4. Everyone feels comfortable. Alex doesn't push people to participate, there are no dirty jokes or old-fashioned humour.
5. Magic has a message. Every small illusion is connected to the topics of team work, understanding, friendship.

Table Magic

Alex does a small show for the guests at each table. He interacts with spectators and shows them incredible magic with everyday objects - coins, rings, playing cards.

Individual approach

Alex has performed for employees, top-managers, CEO's and business owners of different nationalities and backgrounds. He knows how to approach every guest in the audience. If people have a serious conversation, he will not bother them with entertainment. He will perform sophisticated card magic for a poker lover, astonishing mind reading for IT guys and make a 10 Euro note turn into 50 for the finance department.

Magic in spectators' hands

People have great fun watching magic because tricks happen right in front of them. Spectator holds a red card and it changes into black in his own hands. Drawn pictures start to move. Signed card appears in the iPhone screen, coins travel to the spectator's hands, spoons are bent with mind power, paper turns into money. Surprise, astonishment and great memories are guaranteed.

“It was a pleasure having you at our company Christmas party at the O’Reilly’s Irish pub in Frankfurt. You’ve managed to amaze our 80 guests quite a bit with your tricks! We’ve enjoyed your table magic not only because the tricks always worked but also because you’re real professional and a great entertainer personality.”

You come across very likeable and perfectly engage your audience in your show while never being too intrusive. We could wholeheartedly recommend you and please do get in touch should a potential client like to get in touch to hear more about our opinion of your wonderful show!”
