Tailgating—what was once merely a chance to gather before the big game—has become a national pastime that rivals the football contest itself. Once relegated to the parking lots near the stadiums, it is now a serious and often sumptuous affair that can range from happening picnic hampers to catered culinary celebrations. Food, beverage, music, and merriment are the order of this first part of any gridiron contest. But there's so much more than making certain the noshing is posh and the potables are potent. Looking good is truly the goal for those who might only be enjoying the pregame festivities or are in it for the long haul of the entire game. It's a time you truly want to be on the Dean's List: the best-dressed list, a phi beta fashionista. And the look is inclusive, with opulent accessories and accouterments, and all the right goodies for gating with style for her and for him.

The look and feel of the 2017 tailgating season is a lux style that transcends merely boasting the proper colors, be it Tulane green, Tiger purple, or Saints gold. No tattered Ts or misshapen sweats. Fans Uptown, Downtown, and in Baton Rouge have a wave of options for stylish attire appropriate for the bleachers or the boxes that can go from tailgate to game to after-party chic.

Kickoff the season by scoring major style points as a fashionable fan.

Mid Century MODERN

BY KATY DANOS

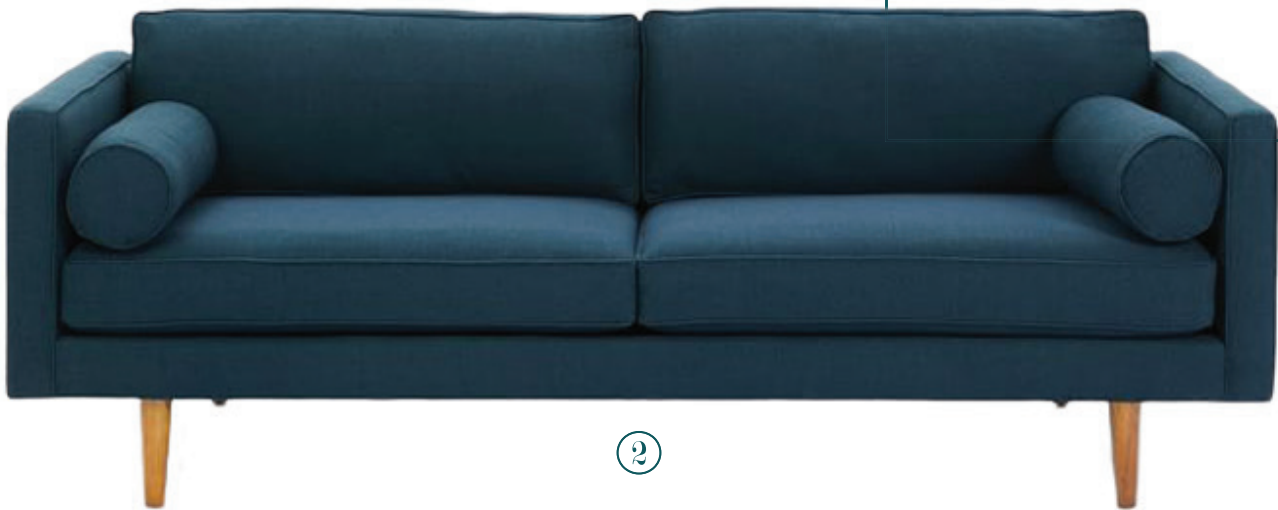

Mid-century modern is the catchall phrase for the decorative style that dominated American design from the 1930's to the 1960's. It's a broad term used for furniture, color trends, and the decorative tastes of a post-war population fueled by optimism, change, and innovation. With a palette of warm wood, burnished brass, and rich strokes of saturated color and a philosophy of form which follows function, the looks have stood the test of time. The design movement peaked in the fifties, but the high quality workmanship and pared down shapes were built to last.

Coquette

CHANGING THE PARADIGM IN CONTEMPORARY SOUTHERN CUISINE

BY KATY DANOS | PHOTOS BY JAMES GAFFNEY

Coquette, housed in an elegant two-story townhouse on Magazine Street in the Garden District, is the kind of restaurant that true foodies love. The menu is not pretentious, the dishes innovative with perfect execution, and the high beam is on the ingredients. In a city known for fantastic food, partners Kristen Essig and Michael Stolfus have gained a loyal following for what they call a food journey. The imaginative menu, which changes several times a week, is fully inspired by locally sourced and seasonal farm-fresh products. It's an ambitious approach for sure, but one that keeps the chefs on their seriously creative toes and delivers quite a food adventure for diners. With a spectacular wine list, impeccable service, and many off-menu nights, it is easy to see why both locals and visitors alike place their trust in these capable hands.

