WEB ID: GSEJ88

2.

In Sandton, South Africa, an affluent suburb of Johannesburg, a subtler application of color is utilized to accent the more muted tones throughout this contemporary penthouse. Shades of grey provide a chic, designer feel, while carefully placed touches of purple, orange and maroon keep the environment upbeat. In this room in particular, the orange throw pillows on the couch and hassocks around the ping pong table offset the predominant use of black and grey. Additionally, the texture of the walls and rug further the creative design to provide a room that is fun with a sense of mystique. WEB ID: WMUJ88

3.

The kitchen is another great place to inspire creativity through color, and this Reno, Nevada, residence does that with a visually striking combination of blue and orange. Blue can sometimes come across as cold, but this deep shade used in the cabinetry and appliances presents a calming sensation that complements the peach-toned barstools. The overall effect gives the impression of a high-energy space that encourages culinary innovation with a soothing touch. WEB ID: JGNB88

Using color to evoke a mood or sense of personality is an easy yet powerful way to alter the experience in your home, and we hope these color-infused rooms inspire you to express yourself, with a pop!

SELLING SIGNIFICANT PROPERTIES IN A DYNAMIC GLOBAL MARKETPLACE

As global wealth has continued to increase over time, so too has the demand for luxury properties. While the affluent have always loved luxury real estate, the period between the early 1970s and today has seen a dramatic increase in the number of high-net-worth individuals with a seemingly insatiable appetite for, interest in and an overall cultural focus on real estate. As their ability to invest in such lifestyle-forward discretionary purchases has increased, the instances of properties priced at $1M USD or more has surged — unlike anything we’ve seen in the past.

While the Great Recession resulted in a temporary dip in this trend in the late 2000s, consumers quickly gained confidence in the market, with investors and those with means rushing back into real estate, often leveraging their position with all-cash purchases. Real estate developers happily met this demand by quickly returning to building, particularly in high-net-worth markets such as Hong Kong, London and New York City. As a result, the high end of the market led the recovery of real estate, with what some may say was a frenzied, "overhyped" return.

At the same time, we began to see the global economy have an impact on the luxury market, as global wealth became more widespread and economies like China produced significant real estate investors. The strength and diversification opportunities represented by the global economy have influenced the confidence levels of high-net-worth individuals. In fact, today's affluent individual has exceptional confidence, particularly about their own personal wealth and their ability to maintain it.

This confidence is something we did not see just a few years ago and is very good for the real estate market in general. This impact is evidenced in many ways throughout the Leading Real Estate Companies of the World® network, but perhaps in no better way than by the fact that nearly 100 broker-to-broker referrals are initiated every day as an extension of our services to our global clientele. The network has grown internationally to meet consumer demand and today serves almost 60 countries with more than 550 firms around the globe.

Today's strong, confident and savvy world travelers are also very educated on the ways of the world and extremely sensitive to the impact of global events. For example, they understand innately that economic change such as Brexit, unrest such as the refugee crisis and uncertainty such as the U.S. presidential election impact the global economy. They keep their fingers on the pulse and are ready to turn on a dime if needed.

"THE NETWORK HAS GROWN INTERNATIONALLY TO MEET CONSUMER DEMAND AND TODAY SERVES ALMOST 60 COUNTRIES WITH MORE THAN 550 FIRMS AROUND THE GLOBE."

It is in this landscape that the global luxury real estate market faces a unique moment in time, as the post-recession frenzy has begun to settle, or correct. In fact, in most global real estate markets today, we see a very healthy environment, with solid levels of inventory and a return to realistic absorption rates — or the amount of time it should take to sell a property based on the price and the amount of inventory in that market.

Top luxury real estate agents understand the more measured pace of a healthy market, and the best ones will ensure their clients get it too.

For homeowners wondering why their home is not selling, it's critical to have an in-depth conversation with the agent about what the likely market for the property may be. The best agents consider many factors when creating a customized marketing plan and recommending how to price it appropriately — including the interests and lifestyle of a potential buyer, where they may be coming from and how to reach them and the absorption rate for a significant property in the market. Often, depending on the price and inventory, a realistic sales period could be one, two or three years for properties in the top 10% of the market.

The network of top real estate brokers invited to join the Luxury Portfolio International® program understand the real estate business on a global scale and are prepared to help market significant properties through the ample resources available to them through Luxury Portfolio. With tools like LuxeAnalytics™, they can demonstrate how many views a home has received, from what countries visitors are coming and the currencies and languages searched to help zero-in on where to target marketing efforts. Members can even screen potential buyers with LuxeIntel and target outreach with lists of potential buyers like CEOs of major corporations and business owners.

Navigating the sale of a luxury property is a sophisticated process. Working with a highly qualified agent to better understand today's affluent consumers and the potential pool of buyers, locally and globally, and partnering to create a well-developed marketing plan and direct course of action is the best bet to successfully market and sell a significant property in today's complicated luxury real estate world.
