PREFACE

The principal aim in preparing this book has been to give an accurate collection of approved recipes for general purposes. The work is essentially what it claims to be—a Reminder. All historical details have been omitted, and popular and simple descriptions have, wherever possible, been preferred to technical and scientific language. These directions can be relied upon as accurate, as they have been thoroughly examined by your humble servant and practically tested by me and other competent men before being given to the public.

There are many new recipes contained in this book never before published, and all are up-to-date.

You will also find a few blank pages in the back of this book to write in any new concoction that you may learn.

I remain,

Yours respectfully,

JAKE DIDIER:

PREFACE

The principal aim in preparing this book has been to give an account of the collection of important works on general linguistics. It is not intended to be a general survey of the subject, but to give a list of the principal works on the subject, and to give a brief description of each. The book is intended to be a guide to the literature of the subject, and to be useful to those who are interested in the study of language.

There are many new titles contained in this book, and it is hoped that it will be of use to those who are interested in the study of language. It is intended to be a guide to the literature of the subject, and to be useful to those who are interested in the study of language.

I remain,
Yours respectfully,

HINTS

The greatest accomplishment of a bartender lies in catering to the tastes of his customers.

Fancy drinks are generally trimmed with fruits in season. Some persons prefer strained drinks plain with the fruits served on a separate dish. Inquire whether the customer desires his drinks plain or decorated before serving.

Wash ice clean. The ice used for mixed drinks should be perfectly clear, and when broken up should be handled with an ice scoop.

Use cracked ice when drinks are to be stirred and spirits are the principal part of the drink.

Use small lumps of ice in other cases, and remove before serving.

Shake your drink well. Without that you will never get a first-class drink. This has special reference to such drinks as fizzes, milk punches, egg-noggs, frappes and similar drinks containing sugar.

In serving punches, lemonades, cobbler, coolers, juleps and similar drinks to parties of ladies in summer resorts or hotels and cafe, the proper way is to take a small napkin, fold it into a V shape. After the drink is made place it around the glass, pin it and serve. It prevents soiling the gloves when enjoying the above beverages.

Punches, bowls and cups made and served without ice in the punch bowl, may be cooled by taking a metal dish or tub, placing punch bowl inside of this, and fill space between the bowl and dish with fine ice; decorate top outside of bowl with fruit.

Serve champagne very cold—the dry colder than brut.

Whiskey can be served cold, but brandy loses its bouquet if chilled.

Cordial drinks are prepared with great care so as to have each cordial show separately when placed before the customer. Each cordial may be dropped from the end of a spoon to prevent intermingling.

Wines are not alone a mere luxury, but are best known for their fragrance, richness of flavor, and medicinal-tonic properties for invalids, and are excellent for luncheon and dinner purposes, especially wines of the highest merit: fine old Port, Sherry, Burgundies, Clarets, Moselle, Sauternes, Maderia, and pure domestic Wines and Champagnes.

Claret, Burgundy, Sauterne and Bordeaux wines must be handled with great care. They should be kept in a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees in a horizontal position, and in serving them, especially in drawing the cork, shaking of the bottle should be avoided.

Serve Sherry, Maderia and Port wines at 50 to 60 degrees.

Serve cocktails with oysters; sherry with soup; Sauterne, or white wine, with fish; claret, or light red wine, with meat; rich red wine with entrees; champagne before and with dessert; Cognac and cordials with coffee, cigars and cigarettes.

NOTE

On all my recipes for the various drinks you will find the word "drink" used. A drink means a wineglass or jigger full. When measuring the mixture, etc., the proper article to be used is a jigger. A pony means three-fourths of an ounce; one-third, two-thirds, etc., means one-third of the final drink; a dash being no definite measure, I leave it to the mixer's judgment to suit taste.