The setting is casual with an authentic New Orleans vibe. Beautiful wood floors, walls of old brick, a pressed tin ceiling, and a chandelier or two deliver just the right amount of old school bling. The gleaming bar seats fourteen and many regulars consider that to be the best perch in the house. Local companies, farms, and growers deliver harvests weekly, Coquette has their own little herb garden, and everything including bread, pickles, and ice creams are house-made. The ingredients are flavorful and almost require no dolling up; but the elevated preparations and lively combinations served are delicious and you will savor every morsel.

Vegetables such as rainbow carrots, napa cabbage, and purple mezuna come from Covey Rise Farms, a fifty acre farm in Husser; Paradigm Gardens, an urban garden in Mid-City; and Pelican Produce, a grower on the edge of the Upper Ninth Ward. With strong relationships between the farmers and the restaurant owners (Kristen was once the market manager of the Crescent City Farmer's Market), everyone wins. The farm is sustainable, talented chefs don't have to look far for special ingredients, and with crop planning meetings chefs know exactly what they will have to work with each month and everything about the quality. This more direct route from farm to fork, with less packaging and less transport, increases profits for everyone involved and the pay-off for the diner is obvious with each and every bite.

Coquette summer desserts like peaches and shiso are made by pastry chef, James Kubie, featuring Alabama peaches, shiso from Paradigm Gardens, and house-made sunflower seed pralines. It bursts with zesty flavor. Okra, a down home favorite from Covey Rise, is charred and treated to a tasty charred corn remoulade and ricotta salata topped with pickled lunchbox peppers; basil from their own garden is freshly picked to order. There is genuine excitement in the kitchen when the Monday deliveries happen. Smoked Catfish Dip is always on the menu, but Chef de Cuisine, Cesar Nunez, changes the variations and garnishes depending on the day's crop. Crates full of dancer eggplant, artisan varieties of squash, and heirloom tomatoes make their way into late summer dishes in all their just-picked glory. Humble lima beans from Covey Rise become aioli served with puffed rice and the catfish dip.

Fresh food sparkles. It has its own energy that inspires the work we love.

PARADIGM GARDENS

A FARM TO FORK
EXPERIENCE

Even the drinks are fully on board the farm-fresh bandwagon. For example, bar manager, Christopher Brian, uses just ripe cantaloupe to create a garden to glass cocktail, the Tequila Daisy. A hint of smoky mezcal is perfect with the juicy goodness of the exuberant melon flavors. And of course, Kristen and Mike eagerly look forward to Fall. "In collaboration with Patois, we've planned crops with Paradigm Gardens; they have their concert series coming up in their outdoor event space; and we can't wait to see the beets, turnips, and radishes," they both explained. "It's going to be a very good season."

MAKED CAST

Many people have bookcase paralysis. They love their sentimental things, have various spots for books throughout their homes, but are stressed by all the seemingly pinterest-perfect examples of "proper" arrangements. Relax and enjoy your stuff. Your books and favorite decorative items can communicate your unique personality and sincere interests in a decorative way. Forget about the rules; with a few pointers, you can organize your bookcases in an intentional manner that leaves plenty of room for new arrivals and lots of room to grow.

Start with a clean empty shelf or two and gather your books, collectibles, and favorite objects. It's called "shop your own house," but remember the lyric "these are a few of my favorite things." The idea is not to fill all the shelves at once with books in rows—that's called a library—but rather to create a gameplan for presenting your authentic style, color loves, and personal vibe. It should never feel finished and it will organically change over time. Clump your books in loose color groups, sort by size, and remove dust jackets if too worn. Don't worry about having enough books. It is better to be spare and collect books in real time. Big coffee table books are a treat and older books can be found at flea markets and tag sales. An insider tip: buy gently used books at a fraction of the cost on amazon.com.

YOUR

THIS FALL

BY KATY DANOS

Anything you love can be an objet d'art. For the collected look, mix found objects, like natural rocks or shells, with beloved acquired treasures, like antique plates and ceramic vases. Boxes are the secret weapon! They fill space in an uncluttered way—you can stash things like passports and spare keys—and they provide a pop of color. Just starting out? Display your wedding china or rummage through your grandparents' attic. Nothing supplies patina and charm better than vintage books, your family reads, or funky old bookends.

Small works of art, a few framed photographs, and even glass bottles or bowls add layers of color and visual interest to your bookcase. Modern and old, valuable and not so—everything will work together if the loot is sincerely yours.

Once you've done the hunting and gathering, you can place groups of books in various ways; start from the middle and branch out. Stack some in color combinations you like and some between bookends that can also act as art objects. Add fun accents and move things around until you find a balance of shape, color, and form. Travel books and even magazines are great beginner ways to fill your shelves and the pros know you can never go wrong with baskets for texture that serve a purpose.

BOURBON HOUSE

▶ 144 Bourbon St

The bourbon boom was years away when Dickie Brennan opened Bourbon House in 2002. Fifteen years later, its early focus on the trending spirit feels prescient. "(Brennan) had this foresight when we envisioned the restaurant originally," said Barry Himel, beverage director for Dickie Brennan Company. "We specialize in bourbon."

The seafood restaurant and whiskey bar recently released its own Maker's Mark bottling. "We custom-made our own bourbon," said bartender Will Fox. "It has a robust flavor. You can taste the French oak in there."

It's amazing, the number of bourbon fanatics that come through the door

-BARRY HIMEL

The unique bottling is one of 230 available whiskeys. About 20 "master tasters" have sampled every bourbon at Bourbon House, and more than 4,000 people are members of Bourbon House's New Orleans Bourbon Society (NOBS). The NOBS is free to join and offers tastings, dinners with master distillers, and complimentary pours for members.

BARREL PROOF

▶ 1201 Magazine St.

When Liam Deegan and Robert Leblanc opened Barrel Proof in 2014, they envisioned it as a neighborhood joint with a laid-back, bourbon-heavy menu.

"(Barrel Proof) features the style of drinking we do when we're hanging out," Deegan said. "Beer and whiskey, mostly shots. We don't drink cocktails, even though we like them a lot."

Located in a dim, cypress-trimmed space that has housed bars for more than a century, Barrel Proof stocks 294 whiskeys. There's a wide array of craft beers and cocktails, plus elevated bar food and rotating pop-ups in the kitchen. However, Deegan said most people come for the Old Fashioned, which costs $3 during happy hour (4 p.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays).

We do it simple and old school. Bitters, a dark sugar, bourbon, good ice and orange peel. I think our Old Fashioned is as classic as possible.

THE TROPICAL OASIS

TIKI TOLTECA

▶ 301 N Peters St.

Though its proximity to the Caribbean and history as a rum mecca make New Orleans a natural fit for tiki bars, the scene lay dormant for decades after Bali Hai shuttered in the mid-1980s. That changed in 2013, when Tiki Tolteca launched.

"(Tiki Tolteca) was the first tiki bar to open since then," said Charles Arinder, director of operations for Felipe's Mexican Taqueria. "The tiki scene had been nonexistent."

Perched above Felipe's Taqueria in the French Quarter, Tiki Tolteca is "literally an oasis," Arinder said. It features a thatch-roofed bamboo bar, tropical floral prints, tiki heads, glowing sea glass orbs and cowhide furniture handmade in Jalisco, Mexico—not to mention the fruity, flower-bedecked cocktails.

"When you give a guest a drink, you can see it's a little bit of a mind-blowing experience," said head bartender Michael Beaugez, who designed or tweaked every drink on the menu.

Tiki Tolteca stocks 120 rums. Every syrup and liqueur is made in house from scratch. From the drinks to the décor, tiki bars are all about a transportive, tropical experience—which may explain their recent renaissance.

Tiki is innately fun

Lamps deliver light, both task and ambient, to every room in the house. They are also an ideal opportunity to illuminate your personality and amplify your decorative style. METALLIC BONDS

Forget the old rules of the past. Mixing silver and gold (or pewter and brass, or rose gold and copper) isn't just acceptable, it's on-trend. Stick to clean lines and classic shapes, and you've got a winning combination.

PLUSH PERFECTION

SIMPLE TWEAKS FOR A BIG TRANSFORMATION

BY KATY DANOS

Toss new accent pillows on your sofa and the vibe in the room changes instantly. You can indulge your current color crush or refresh the pattern play in the room by layering in new textures and prints. In love with a pricey designer fabric or itching to bring some animal print to the party? Pillows are a great way to transform any decor without making a big upholstery commitment. Go for the bold... or the gold!

NAIL IT

THIS SEASON'S POLISHED POINTS

BY MISSY WILKINSON

What happens when luxury design houses meld their venerated senses of color with cutting-edge nail enamel technology? It's simple: long-lasting manicures that look fresh from the runway. Whether you drench your nails in luxe metallics or opulent hues like burgundy, navy blue, or hunter green, you can be sure your manicure is both trending and hi-tech. Dior blends in organic silicon for a high-gloss finish; Gucci includes a triangular bristle brush for precise application; and Chanel enriches its formula with nail-strengthening bioceramics. But perhaps the best thing about test-driving fall color trends via manicures is this: you don't have to wait for a cold snap to indulge in a rich, velvety-dark palette.
